Sensitive teeth can mean significant pain and can affect daily activities such as eating, drinking, and even brushing your teeth. In some cases, the pain and discomfort can even lead to painful dentist office visits or costly dental procedures.

What Causes Sensitive Teeth?

Sensitivity can occur because of loss of enamel, which is the hard outer layer of teeth, and recessed gums. More than 50 percent of adults have gum recession.

Sensitive teeth occur when the underlying layer of your teeth, called dentin, becomes exposed as a result of receding gum tissue. The roots of the teeth, which are not covered by hard enamel, contain tiny tubules leading to the nerve center in your tooth. These tubules, which act like channels, let various stimuli, such as hot or cold foods or beverages, reach the nerve in your tooth, resulting in pain.

How To Reduce Sensitivity

According to public health dentist Dr. Robert Gerlach, there are several steps you can take:

- Maintain good oral hygiene

Follow proper brushing and flossing techniques to thoroughly clean all parts of your teeth and mouth. Make sure to choose floss that is extra soft and eases any difficulty or discomfort you may associate with flossing.

- Watch what you eat

Frequent consumption of acidic foods can gradually dissolve tooth enamel and lead to dentin exposure.

- Use a soft-bristled toothbrush

If you have sensitive gums, try an extra-soft toothbrush and always be sure to brush gently and carefully to prevent damage to teeth and gums.

- Choose the right sensitivity toothpaste

That means no trade-offs when it comes to sensitivity protection and the overall benefits you need for healthy teeth and gums. One, Crest Pro-Health Sensitive Shield, not only relieves tooth sensitivity but also protects all these areas dentists check most: cavities, gingivitis, plaque, tartar, sensitivity, whitening and fresh breath.

- Visit your dentist every six months for professional cleanings and oral exams.

Early Detection Key To Managing Age-Related Macular Degeneration

(NAPSA)-Seeing an eye doctor regularly can help you keep seeing well as you get older. One reason is age-related macular degeneration (AMD), a chronic condition that causes central vision loss, affects millions of Americans and is the leading cause of blindness in adults 60 and older.

Early detection is key to avoiding vision loss.

AMD occurs when the macula, the central portion of the retina that is important for reading and color vision, becomes damaged. AMD is a single disease, but it can take two different forms: dry and wet. Wet AMD is the more serious form, with more than 200,000 people in the United States diagnosed every year. Without treatment, patients can lose their central vision over time, leaving only peripheral, or side, vision. Symptoms include wavy lines, hazy vision and blurriness. An eye exam is crucial if you experience any of these symptoms, as an early diagnosis is vital to maintain healthy eyes. If you are diagnosed with wet AMD, it's important to see a retina specialist for the most appropriate care.

The exact cause of AMD is not known but a number of risk factors may play a role. These include: high blood pressure, high cholesterol, obesity and smoking. Risks that cannot be controlled include: age, family history, gender and race (AMD is more common in women and Caucasian people).

Managing AMD and Low Vision

Low-vision tools and resources are available and can help those affected by this disease maintain independence and preserve quality of life. For example:

- A downloadable magnifier tool allows you to enlarge any part of your screen by rolling over it with your mouse. It will work with any Web site or application on your computer.

- Use a stand magnifier to help with reading, writing, knitting or any other similar project.

- Look for large-print books and publications.

- Get large-print checks and billing statements.

- Talk to a low-vision specialist about other low-vision devices.

pauses when there is no breathing, adrenal gland tumors, Cushing's syndrome, narrowed kidney arteries and rare tumors such as pheochromocytoma are cases in point.

Go over your medicines. Some medicines raise pressure. Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs are an example - Aleve, Advil, Motrin, aspirin and other NSAIDs. Don't drink more than two alcohol drinks a day.

More than 30 blood pressure medicines are on the market. I bet you haven't tried all 30 or combinations of them. Some brands come with two medicines in one pill, easing the burden of pill-taking. A new medicine, one completely different from all other medicines, is now available. It is Tekturna. Something must be done for your pressure.

The booklet on high blood pressure gives the story of this very common malady. To receive a copy, write: Dr. Donohue - No. 104W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When I walk upstairs, my knees make noises. They sound like bowls of Rice Krispies, snapping, crackling and popping. My wife thinks this has to be a sign of serious trouble. I have no pain. My knees are not stiff. I play 18 holes of golf three times a week. Should I make a big deal of this? - R.K.

ANSWER: If your knees are not bothering you, then knee noises usually do not indicate any serious problems. Tendons gliding over bones make snapping noises. So do bursting air bubbles in joint fluid.

No, you don't need to make a big deal of this.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Blood Pressure
That Won't Budge

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I've had severe high blood pressure for many years. I have tried all the medicines you can think of. I am 62 and have had one ministroke. I'm not looking for another. I used to weigh 235 pounds. I lost 100 pounds. I watch my salt. I have tried everything. My family has a history of high blood pressure. Can you recommend anything? - F.

ANSWER: Blood pressure that doesn't drop by making life changes (weight loss and diet) or by taking three or four blood pressure medicines is called resistant high blood pressure (hypertension). Your weight loss is admirable. It should have reduced your pressure.

Watching your salt intake is also important. That entails more than not using the salt shaker. It requires you to carefully look for the salt content (listed as sodium or sodium chloride) of all your foods. Commercial soups, frozen dinners, many canned goods and luncheon meats often have a high salt content. Your diet should be one of fruits, vegetables, whole grains (unrefined wheat, barley, rye and oats) and one where meat and fats are eaten sparingly.

Increase foods with lots of potassium in them: tomatoes, potatoes, prunes, lima beans, kidney beans, navy beans, bananas, oranges and orange juice, spinach, peaches, cantaloupe and broccoli. Potassium lowers blood pressure.

Exercise for 30 minutes every day. Get your doctor's approval first, and start out modestly. Brisk walking is fine.

For resistant high blood pressure, your doctor has to look for the less-common causes of it. Sleep apnea (loud snoring with

OUT OF THE ROTATION

There are instances in which a permanent tooth will be rotated on its axis so that it isn't aligned properly with either adjacent or opposing teeth. As a result of its twisted orientation, the rotated tooth creates a space on both of its sides where it should otherwise stand shoulder-to-shoulder with the teeth next to it. In cases where the rotation is not too extreme, the dentist can augment the rotated tooth with color-matching bonding material. This composite restoration is undertaken in an incremental manner to slowly fill in gaps and built up the tooth in areas where it is needed. All the while, care must be taken to ensure correct tooth dimension and attain the desired aesthetic result.

Rotating teeth, teeth that are twisted and facing sideways, can not only ruin your smile but also complicate chewing. Ask us about procedures that can reposition your tooth into a straight smile. We can perform many procedures to enhance your smile, your self-esteem, and your personal success. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for experienced and comprehensive dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we provide the very best care with state-of-the-art technology. If you don't have a dentist at this time, we're currently accepting new patients. PLEASE DON'T REMAIN SEATED

When and how back pain manifests itself can provide important clues about its origins. For instance, back pain that is worse at a certain time (such as on a weekday after working at a desk versus on the weekend) may be the result of poor work ergonomics. The poor seating support provided by an office chair can cause pain that starts at the neck and radiates down to the upper and lower back and extremities. As muscles tire, poor posture increases, putting added pressure on the neck and back. For a more relaxed posture, it is necessary to change positions frequently or, better yet, get up and walk around. Desk-bound workers should take a two-minute break every half hour.

Because there are a variety of causes of back pain, it's vital to know the exact cause of your pain, and at the FAMILY PRACTICE

OF CHIROPRACTIC we will help figure that out. Chiropractic adjustments restore normal communication between the brain and body by reducing and eliminating pressure on the nerves that the spinal column protects. Our experience and expertise in safe and gentle chiropractic care will help you enjoy life to the fullest. Are you suffering discomforts? Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. If your problem is a chiropractic condition, we can offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The chiropractor can help remedy back pain stemming from poor chair ergonomics at work by adjusting the existing chair and offering suggestions about replacement chairs that provide better support.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Thomas Jefferson once said: "When angry, count ten before you speak, if very angry, a hundred."

Anger can be a helpful endowment if it is kept under control. Without it injustices in life would be allowed to pass by without either protest or understanding.

But anger can be tricky. It can easily get out of hand ... When it becomes a burning rage, it becomes a distinct liability and can become troublesome and dangerous.

One cannot imagine life on this planet without fire. Yet fire, when it gets out of hand, is ravaging beyond description. Anger, like fire, can get out of hand and be ravaging too.

A person who lets anger get out of control needs to call upon as many 'fire departments' he can to help him get the burning rage under control.

Anger properly controlled can be good, but anger, like fire, can destroy. Anger may be a necessary factor of life, but it performs only under strict control. Remember, anger is often more harmful than the injury that caused it!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You still might have to deal with some lingering confusion that marked a recent workplace situation. But for the most part, you should now be well on your way to your next project.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new commitment might demand more time than you'd expected to have to give it. But rely on that special Bovine gift for patience, and stick with it. You'll be glad you did.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're earning the admiration of a lot of people who like the way you handle yourself when your views are on the line. Even one or two of your detractors are being won over.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking your responsibilities seriously is what you do. But ease up on the pressure gauge and make time for much needed R & R. Start by making this weekend a "just for fun" time zone.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some recently uncovered information might make a change of plans inevitable. If so, deal with it as quickly as possible, and then find out what went wrong and why. What you learn might surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Aspects favor moving carefully and deliberately when making any significant changes. Could be there are more facts you need to know, which you might overlook if you rush things.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A problem neighbor might be looking to goad you into an action you don't want to take. Ask someone you both respect if he or she would act as an impartial arbitrator for both of you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A recent workplace accomplishment hasn't been overlooked by those who watch these things. Meanwhile, start making travel plans for that much-too-long-deferred trip with someone special.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Those money matters continue to move in your favor. Now would be a good time to start putting some money back into the house, both for esthetic as well as economic reasons.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A changing workplace environment can create job pressures. But, once again, follow the example of your birth sign and take things a step at a time, like the sure-footed Goat you are.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Cheer up. You could soon have the funds you need for your worthy project. Your generous gifts of time and effort are well known, and someone might decide it's time to join with you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your inner scam-catcher is right on target, and you're absolutely right to reject that "too-good-to-be-true" offer. Meanwhile, something positive should be making its way to you.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are generous, and also sympathetic to people who find they need the help of others.

Library 'Struggling To Maintain Services' But Branches To Stay Open

operating on a $38 million budget, Quincy's library operates on a shoestring budget of $2.2 million budget, according to city records. Boston, also, operates 22 branches while Quincy has three.

The library's current operating budget is actually ten percent or $281,000 lower than in 2009.

"We will end the year in the black, but by the skin of our teeth," McLaughlin told the Finance Committee last week during the pre-budget hearing called by Chairman John Keenan.

"We're struggling to maintain our services," McLaughlin said, adding, "We have eliminated Sundays."

However, the library has a popular website and registered over 15 million hits in the past year, breaking another record for the Quincy system. That's 2.2 million hits more than in 2008 and more than twice the 6.7 million hits in 2005.

"We, like other libraries, are experiencing a huge upsurge," McLaughlin said of the growth of library use.

Not only is the main library doing well, but so too are the local branches which will be kept open for the foreseeable future, according to McLaughlin.

"The trustees have made a very firm commitment to the branches," said McLaughlin who described the loyalty of residents of all ages to the local branches located in North Quincy, Wollaston and Adams Shore.

According to McLaughlin's statistics, the North Quincy branch use increased significantly with an additional 1525 visitors and an additional 27,865 computer sessions.

Overall, the libraries reported 718,813 items borrowed, 9053 computer users on a weekly basis and 19,519 persons attending the library's special programs.

Visitors to the Wollaston branch also increased by over 300, but visitors to the Adams Shore branch visitors declined by 246.

Local residents called, wrote and there were "a lot of kids signing petitions," to head off the branch closures, McLaughlin told the Finance Committee last week.

During the committee session, councillors repeatedly praised McLaughlin's accomplishments and those of the staff with Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro calling the Quincy system "extraordinary by any standard," Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest describing the library's databases as a tremendous asset. Keenan called the Thomas Crane Library "the jewel of the South Shore. It's just unmatched."

"I think we have the best library on the South Shore," said Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci who confessed to having an overdue library book in his briefcase.

Deal For BJs Building Improvements

City officials and executives for BJs Wholesale Club have reached a formal agreement that will allow the store to open on schedule this spring but requires the company to make substantial upgrades to the South Quincy building and property.

Under the agreement, the city will not issue BJs a full occupancy permit until a series of aesthetic improvements outlined in a Planning Board permit last year are completed, including façade upgrades, new awnings and an overhauled landscaping plan, officials said.

The improvements are likely to take at least several months, and the new legal agreement will allow the city to grant the store a temporary occupancy permit that will allow it to open on its own timeframe. The city will maintain its authority to deny a full occupancy permit until the renovations are finished, officials said.

The formal agreement follows meetings between Mayor Thomas Koch's legal and inspection team and BJs officials. Solicitor James Timms was to discuss the agreement at Tuesday night's City Council meeting.

"We sat down together and worked out a fair solution that protects the city's interests but provides BJs with the flexibility it needs to open the store," Koch said. "We appreciate the work that BJs officials did to rectify our very real and very legitimate issues with the developer of the project."

The BJs development sparked outcry when city inspectors and city councillors questioned whether the structure at the entrance to Crown Colony office park was built in accordance with promises made by the developer, Michael DiGuiseppe, during the months of hearings at the council and planning board last year.

Tom Henshaw: A Newspaper Icon

By JOE REARDON

As a young boy growing up in Braintree, Paul Champagne remembers Tom Henshaw as a kind, brilliant man with an unmatched, razor-sharp wit. Champagne said he was always made to feel at ease in the Henshaw household and felt as though he was part of the family.

A lifelong friend of Ian Henshaw, Tom's son, Champagne always called the local newspaper icon "Mr. Henshaw," because that's simply how it was.

Champagne's respect for The Quincy Sun reporter was enormous. Referring to him as anything but "Mr. Henshaw" wouldn't have felt right, not even as a father in his 40s.

Henshaw passed away on the morning of April 21 at home. He was 85 years old.

"He was a great guy," said Champagne of the

Mayor's Budget Goes To Council Monday

Koch: No Increase In Property Tax Levy

The City budget that Mayor Thomas Koch is set to propose next week will not raise property taxes on existing homes and businesses for the second straight year in an effort to pull Quincy through the worst economic crisis in more than a generation, the Mayor announced today.

Koch said the City's total anticipated property tax levy will be $172.6 million, with the only increase a $2.7 million projection for new growth, which accounts for new business development, construction and home renovations and additions.

Financial Reports

"Families across Quincy are struggling, we recognize that, and we are going to do everything in our power to help our homeowners and our community get through this crisis," Koch said. "It will be a very difficult budget that we believe will protect core services but recognizes that we simply cannot afford to do business the way we have in the past."

While the total tax levy will not be raised, Municipal Finance Director Nicholas Puleo said tax bills for individual property owners will be calculated when the tax rate is set in November. Fluctuations in home values controlled by state law and changes in how the tax base is split between businesses and residential properties will dictate individual tax bills for homeowners.

"While we cannot control valuations or the breakdown between business and residential properties, we can control spending, and our budget will not raise property taxes a dime beyond our new growth," Koch said.

Cleaner, Greener Quincy Clean-up Set For Saturday

The 21st annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy citywide cleanup day will take place Saturday, May 1st from 9 a.m. to noon.

The cleanup is devoted to sprucing up the city's beaches, marshes, parks, schools and open space areas.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch noted the significant impact this one-day event makes on the city's overall appearance and encourages residents to pitch in and join the ceremonial kick-off to the city's beautification efforts.

"Cleaner, Greener Quincy is a unique day as so many people come together to make a difference in this community," Koch said.

Clean-up Sites By Ward — Page 32 —

"It is a chance for families to spend time together, neighbors to get to know each other, and residents from across the city to make a positive impact in their own neighborhood."

To date, residents, youth groups and local businesses have targeted approximately 40 sites to clean and beautify. Those wishing to participate in the event can select a cleanup site in their neighborhood to join (see site listing by ward on Page 32 of this issue of The Quincy Sun) or contact the Park Department before Friday to designate a cleanup site. The Park Department will provide rakes, gloves, bags, shovels and other tools for volunteer use.

Following the cleanup, Koch will host an appreciation barbecue sponsored by Hannaford Supermarket from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. for all volunteers at Pageant Field.

All volunteers will also receive a Cleaner, Greener Quincy t-shirt.

Individuals who would like to volunteer or have questions about the event may also contact the Park Department at (617) 376-1251 or email jconso@quincyma.gov.

West Squantum Street Bridge Ramp Closed Until August

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation closed the Newport Avenue northbound off-ramp to West Squantum Street in Quincy April 24 through August.

In addition to the ramp closure, the section of West Squantum Street between Holmes Street and Arlington Street will be reduced to a single lane in each direction to allow for bridge reconstruction work.

The lane reduction will remain in place until October.

Drivers traveling northbound on Newport Avenue toward West Squantum

The project is part of MassDOT's Accelerated Bridge Program and is in the first of three phases.

At Horse, Dog Racing Tracks Casinos, Slots Gain Support Here

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy's State House delegation joined their colleagues last week in approving two resort casinos and slot machines in present and former horse and dog racing tracks in Massachusetts.

But don't expect to roll the bones or feed the one armed bandit soon. The idea still has to be scrutinized by the State Senate and that body is known to be cool to the plan.

"I wanted a jobs bill and a revenue bill," said Rep. Steve Tobin. "This seemed to be it."

Supporters of the bill said the 750 slot machines at the tracks would generate up to 15,000 jobs and add $400 to $500 million to the revenue stream. The bill passed, 120 to 37.

The slot machines would be allowed only at Suffolk Downs in East Boston, Plainridge in Plainville, Wonderland in Revere and Raynham. An amendment permitting open bidding was rejected.

So were amendments banning casino employees from working for the State Gambling Commission; requiring health insurance plans to cover pathological gambling; capping the salary of the game commissioner at $125,000;

Also a "gamblers' bill of rights" requiring the presence of a state health official to intervene with a customer gambling for more than 12 straight hours and limiting losses to $500 a day; and requiring gambling area to have clock and refrain from pumping in extra oxygen.

"The committee gave this bill over a year of study," said Rep. Ron Mariano. "I'm not going to vote for something that was brought up at the last minute."

Railway Clean-up Saturday

Volunteers from the friends of Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum will target a section of the historic Granite Railway for cleanup May 1 as part of the city's Clean Up Green Up program.

The project scheduled Saturday, May 1, from 9 a.m. to noon will focus on the Inclined Plane Railway, a section of the first commercial railroad in America. The site is located at the end of Mullin Avenue, West Quincy.

Volunteers will not only spruce up the area, but also learn about the history of the historic railroad. They will be given gloves, rakes and bags supplied by Cleaner Greener Quincy and specialty tools donated by Home Depot for the rails.

The morning clean up will be followed by a cook-out at Pageant Field at 12:30 sponsored by the City of Quincy. For more information, call 617-472-1322.

Animal Shelter Director To Speak At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting

The Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association will meet Thursday, May 6 at 7:30 p.m. at The Church of the Good Shepherd, corner of Harvard and West Squantum Streets.

Guest speaker will be Sandra Morse, director of the Quincy Animal Shelter.

She will discuss the 10-year history of the organization and its ongoing mission of caring for Quincy's homeless animal population while they await for a forever home.

The MWNA encourages people to bring a donation of canned dog, cat or kitten food. Donations of old linens or towels and cleaning products are also welcomed.

All meetings are open to the public.

GOOD AS GOLD

If you are wondering how good an investment gold jewelry is, simply take a look at how this precious metal has appreciated in value over the past few years. The fact is that gold is eternal in both value and beauty. However, not all gold jewelry is pure gold, or 24-karat. Pieces of pure gold are too soft for everyday wear, and jewelers are more likely to work with 18K or 14K gold.
Eighteen-karat gold contains 18 parts gold and 6 parts of one or more additional metals, making it 75% pure gold. For its part, 14K gold is 14 parts gold and 10 parts other metals, which yields gold that is 58.3% pure.

Twelve-karat gold is 50% gold.

Few investments compare to the beauty of gold. It's naturally intense color and distinctive luster combine to give this precious metal its unique and Fire, Police Chief Commend Fallon's Service Committee: Ambulance Contract Costly, Obsolete

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Residents are getting top-notch response to medical emergencies but it's costing the city over $1.6 million a year acting as the middle man for a private company, according to testimony Monday at the Public Safety Committee meeting.

The committee chaired by Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci dusted off the city's contract with Fallon Ambulance Co., found it hadn't been revisited in 14 years, contains long-obsolete directives, and no cash compensation to the city.

"The city has changed and the contract hasn't," Palmucci said as he opened the session, stressing that the review was not intended "to question their services or run them out of town."

In fact, speaker after speaker, including the fire chief and police chief, praised the speedy response and professionalism provided by Fallon's Ambulance Service whose staffers have responded to the city's fires and medical emergencies for more than a decade.

The ambulance contract has been automatically renewed on a year-to-year basis since 1996 and, unless renewed, will expire in July.

However, councillors, also, noted that the company has exclusive rights to transport medical emergencies within the city at a high cost to taxpayers and, likely, a hefty profit for the company.

According to Police Chief Paul Keenan, there were approximately 66,000 calls to 911 in 2009 and of that number, 11,000 calls were medical emergencies requiring police, fire and ambulance response.

Roughly 3400 calls involved non-transport, but the balance of the 11,000 calls required one or more ambulances from Fallon.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi originally sought the review of ambulance services and costs in 2009 and revived that resolution in 2010.

Like most speakers, Raymondi praised Fallon's staff and response, "I have the highest regard for this company."

However, Raymondi and other committee members want change.

In his resolution, Raymondi stated that "city employees at taxpayers' expense are acting as a referral service for the private ambulance company with no compensation from the company to the City of Quincy to cover the costs of the services."

"They have a monopoly on that revenue," Raymondi said Monday referring to the thousands of annual calls that could involve one or more ambulances and subsequent payments.

In his resolution and, again Monday, Raymondi cited the city of Haverhill, which has negotiated a $50,000 annual payment from its ambulance provider. He questioned whether

Historic John Quincy Adams Letter Preserved

Mayor Thomas Koch and City Clerk Joseph Shea announced Tuesday that the original hand-written letter authored by President John Quincy Adams, just two months after the death of his father and discovered recently in the basement of City Hall, is now safely in the hands of a Vermont-based preservationist.

Shea, the City's official keeper of records, turned over the letter to Brown's River Marotti Company of Essex, Vermont, which he said has extensive experience in preserving historic documents and has worked to protect and restore a number of historic records for the City previously.

"This letter is a treasure, and incredibly important to Quincy's history as a community, and we decided that the first thing that needs to be done is ensure that it is preserved and protected for future generations," Koch said, adding that future public displays of the letter and digital imprints of the original will be worked out in coming months.

Shea said he expects Brown's River to extract the Adams letter from the large volume of City records dating to the early 19th century in which it was found, and carefully remove adhesives used to place it in that bound volume. The letter will then go through a full preservation process, Shea said.

"This is a very reputable firm, and they have done great work for the City on previous preservation projects," said Shea. "I know we are looking forward to getting that letter returned to us in a preserved state."

The letter, dated September 8, 1826, was penned just months after the death of John Quincy Adams' father, former President John Adams, and lays out in detail the then-President's wishes for the permanent burial of his father's at the First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

"I have considered it a duty developing upon me to erect a plain and modest monument to his memory; and my wish is that divested of all ostentation it may yet be as durable as the walls of the Temple to the erection of which he has contributed," John Quincy Adams states in the letter.

"I have many reasons for desiring that this may be undertaken without delay and among the rest that both my parents may not remain for an indefinite time without a stone to tell where they lie," he continued.

The Church, where Adams, Abigail Adams and John Quincy Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams remain buried today, followed the instructions in the letter. The temple is now a national historic landmark.

Tom Henshaw: Our 'Go-To Guy'

The Quincy Sun family won't be the same.

And neither will this newspaper.

Tom Henshaw, who died April 21, was a big part of The Quincy Sun. He was a workhorse in the Sun newsroom for the better half of this newspaper's 42-year publishing history. So many issues of The Sun are dotted with his by-line; and this newspaper's years of success can be directly traced to his dedication.

Tom first joined the staff as a news writer/reporter in 1975 and for the next 10 years he became the key cog in the newsroom. He quickly earned a reputation for fairness and integrity -- the highest compliments in journalism.

At that time, then Publisher and longtime good friend Henry Bosworth said, "Tom's one of the best writers to come out of Quincy. He can take the most difficult story and make it easy, interesting reading."

"He can write under pressure. Deadlines don't faze him. He gets his facts straight and doesn't let his personal feelings get in the way."

Fortunately, Tom's departure in 1985 wasn't the end of the road for us. He returned to the Sun after "retiring" from his other post. It was like the old days again and the Sun was better because Tom was back where he belonged: at his old desk, writing fresh copy.

And, he was here for us until the very end.

Only hours before he passed away last Wednesday, Tom filed his last story. The article, with his byline, appears in this week's issue.

Over the last 9 or 10 months, health issues had forced Tom to work from home. The office wasn't the same without him. But fortunately the newspaper side of things was business as usual. He made his phone calls from home and e-mailed his stories.

He wanted to keep writing. "Keep me busy," he'd tell me during our weekly conversations.

Those words were music to my ears.

With Tom I knew exactly what I was getting: solid, unbiased news writing. But he was also versatile. He could take a 5-minute phone conversation with a city official or some other source and create a 500-word story in plain language with a point. He could grasp any topic and make sense of it all.

He interviewed Presidential candidates, governors, senators, congressmen, local legislators, mayors, city councilors and any other newsmaker. Tom could come up with his own questions, find a new angle, and write a fresh news story that was informative, accurate and interesting.

He was, in short, the Sun's "go-to-guy."

If you needed a story, under deadline pressure, he came through. He was like the Larry Bird of the newsroom. Need a last minute point to win a game? Tom was the guy you wanted with the ball. He'd make that basket, and make that deadline.

One shining example of his dedication here was the week of the Blizzard of 1978. The storm started on a Monday and by Tuesday it was still wreaking havoc with heavy snow and tidal surges throughout the area.

The Sun did not escape the storm's fury.

In fact, there's only been one week that The Sun has been delayed in publishing over the last 42-plus years. That was the week of the Blizzard. The storm kept the staff at home on Tuesday, the day the paper goes to press.

But on Wednesday of that week, essential staff -- notably Tom -- managed to make it into the Sun. And it was Tom who wrote the lead story for that issue under the headline "Please, No More."

We went to press only one day late, quite a feat for a

TOM HENSHAW (center) with Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth interview former Alabama Gov. George Wallace during his fourth run for President in 1976. weekly newspaper.

Tom was also the backbone of the Sun's Historic Quincy supplement. He had a penchant for writing about local history, from the Adamses and Hancocks to the shipbuilding and granite industries. Before his death, he wrote new copy for this year's supplement that will be published next month.

If you needed a historical fact, the result of a local election, or the name of somebody, Tom was the "go-to-guy." He was Google long before the Internet.

Tom was also a "go-to-guy" for another reason.

When I was a young boy Tom was working at the Sun but also covering the Boston Bruins for the Associated Press. He had a connection for Bruins tickets. He was like Willie Wonka but instead of a golden ticket, he had Black and Gold tickets for professional hockey in Boston. My Dad and I went to a few games together, including the first game back to Boston for Phil Esposito after he was traded to the New York Rangers. Phil celebrated his "homecoming" by scoring four goals against his former team.

But the biggest example of his reliability and professionalism came after my father passed away 14 months ago. In assigning a tribute story focusing on Henry's life as this paper's founder and publisher, I didn't hesitate to give Tom that story. I knew he would do his best.

Which is exactly what he did. He came in that Monday morning after Henry's passing, began dialing phone numbers of key community figures for their tributes to Henry and wrote the lead story for that issue under the headline "Henry Bosworth Loved Quincy." I don't think he looked up from his keyboard all afternoon. He was saddened and in shock but he persevered under very trying circumstances.

Tom and Henry were veteran newspapermen with a mutual respect for one another.

But they were also very good friends.

On so many occasions, after deadline, Henry would take a seat next to Tom and they would talk about the good old days.

"Hey, do you remember so and so and when such and such happened," Henry would ask.

And Tom would answer, "Oh sure. I also remember when..."

It wouldn't be long before the two of them would be laughing over some hilarious anecdote from days gone by.

But what we'll all miss is Tom's office presence, his wit and his sense of humor. Anyone who knew Tom knows exactly what I'm talking about.

Years ago, Henry wrote about his favorite stories about Tom. Here it is in Henry's words:

"One of Tom's favorite stories is about the time a newscarrier called The Quincy Sun and told him that he wanted to give up his route."

Tom's reply was "You can't." There was a moment of stunned silence as the newscarrier contemplated a lifetime commitment to The Sun.

That was Tom. He could crack a joke and make us smile in any circumstance.

We are so blessed to have known Tom Henshaw -- the "go-to-guy."

We are forever grateful for his dedication to this newspaper.

Our "Go-to Guy" is gone.

Scenes From Yesterday

Quincy, Mass. Thomas Crane Library

THIS PICTURESQUE POSTCARD mailed 100 hundred years ago in 1910 is a tree-framed view of the original building of the Thomas Crane Library on Washington Street in Quincy Square. The library was dedicated in 1882 as a memorial to Thomas Crane, a Quincy granite stonecutter who as a young man moved to New York and made a fortune in real estate. This building was funded through an endowment established by his son, Albert, who along with Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the board and of the Town of Quincy's Library Trustees, enlisted Henry Hobson Richardson to design it. Known today as the Richardson Building, it is considered by many as a masterpiece creation of Richardson, who is one of America's most famous architects. In 1908, the Crane family endowment was also used to build the

Aiken ell, an addition in the back of the library, and later used to finance a little more than half the cost of the 1939 Colleti addition that is now to the right of this building. The remaining cost of the Colleti addition was paid with the U.S. Public Works Administration "stimulus" funds. The Crane endowment, albeit a token amount, also helped kick off funding for the $16 million renovation, restoration and James A. Sheets addition to the library in 2001, by architect Richard Bertman of CBT, Inc. Just for comparison, it's interesting to note that the Richardson building cost less than $20,000 when it was built. Thank You, Quincy DPW Workers For Flood Response

I wanted to take this opportunity to thank the men and women of Quincy's department of public works for their tremendous efforts during the flood disaster last month.

The residents of West Quincy were faced with significant difficulties due to the record breaking rainfall.

For days people watched in horror as water levels rose past their basements and into their first floor living areas, causing thousands of dollars in damage and loss of priceless family keepsakes. Throughout the duration of the ordeal, I saw DPW crews twenty-four hours a day, fighting the water side by side with homeowners as they struggled against mother nature's fury. Faced with an unprecedented flood and demand for services, their efforts to respond to every call for help and professionalism all the way through was admirable.

The men and women of the DPW were personally invested in their efforts to assist residents and it showed. On behalf of myself and the residents of West Quincy, I offer my most sincere and deepest gratitude for the dedication shown during the floods by the DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville, and his entire team.

King Covers 1,500 Miles To Win School Seat

By FRANK McCAULEY

The newest member of the Quincy School Committee took the long road to win her seat.

Margaret "Peggy" King drove 1,500 miles in three days to put herself in nomination at the Joint Convention of the School Committee and City Council.

King was elected on the first ballot, receiving 10 of 14 votes and will replace Mary Collins who retired two weeks ago. She was the runner-up in last fall's School Committee election in which she finished fourth behind Daniel Raymondi, Steve Durkin, and Linda Stice.

King has a winter home in St. Petersburg, Florida. She made the long drive back to Quincy, arriving just a few hours before the Joint Convention.

NO TUITION CHANGE AT QUINCY COLLEGE

Quincy College does not plan to raise tuition for the fourth consecutive year, President O. Clayton Johnson announced.

"We have just submitted our third consecutive annual budget plan that does not raise tuition or fees," he said. After becoming financially independent, tuition and fees have increased less than 15% on average since 1984.

Johnson attributes this operational success to "good marketing, expanded recruitment, creative programming, and operational efficiency."

Quincy College now enrolls over 3,500 students, day and evening, at two campuses and several other sites.

EXPANDING RECYCLING PROGRAM ALSO MAKES GOOD FISCAL SENSE

In a Letter to the Editor, Douglas Gutro of the Quincy Recycling Committee noted that Quincy has the opportunity during the next few months to make decisions that will provide tremendous economic and environmental benefits to all Quincy residents. Mr. Gutro notes, "By expanding the recycling program to include additional items, the city will ship less wastes to regional facilities and save scarce dollars."

Quincy Attorney Celebrates Release Of Second Novel

Quincy attorney Raffi Yessayan recently greeted a crowd of more than 100 fans at Borders Books in Braintree as he celebrated the book launch of his second novel, 2 in the Hat.

In writing his crime thrillers, Yessayan has drawn on his experience both as a prosecutor and criminal defense attorney to reveal to his readers a side of Boston only seen by cops, prosecutors and the criminals they try to capture.

Yessayan, who grew up in Boston and went to college and law school in the city, never imagined he would publish a novel, let alone two. He had spent more than ten years as a prosecutor in the Suffolk County DAs Office—eventually becoming the chief of the gang unit—before he opened his own law practice in Quincy at the beginning of 2007. What no one knew at the time was that Yessayan had been spending nights and weekends writing a novel. Less than a month after opening his new law practice, he sold his first novel, 8 in the Box, to Random House as part of a two book deal.

"It really was an exciting time in my life," Yessayan recalled. "I could never have imagined hanging a shingle for a law practice at the same time I was editing my first novel and beginning an outline for a sequel. Now I'm in the midst of a more exciting time with 8 in the Box just out in paperback and 2 in the Hat being released in hardcover."

After a ceremony in Fontbonne Academy's Auditorium, the crowd gathered in the new Sister M. Flavia Library for the dedication and plaque hanging and then enjoyed a reception in the Foyer. 'A Look At Quincy - 1865-1915' Topic Tonight At Historical Society

Quincy Historical Society executive director Edward Fitzgerald will present "A Look at Quincy, 1865-1915," an illustrated talk and display, at the next meeting of Quincy Historical Society, tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

The April 29 program is intended as a companion to the Historical Society's upcoming Annual Meeting program, on May 17, at which best-selling author Stephen Puleo will discuss his new book, A City So Grand, Boston 1850-1900.

For "A Look at Quincy, 1865-1915," Dr. Fitzgerald will draw upon the Historical Society's extensive collection of photographs and artifacts to present an array of images and to display objects from the period.

"The years from 1865 to 1915 are in many respects a 'lost' period in Quincy history," Fitzgerald said. "They receive less attention than the earlier eras of John Adams and John Quincy Adams and the opening of the quarries and less attention than the later eras of Howard Johnson and the shipbuilding of World War II. Yet it's during this half century that many aspects of the Quincy we live in took shape."

Among the topics the program will look at are the aftermath of the Civil War, the changing nature of the Granite industry, the beginning of the Fore River shipyard, the establishment of cultural institutions like the Thomas Crane Library, the change from town to city government, and the transforming waves of European immigration.

The public is welcome to attend this free program.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Eggless, Milkless Dark Chocolate Cake

Whenever our family gets together, we almost always make a pastry recipe from my mother's cookbook. And one of the most popular one is eggless, milk less chocolate cake.

And it is a real delicious dense dark chocolate cake. In addition to today's recipe for the cake, especially if you like a cream frosting, the recipe for the frosting is the creamiest.

EGGLESS, MILKLESS CHOCOLATE CAKE

¼ cup cocoa (unsweetened)
1-cup sugar
1-teaspoon vanilla
1-½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 cups
1 teaspoons white vinegar

½ cup vegetable oil
1-cup cold water

Blend together the vegetable oil, flour, sugar, salt, soda and cocoa. Add the rest of the ingredients until well beaten. About two minutes.

Bake in a 350-degree oven for 35 minutes.

CREAMY FROSTING

1 stick unsalted butter, softened
2 cups confectioners' sugar
8 ounces of cream cheese (softened)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract

In a large bowl, beat butter and sugar together on medium-high until blended. Add the cream cheese and vanilla and beat until no lumps remain, and frost the cake when cooled.

ENC Choral Union Free Performance Of Haydn's 'The Creation' May 9

The Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union will present a free performance of Haydn's The Creation at 3 p.m. Sunday May 9 at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, located adjacent to the ENC campus in Wollaston. All are invited to attend.

Comprised of ENC students and members of the community, the Choral Union will perform along with soloists Jean Danton (soprano), Jason McStoots (tenor) and Donald Wilkinson (bass) under the direction of ENC professor and composer Delvyn Case. The Quincy Bay Chamber Orchestra will also perform at the concert, which is being presented as part of ENC's ongoing Musica Eclectica concert series.

For more than 75 years, the Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union has performed two major masterworks of the choral literature each concert season. In the fall, the Choral Union prepares its annual presentation of Handel's Messiah for a free concert offered as a holiday gift to the city of Quincy. In the spring, the Choral Union performs a different piece each year. Past repertoire has included the Requiems of Brahms, Mozart, and Faure; Mendelssohn's Elijah, and choral masterworks by Bach, Haydn, Beethoven and other composers.

Quincy Students Gain Financial Literacy At 'Credit for Life' Fair

Nearly 200 business and technology students from Quincy and North Quincy High School recently participated in the 2nd annual "Credit for Life" fair held in the Quincy Marriott ballroom.

The "Credit For Life" Fair provided high school seniors with the ability to be independent adult consumers and have the knowledge of personal finance to survive in today's global economy. Fifteen booths were displayed throughout the Marriott Ballroom and students had to spend from a budget based on the future jobs they picked prior to the fair.

Students made decisions on how much money they wanted to spend on transportation, housing, food, clothing, savings, and several other areas. Most students found that despite a salary for work, expenses added up quickly.

"It was important to learn how to budget spending in order to live within my means" said senior Jared Martin.

Students were able to purchase credit cards, and learned of the risks involved with annual fees and interest rates that companies put on cards.

Organizers said the event was a success in large part to the sponsors and business volunteers that worked as booth captains and credit counselors throughout the day. Partners at this year's fair included Quincy Credit Union, South Shore Savings Bank, Eastern Bank, Quincy College, Quirk Auto Dealerships, ING, Quincy Chamber of Commerce, South Coastal Workforce Investment Board, S Bank, Century 21-Abigail Adams, Quincy Rotary Club, South Shore YMCA, Donahue Insurance, Harvard Pilgrim Health Care, Stop & Shop Companies, The Tax Doctor, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, HarborOne Credit Union, State Street Corporation, Met Life Insurance and AXA Equitable.

"Credit for life" was also attended by several distinguished guests such as Mayor Thomas Koch, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCrisoforo and Kevin Meskell, vice president of Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Each said the event is important because it teaches students about financial responsibility.

Volunteers Sought For Souther Tide Mill Clean-up Friday, Saturday

On Saturday, May 1st Cleaner, Greener Quincy 2010 will kick off but volunteers cleaning up the area around the Souther Tide Mill will get a head start.

This year, in addition to their regular Cleaner Greener locations, residents are invited to join in the historic clean up of this historic treasure.

Friday, April 30th volunteers are invited to help get a jump start on cleaning this site. (The cleanup will also continue during the city-wide Cleaner, Greener effort Saturday).

The city will provide gloves, rakes, brooms, shovels, bags and trash pickup. Contact Laura Innis at laurainnis@gmail.com to volunteer to help.

The Souther Tide Mill was built in 1806 on the shores of the Town River in Quincy. The mill represents the birth of Quincy's Maritime and Granite industry and is one of five remaining in the United States.

The mill was badly damaged in the March 15th storm and much of the back is exposed. This offers a glimpse of the ingenuity behind the creation of power from the tides at this beautiful public space. The city says work will begin to repair the damage soon.

The Souther Tide Mill site is unique because it had an extremely rich industrial and commercial industry. The canal and canal lock near the mills were built in the 1820's to facilitate maritime transport of granite. Special types of vessels were built in Quincy to move the granite, the premier building material in America before concrete and steel were developed in the 20th century.

The Souther Tide Mill

site is also historically significant because it was used to import, market and produce millions of board feet of lumber, timber and lumber products between the 1840's and 1940's.

The Southers, Larkins, Johnsons, and Quincy Lumber Company all contributed to lumber import, production and manufacturing on this site. Up until 1941, three and four-masted gaff rigged schooners arrived at the Souther site with imported lumber from Down East Main and the Canadian Maritime Provinces.

Canals were the major means of cargo transport before railroads. Quincy granite shipped from the Souther Tide Mill site has been used in notable sites such as Boston's Custom House, Bunker Hill Monument, Minot's Light off Cohasset's shore and King's Chapel.

In some ERs, this is the only face you'll see for hours.

The wait. It's something that many patients have gotten accustomed to when they visit an emergency room. But not our patients. At Milton Hospital, we've shortened wait times and improved emergency care processes. And that's why our patients have rated us in the top 2% nationwide in patient satisfaction* for the year 2009. An impressive number. And we've done a number of things to earn it. We handle minor emergencies more efficiently. Patients have been impressed with our bedside manner. And we're staffed with Harvard Medical Faculty Physicians through our Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center affiliation.

With our commitment to patient satisfaction, we're changing the face of ER care. Milton Hospital. Our quality shows. And shines.

Karl Roos Candidate For State Representative

Karl Roos announces his candidacy for the state representative seat in the Second Norfolk District which is being vacated by Rep. Stephen Tobin.

"I am running because I care about our city and education and I think I can help," Roos said.

"Beacon Hill has a level of dysfunction and is in need of a change. The priorities are mixed up. I don't see how you vote to keep state holidays like Patriot's Day and Bunker Hill Day and cut funding to local aid and education. It doesn't make sense to me.

"I would rather keep a teacher's or police officer's job than a state holiday. I am a fiscal conservative. We need fiscal reform and fiscal reform is not cutting local aid and education funding and passing the burden onto the city. It is changing how the state spends our money. I believe the burden on the taxpayers is high enough. I am a proponent of Proposition 2 1/2 and will defend it."

Roos, 42, is running as an Independent and would not face a primary election in September. He would be on the November ballot.

"I am an Independent because I believe in judging each issue individually and on the merits of what would be best for the people of Quincy. During my campaign for School Committee, I had the pleasure of meeting a lot of independently minded people and I agree with them."

"I am very passionate about education; I will fight for educational funding to sustain the gains that we have made. I am concerned with how the state will implement educational reform. What is the correct way to fund charter schools, what are fair standards to hold teachers accountable to? People understand my commitment to education."

Roos grew up in a blue collar working class family from Dorchester. He worked his way through, high school, college and graduate school.

"I identify with and I am concerned with the challenges that working families face in today's economic environment. I work hard to provide for my family. I understand the pressures and the uncertainty that working people face today. I don't think increasing the tax burden is going to help working families or save/create jobs."

Roos has worked in the private sector for the past 18 years, having positions in sales, marketing and software. He graduated from Bentley University with an MBA in finance. He is an alumni of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst and B.C. High.

Roos lives on Park Street with his wife, Marsha and their 3 children, Zack, Jake and Liz. Roos is involved in the community, active in the PTO, a volunteer for Scouts, coach for youth sports, runs Wollaston T-ball and is a communicant of St Ann's.

If elected, Roos said he promises to be actively involved in the district and to represent all of the people. "It would be an incredible opportunity to serve the community. I would always put the people and the needs of the district first. My focus would be on serving the district."

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

As we climb out of the recession, small businesses may continue to trim costs and may be reluctant to add costs. A liability lawsuit can wipe out a small business owner, so it's important to maintain insurance. At JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY, we can create a comprehensive and cost-effective insurance plan for your business. Most importantly, we can periodically review your coverage to keep up with your changing insurance needs. Please call us at 617-328-8600 to schedule a consultation. Our office is located at 151 Hancock Street.

Owners of small businesses may pay scant attention to legal issues until they are faced with a lawsuit. Currently, one of the primary challenges facing small business owners are lawsuits filed by laid-off employees as companies have been downsizing. There is a relatively new form of liability insurance known as Employment Practices Liability Insurance that provides an employer with protection against claims made by employees, former employees, or potential employees. In today's business climate, business owners may be reluctant to add to their expenses, but doing so with the right kind of insurance may save them from crippling legal problems in the long run. Expensive court actions can destroy companies, particularly startups and underinsured and undercapitalized businesses.

NOTE: Defense costs are usually included within the Employment Practices Liability Insurance policy's limits.

MSPCA Police Investigate Cat Torture In North Quincy

Gemini Dies After Being Doused In Gas Or Diesel Fuel

By LAURA GRIFFIN

No one's been caught yet, but MSPCA investigators are scouring a North Quincy neighborhood in efforts to track down the culprit in an animal torture incident reported last weekend.

The victim, a four-year-old black cat named Gemini, died last Saturday after being doused in either gasoline or diesel fuel. The cat had scratch marks on her, indicating that she escaped her tormenter before he or she could light a match and ignite her.

"He was a stray. We kind of took him in," said owner Maureen Bowes, adding that Gemini was "a beautiful black cat with beautiful green eyes. He was the perfect Halloween cat."

Bowes and her family miss him, and particularly miss the comfort she offered Bowes' mother Patricia who has been sick recently.

Even more alarming is an unconfirmed report of a second missing black cat in the nearby neighborhood, according to Bowes.

Gemini's attacker has not been identified, but police from the MSPCA (Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) are working the case, according to Brian Adams, spokesman for the MSPCA.

"We are investigating," said Adams who described the agency's officers as having full police power with the authority to carry guns, make arrests, file for warrants, search suspicious properties, and file charges. They will be the sole investigators.

"Our officers only investigate animal cruelty," said Adams, describing the 3000 cases reported each year to the MSPCA and the potential felony attached to such crimes.

After an offender is caught, Adams said the MSPCA decides whether to file charges in district court where the suspect faces up to five years in jail and/or a $2500 fine.

Jail-time is the least the miscreant should get, according to Bowes who lives on Vane Street with her mother and 21-year old daughter Heather deLong.

"We just hope that someone gets caught and arrested," said Bowes who wants a serious punishment. "I truly believe it was a deliberate act."

Last Saturday, Bowes went out around midnight looking for Gemini. She found her "soaking wet" around midnight Saturday. There was no rain and Bowes quickly learned Gemini was seriously harmed, in "horrible pain," shaking and crying. "We tried to bathe him," Bowes said.

After that failed, her daughter Heather and a friend drove Gemini to Weymouth's South Shore Veterinary Clinic which is open 24/7 but there was nothing anyone could do.

Bowes said the family had Gemini for over a year and her loss has been a major blow to all, especially her mother who's been ill.

While Bowes and her family recover from their loss, they've been shocked by a new report from a nearby resident.

Bowes said that a couple on Gould Street, just five streets away, is looking for their cat that has been missing since Sunday.

"This cat looks just like Gemini," said Bowes who said the couple has tacked posters up in the area.

The Quincy Sun was unable to contact the couple prior to deadline.

Competition Heats Up For Castaway Clothes Bins

The ragman is back in town after nearly a century of oblivion but he's not welcome on every block, according to city councillors.

Today's cast-off clothes and out-of-style outfits are worth cash in today's recycling market, but there's competition out there, according to Jack Sullivan, Program Manager for the Department of Public Works.

"It appears to be a new phenomenon," Sullivan said of the increased number of recycling companies vying for likely spots to drop off old clothes for the bins. "Every week, I'm being solicited to get them in the city." However, Councillors have described some recycling boxes as eyesores and, oftentimes, a blight.

They addressed the growing trend in response to a request for specified locations for boxes.

McConville Steps Down After 40 Years of Teaching Local Youngsters How To Skate

Joe McConville: Hall of Famer, Instructor And Mentor

By JOE REARDON

There are moments, special moments, that have stuck with 79-year-old Joe McConville in his 40 years of teaching youngsters to skate at the Quincy Ice Arena.

He recalled a drill where he had the beginners skating behind a chair, using it for balance. McConville told the kids to wave to their mothers with one hand and their fathers with the other when they became more confident that they had their ice legs.

One youngster approached McConville and quietly told him he didn't have a father. Thinking quick, he told the boy "Well you can give your mother a nice two for."

For McConville, who recently retired from teaching skating, there was nothing he liked more than to see a youngster grow from being unsteady on skates to skating the length of the ice.

McConville made it a habit to give the kids a positive word of the week for them to concentrate on while they were skating. On one occasion, a 7-year-old girl missed practice because she went into the city to see the Nutcracker. The following week she went up to McConville and asked him what the word of the week was.

"That brought tears to my eyes," he said.

McConville acquired much of his hockey knowledge skating on the ponds in Quincy. He was small as a youngster and didn't play any sports in high school, but that didn't stop McConville from taking to the ice or the baseball diamond with his friends.

"I never played a real game of hockey," he said. "I was strictly a pond skater. There were people who didn't think I knew what I was doing when I first started."

He also played CYO Baseball and once played at Fenway Park in 1945. "I've been very fortunate in life," he said. "I've had a lot of thrills. I never played little league. We always played on a big diamond. You played second base until you got stronger."

Along with his sports, McConville also was forced to work, a sign of the times.

"I worked after school," he said. "We all grew up poor. I don't remember my father having a steady job. I saw my father's report card from Bentley. He got straight A's and couldn't find a job."

As McConville's reputation as a guy who worked well with kids and people of all ages on the ice grew, he brought in assistants, quality people, who knew hockey and how to teach people to skate, keeping it fun in the process. The relationships McConville had with his assistants was something he treasured.

"If you can work with good people, it's amazing what you can accomplish," he said. "I had some good assistants. I had guys that would stand by me for 10 years at a time. This all started when Bobby Orr came to town. Hockey became big again."

Lorraine Rooney, the long-time administrative assistant at the arena, said McConville had a gift when it came to teaching the youngsters. "He's a wonderful person," she said. "My kid is almost 50 years old and is a referee. Joe told him when he first started refereeing to always carry a band-aid with him on the ice. And he's done it ever since."

McConville incorporated parents into the program who wanted to help out teaching the kids. The problem was, many of them could skate, but a few didn't know how to stop without taking some nasty spills.

"These were firefighters, policemen and linemen," he said. "These were tough guys. Two or three of them nearly landed at the Fox and Hound hitting the boards. It was important to teach them how to fall."

Over the years McConville began to carry a baton-like piece of a hockey stick with a bright red cloth wrapped on it to use as a teaching tool. When he needed the kids' attention he would raise the stick and he'd use it to guide the kids, which proved to be more efficient than a hockey stick they could possibly trip on when first learning.

"They started to call me the old guy with the little stick," McConville said with a laugh. "I told them of the four ships. Friendship, Leadership, Sportsmanship and Scholarship. The kids ate it up. They bought into it."

McConville's work and contribution to the hockey community didn't go unnoticed. In 2003 he was inducted into the prestigious Mass Hockey Hall of Fame, the same hall hockey greats Tony Amonte, Tom Barasso, Mike Eruzione, Bill Guerin, Dave Silk, Jeremy Roenick and Keith Tkachuk, to name a few, are members of.

That honor pales next to what he truly treasures. "People appreciate what you do," McConville said. "My reward is if I make a slight contribution to them being a good person in life."

Committee: Ambulance Contract Costly, Obsolete

Quincy could seek a payment from its ambulance provider.

"This is a very expensive service. This contract needs work." Raymondi said referring to the estimated $1.6 million municipal costs in manpower and vehicles.

Raymondi asked Asst. City Solicitor Janet Petkun. "Is it lawful to seek compensation on behalf of a private company?"

"You can certainly bid ambulance services," Petkun replied, describing such a process as a "zero-bid contract" in which the bidder would be paying the city rather than the reverse as in a construction bid.

Police and Fire Chiefs
While councillors focused on the financial cost of the service, Chief Keenan and Fire Chief Joseph Barron emphasized the major contributions offered by Fallons to both departments and to residents in crisis.

Chief Keenan described nearly a dozen areas that Fallons offers services, equipment or training in addition to emergency response.

In addition, Chief Keenan described a plan that's currently underway whereby emergency calls will be automatically routed to Fallons' which will employ 11/2 new dispatchers.

Keenan believes this will save salaries and possibly speed up response time as Fallons will then send the nearest in-service vehicle.

Fallons will invest more than $100,000 in the project, according to Chief Keenan who believes it will speed up response time as well as guarantee appropriate response and "free up my dispatchers."

Chief Barron cited Fallons' dedication at December's fatal fire and smoke event at the Martinson street senior residence. When residents had to be evacuated and relocated. Fallons provided 26 personnel and dozens of ambulances.

"I'm very pleased with how they operate; we're certainly getting a sufficient commitment," said Chief Barron, adding, "Their average response time is just under four minutes."

"They're able to muster resources that a smaller company can not," said Chief Barron who outlined Fallons' numerous contributions such as the self-contained breathing apparatus, 26 classes, and defibrillators provided at no cost to the city.

"I think we have a good model. I think it works well," said Chief Barron.

As for retraining firefighters for emergency response, "We'd have to throw so much money at it. It would be a five or six year break even. I don't think we're that solvent right now."

Chief Barron said savings should come from "consolidating stations. That has to be looked at."

Obsolete Contract

While no one questioned Fallons' commitment to the city, speakers agreed that a new contract is long overdue as members cited references in the current contract to Quincy City Hospital as a city-owned entity.

"They do an excellent job for the city," said Ernie Arienti, President of the firefighters' union, adding that "We would be remiss if we didn't look at the contract. There's a lot of information that needs to be looked at."

In addition, the contract calls for long-forgotten obligations such as a city EMS committee that was formed just this year and annual firefighters' scholarships that have not been awarded in recent memory.

"It's time to rewrite the contract to delineate the duties and give credit where credit is due," agreed Jim Fatseas, Chief of Staff for Mayor Koch.

Fatseas also acknowledged that finances could be an issue in negotiations, "There'd be no reason for us not to look at that. The dollar value may not be that much. It's something we could consider."

Raymondi suggested that additional ambulances be assigned to the city which currently has one basic and two Advanced Life Support vehicles at all times.

"Their response time could be improved," said Raymondi, noting that the four-minute response is an average of all calls and the city's peninsula areas, such as Squantum and Houghs Neck, take more time.

"We at least should have the gold standard, the Cadillac, the Mercedes," said Raymondi.

"Signing up one year deals might not be the best for the city," said Palmucci.

Councillor John Keenan summed up the committee's session, advising the administration to execute a short-term extension for Fallon's, prepare for a longer term and explore a possible payment agreement.

"We should look at more economical ways to provide service to residents."

At the outset, Palmucci welcomed Fallon's Vice President Peter Racicot to observe the meeting and said a future meeting will be dedicated for speakers from Fallon's Ambulance Co.

These variable factors, Puleo said, meant that while a number of individual homeowners did see their bills increase this year, the tax bill for the average single-family home in Quincy actually decreased. The average increase statewide this year was $139, and Quincy was one of only 23 communities in Massachusetts that did not increase taxes at all for the average single-family homeowner.

The Mayor will deliver a Fiscal Year 2011 budget to the Quincy City Council on Monday night that he has said repeatedly will show substantial spending cuts. Facing a range of increased costs coupled with revenue decreases, the City is facing a $12.3 million deficit.

Mayor At First Community Meeting: No Trash Fee

Opening his series of community meetings on City finances this week, Mayor Thomas Koch announced that the City will not entertain charging a fee for garbage pick-up as a way to balance the City's books.

"Trash pick-up is one of those vital, basic services that our residents expect and deserve, and we will not see a fee in Quincy for it as long as I am Mayor," Koch told a crowd of more than 100 people gathered at the Fore River Clubhouse for the first of nine community meetings to be held across the City.

The Mayor's position, which he called final, comes as dozens of communities across Massachusetts are starting to charge a fee for trash pickup as a way to prevent budget cuts. Quincy, he said, will continue its efforts to reduce trash collection costs by focusing on increasing its recycling efforts and other innovations.

The City has saved more than $1 million in trash collection costs over the last two years thanks to its first-of-a-kind regional collection contract together with Weymouth and Braintree. Recycling numbers are up in the City, but Koch noted that there "is plenty of work to be done to get recycling where we want it to be."

"Recycling saves us money because it dramatically reduces the trash we have to pay to get rid of," Koch said. "The best way to continue to see our trash costs go down is to increase recycling, and we are going to continue to expand those efforts."

The Mayor and Municipal Finance director Nicholas Puleo gave a detailed presentation on the City's financial position at the meeting, outlining how the City raises revenue, where it spends taxpayer money, and what challenges Quincy faces in the upcoming fiscal year. The presentation was based in large part on the newly released Financial Report.

After the presentation, Koch and Puleo spent more than an hour answering questions from residents - ranging from finances, to construction projects, to street-light repairs. Eight more meetings will be held in neighborhoods across Quincy. For a complete schedule, got to www.quincyma.gov.

Financial Report Available

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that the City's first-ever Financial Report is now available on the City's website, www.quincyma.gov, or by visiting the Mayor's Office.

The report, authored by Municipal Finance Director Nicholas Puleo, provides specific details on City revenue, expenditures, and a number of historic trends that shape the City's budget process.

Among a number of items, the reports provide detail on state-aid cuts faced by the City over the last several years, the expected increases in debt payments for the new Quincy High School, how City spending breaks down per program area, and how the City raises revenue.

"In these difficult times, we want everybody to fully understand our financial reality. There is no sugar-coating anything here, these are just the facts," Koch said of the report.

Mayor Koch is also distributing the report at a series of community meetings on City finances that he is hosting around Quincy. A schedule of meeting dates can also be found on the City's website.

$1,000 Reward For Conviction

Second Cat Found Doused In Gasoline

Detectives are now investigating a second animal torture case in North Quincy, according to Brian Adams, spokesman for the MSPCA (Massachusetts Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals).

Adams said the second cat, a tiger named Cocoa, was owned by Jill Reamer and doused with gasoline.

gating two incidents at this time and are aware of a possible third incident.

This incident follows on the heels of a similar incident last weekend involving the black cat Gemini on nearby Vane Street.

As a result, Adams said the MSPCA is offering a $1000 reward which will be awarded after the offender is convicted.

Adams said that Cocoa was treated at Angel Animal Medical Center, Boston, and euthanized after a medical assessment.

In addition, a third cat in the same North Quincy neighborhood has been reported missing for several days, but had not been located as of The Quincy Sun's deadline.

In the race to succeed Michael Morrissey as state senator, four residents filed papers. Morrissey is running for Norfolk County district attorney.

Residents filing papers for the senate seat are:

Democrats Rep. Stephen Tobin and City Councillor John Keenan; Republican Dan Dewey, past chairman of the Quincy GOP City Committee; and Laura Innis who filed papers as an unenrolled or Independent candidate.

It was unclear at press time if the city's two other state legislators—incumbent Democrats Ron Mariano and Bruce Ayers—would face opposition in the fall. No candidate filed papers in Quincy for either seat.

However, Mariano's 1st Norfolk District also includes precincts in Weymouth and Holbrook. Ayers' 3rd Norfolk District includes two precincts in Randolph. It is possible that challengers filed papers at those other town halls. The Sun was unable to collect any more information on these races at press time.

In the race for Norfolk County district attorney, Morrissey was one of four candidates filing papers to succeed Norfolk District

D.A. William Keating who is running for Congress in the 10th Congressional District.

Besides Morrissey, candidates filing papers for D.A. at Quincy City Hall were:

Democrat Joseph Driscoll, a state representative from Braintree; Michael Chinman, also a Democrat, from Milton; and John Coffey, an Independent from Needham.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, a Democrat, filed papers for re-election. A Republican opponent also filed papers: William Ferretta of Weymouth.

Tuesday was the deadline for party and non-party candidates to file papers for district and county offices. The next benchmark is April 27 which is the last day for signatures to be certified by the Board of Registrars.

Candidates running for state representative were required to submit papers with at least 150 valid signatures; 300 for candidates running for state senator.

The deadline for party candidates for federal and state-wide office, including governor, is next Tuesday, May 4.

Non-Party candidates for federal and state-wide office have until Aug. 3 to file papers.

That includes former Quincy city councillor Tim Cahill, who is running for governor as an Independent. Despite having extra time to file, Cahill submitted many sheets with signatures to the city's election office on Tuesday. His campaign announced earlier this month that he has already collected the necessary 10,000 signatures to qualify for the November ballot.

A list of all candidates filing papers will appear in a future issue of The Quincy Sun.

Competition Heats Up For Castaway Clothes Bins

Councillors charged that some boxes are painted pink to deceive donors into thinking that the companies are contributing to breast cancer research when miniscule donations are actually made.

Councillors responded to a bid to place nine new clothing recycling boxes across the city as requested by Recycling Associates of Rhode Island, a 'for-profit company.'

At the council's request, Zoning Board of Appeals to delayed discussion and action on the request.

At a future meeting, Councillors expect to set standards for such collection boxes, similar to those they enacted for vending machines for newspapers and magazines.

Last fall, Sullivan spearheaded a drive that raises funds for local elementary schools through the collection of old clothing in trailers at their schools with a company that's sharing the profit with the Parent Teacher Organizations (PTO).

So far that effort at the five schools has resulted in 10 ½ tons of clothing and a future bonus to the PTO's of at least $500.

While the contributions are welcome at the schools, the bins are not so welcome in other locations across the city.

Community Preservation Committee Chairman, Environmental Network Spokesman Shares His Vision Restoration Of Quincy Center And The Town Brook

By STEVE PERDIOS

You've walked on water. It was probably on your way into the Fours for some chowda.

You didn't even know you did it, did you? There's a good reason for that. The water runs below the pavement in a big pipe. In fact it's an entire brook: the Town Brook. And it's in need of some help.

A Little History. Long before we put a building on every vacant postage stamp of land available, the Town Brook meandered from Blue Hills into Braintree, West Quincy, Quincy Center, and emptied into Town River in Quincy Point. There were no flooding problems. Although people lived near the clean water and supply of fish the brook offered, there was enough open land around the brook to absorb storm water. Those that lived around the brook built their homes safely out of danger of rising flood waters. As population density pushed housing closer to the brook and more land abutting the brook became paved, the stormwater had nowhere to go, so it ended up in backyards and basements. The brook itself was walled up eliminating its banks, making its size only a fraction of what it was naturally, which further reduced its ability to hold storm water. Eventually, it was deemed "in the way of progress" and forced into large underground pipes and culverts so that parking lots, alleyways, and stores could be built on top of it. This aided in creating one more historic aspect to our great city: our flooding problems. From West Quincy to Quincy Point, property and lives were at risk with every passing storm.

Finally in the 1990s, the MDC, the City of Quincy, and the Army Corps of Engineers cooperated to alleviate most of the more severe flooding problems along the brook. A huge 10-foot diameter pipe was cored 60 feet below the surface running from behind Star Market to the Souther Tide Mill on Southern Artery. This pipe, called the Deep Rock Tunnel, collects abundant storm water and delivers it to Town River, safely protecting neighborhoods from danger.

Where's The Water? The Army Corps' Deep Rock Tunnel has done a wonderful job - in fact, a little too good of a job. It was supposed to accept water from the brook during heavy rain storms to prevent neighborhood flooding, which it does, but it also takes water from the brook when it's not raining. Somewhere during the course of the construction project, water that should feed the brook in dry weather was instead directed to a drain in Burgin Parkway that leads right to the Deep Rock Tunnel, bypassing the brook. We're not talking about storm water - this happens 24 hours per day, 7 days a week, whether or not it's raining. This has created a chronic lack of water for the Town Brook.

Who cares, right? Well, fish care, and fishermen care. There is a small fish, called a smelt, that uses the Town Brook to spawn every Spring. The funny thing about this fish is that they really like fast moving water - ripples in the stream. If there isn't enough water in the stream to make ripples, the fish won't come up the brook. If the fish don't come up, they won't have a safe place to lay their eggs and their population will diminish, as we've seen happen over the years.

Fisherman care about the population of the smelt because large fish eat smaller fish. The Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries has been advocating for increased smelt habitat for years. They know that the more small fish you have, the more large fish you are going to have. Everyone knows the decimation the Massachusetts fishing industry has gone through over the years. They need all the help they can get. And these little smelt will go a long way to helping the industry if we can get more water back into the Town Brook. There is money earmarked at the state and local level to get this flow back into the brook but we need action from our city government.

Daylight It! You may have heard about the little project the City is pushing in Quincy Center; A BILLION DOLLARS in redevelopment. Right in the middle of this redevelopment effort is our old friend the Town Brook. You can see it at Revere Road right next to the American Legion Hall. It runs underground in a large concrete pipe across the Hancock Parking Lot, crossing Hancock Street, running under the Ross Parking Garage and over to Star Market. Between the American Legion and Star Market it's only visible behind the Hong Kong Eatery Chinese Food Restaurant (the old Sawyers).

You may recall this past summer that our local papers reported that the Quincy Center developer, Street-Works, is planning to "daylight" the Town Brook. To "daylight" a stream means to take it out of the pipe it's in and allow daylight on it. This is done by building a new stream bottom and banks next to the existing piped stream. Natural sediments are placed on the bottom and plant life on the banks creating a good habitat for fish. Then the stream is redirected from the pipe to the new streambed, the old pipe is removed, and sunlight shines upon the brook once again.

This is a good thing because smelt do not like dark places and will not stay there long enough to spawn. Also, their eggs cannot adhere to the bottom of a pipe - the surface is too smooth and does not look like the bottom of a natural brook. They need man with the trademark walrus moustache. "We'd be over his house and he'd come in and throw Bruins tickets on the table for us and say, 'Head into the game boys.'"

The One And Only Tom Henshaw: A Newspaper Icon

Not that it happened often, but it was easy to tell when Ian was in trouble with dad. Even then, Tom's bark was worse than his bite.

"It took Mr. Henshaw a lot to get riled up," Champagne said with a laugh. "We'd see him coming in his blue station wagon, smoking his pipe and we'd say to Eino, 'You're in trouble. Here comes the station wagon.'"

Next to Ian, Lynda Connolly probably knew Tom better than anyone. She met Tom 24 years ago when they were both working for the Mariner Newspapers and struck up an immediate friendship that grew over the years.

They had countless day trips over the years and they'd go out for dinner every Thursday. After Tom had his leg amputated last summer, the two would order out or have lunch together at the house.

And a female hand, in a house with two bachelors living together, was sorely needed. "I was the only woman in the house so I was always yelling at them to clean up," Connolly said with a laugh. "They were both such slob."

Nancy McLaughlin, longtime friend and former Quincy Sun colleague

Connolly was with Tom on his final night out. It was at long-time colleague and friend Henry Bosworth's Quincy Citizen of the Year banquet. Tom enjoyed his final glass of wine on this earth.

"He was very happy to be out," said Connolly, trying to hold back tears. "He never complained. I don't think he was ever unhappy."

Connolly recalled when Tom was in rehabilitation after his leg was amputated. Tom spoke very little and one day when the nurses were changing his bedding, they mentioned that they thought he had dementia. That was too much for Connolly to bear.

"There was an issue of the Quincy Sun on the bed," she said. "I grabbed it and pointed to a story by Tom that was on the front page, I yelled at them 'See that name, that's who you're saying has dementia!'"

Connolly was looking forward to a summer of day trips to Nantasket Beach with Tom. The last time she saw him, was like most every other. "I said, I'll talk to you tomorrow and he said what he always did, 'Looking forward to it already.'"

Quincy Sun reporter Nancy McLaughlin, soaked up all the insight and advice Tom would throw her way. She recognized his brilliance very early in her career as a journalist.

"If you looked up consummate newspaperman in the dictionary, you would find Tom Henshaw's photo," said McLaughlin. "We worked together as reporters at The Quincy Sun in the late 70s and 80s. Sitting next to him in the Sun newsroom, I got the education of a lifetime. He taught me how to write a good story, to 'Keep It Simple Stupid' and 'find out who knows and ask them.' And he made it fun and the best job in the world."

"At the time, the Globe had a Spotlight Team. We called ourselves The Flashlight Team. We also later covered the Bruins together for the AP. He had the best memory I have ever encountered for facts ranging from politics to history to who the Bruins were playing when Bobby Orr broke the first of his many records as a defenseman many years ago. He would just close his eyes for a few seconds, then come up with the date."

TOM HENSHAW and his longtime friend, Lynda Connolly, share a toast at the Citizen of the Year reception March 25 in honor of Quincy Sun Founder Henry Bosworth at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center. Lynda, whose friendship with Tom spanned nearly a quarter century, said Tom was so happy to enjoy the evening and see his Sun colleagues at that special evening.

tered for facts ranging from politics to history to who the Bruins were playing when Bobby Orr broke the first of his many records as a defenseman many years ago. He would just close his eyes for a few seconds, then come up with the date."

To McLaughlin, Henshaw's unrivaled skills as a reporter and columnist paled to his role as a trusted and loyal friend with a heart brimming with love for those he was closest to. "Tom was not only a consummate newspaperman, he was also the most loyal and caring friend you could have," said McLaughlin. "He was always there in happy times or sad, he remembered every birthday or occasion with the perfect card and gift."

"He was funny, kind, optimistic and wise. He was also an invaluable link to my past, as he had also worked at the Herald Traveler with my dad, Joe McLaughlin, who died just before I started working at The Sun."

Ian's earliest memories of his father date back to his elementary school days growing up on Commercial Street. "He used to wake me up for school and he had his own little jingle," Ian said. "The sun is shining brightly, time to get up. It wasn't a shock to wake up with him. Some parents yell to their kids to get up. He never did that with me."

As for disciplining Ian, Tom was a soft touch. "He only spanked me once as a kid and his watch broke," Ian said. "He took that as a sign and he never spanked me after that."

It was Ian receiving his master's degree in education, with a concentration in history from UMass-Boston in May of 2008 that Tom was most proud of. Ian considered the degree just as much as Tom's as his own.

"I consider them our degree because he helped me so much," Ian said. "I was able to work part time and go to school because of my father. He took a lot of the pressure off me. The only regret I have is that he never saw me become a teacher."

And through all his health issues, writing was always the constant. Over the past year, Ian actually measured Tom's mental health after a procedure by how quickly he got back to working on crossword puzzles.

"The first thing out of his mouth was always that he was done writing," Ian said. "I'd bring him some newspapers and magazines to read and then he'd start doing the crossword puzzles."

"The next stage was that he'd start writing again."

Tom kept writing right up to the very end. He passed away at home, the home where he raised his son, the home filled with wonderful memories. Tom went out on his terms.

"A number of years ago, Tom told me that when his time came, not to feel too sad, because he had had a wonderful life, had wonderful adventures, and did what he wanted to do," McLaughlin said.

"We can try, but there was only one Tom Henshaw, and the world won't be quite the same without him."

Academic Associates READING TEACHER What should I do to get my child on track in reading?

Leading educators agree that students who can't read well in first grade are severely handicapped for the rest of their lives. In fact, by the end of first grade every child should be able to read nearly every word in our language. At Academic Associates students typically become excellent readers in only 30 - 60 hours and read on or above grade level in that short time. Our method is a simple, effective, natural method that works with the brain rather than against it. From years of experience we know there is only one reading method that works every time, with every student. No other method even comes close. If a child in your family needs to read better call today and give them the skill they so desperately need.

Protecting Your Home From Future Flood Damage

As cleanup continues in the aftermath of the heavy rains and flooding that struck Massachusetts during late March, state and federal officials urge disaster victims to take measures to prevent the damage from happening again.

Recovery officials point out that it is safer, cheaper, and ultimately much easier to limit future destruction than to repair it afterward. The rebuilding phase of a disaster is the ideal time to consider ways to limit future damage.

There are simple, inexpensive ways to prevent or reduce future flood damage. FEMA calls such actions hazard mitigation.

While some mitigation measures such as the elevation of buildings are costly long-term projects, there are simple home improvements that residents of flood-prone areas can make to help themselves.

Although many recommended measures require employing a contractor, some can be accomplished by a competent do-it-yourselfer. It is important, however, to talk to your local building officials before you start any work. They can provide information on local standards and building codes.

Several suggestions to keep damages from happening are:

- Relocate or elevate water heaters, furnaces, and major appliances. Water heaters, furnaces and appliances, such as washers and dryers in the basement, can be elevated. Place them on a masonry or pressure-treated wood base at least 12 inches above the previous high-water mark or your home's projected flood elevation. Appliances can also be moved to the first or second floor. Some heating systems can be suspended from the basement ceiling.

- Elevate or relocate electrical systems. Electrical panel boxes, circuit breakers, wall switches, and wall outlets should be relocated at least 12 inches above your home's projected flood elevation. In some cases, they can even be moved to a higher floor. A licensed electrician familiar with local codes should be hired to do this work. An uninterrupted electrical supply will allow the homeowner to move back to the home more quickly after a flood.

- Install a septic backflow valve. Flooded septic systems can force sewage back into the home. Not only is this an unpleasant experience, it also presents a health risk. Backflow valves can be installed inside or outside the structure but must conform to local building codes.

- Build interior and exterior floodwalls. A watertight masonry floodwall can be constructed to enclose furnaces, utilities and appliances on the lowest floor of the building. On the outside, a similar wall could be constructed around the perimeter of the basement opening to keep water from entering.

- Anchor your fuel tank. Fuel tanks, either inside or outside the home, should be anchored to prevent them from overturning or breaking loose in a flood. Metal straps and bolts should be non-corrosive, and wood structural supports should be pressure treated.

Funding for hazard mitigation projects may be available to victims of the recent floods who qualify for U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) low-interest loans. SBA disaster loans may be increased up to 20 percent to cover the cost of improvements that will protect property from damages of the same kind in the future.

Since the March 29 presidential declaration, more than 21,000 residents of the seven declared counties (Bristol, Essex, Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, Suffolk and Worcester) have registered for disaster assistance by calling the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) at 800-621-FEMA (3362) or 800-462-7585 (TTY) or by enrolling online at www.DisasterAssistance.gov.

Reaching A Decision About Paying Your Mortgage

(NAPSA)—There are better alternatives than defaulting on a mortgage obligation.

The decision to default may seem like the only alternative for many homeowners who have lost their jobs or are experiencing personal problems such as illness or divorce, but homeowners should carefully consider how such a decision might affect them in the long term.

- Negative credit rating. Defaulting on your mortgage can affect future access to credit and negatively impact your ability to rent or buy a home. It can also make it harder and more expensive to buy or lease a car and maintain a small-business line of credit, and could cause your creditors to reduce your existing credit lines. Now that some employers use credit checks in making employment decisions, it could even hurt opportunities for future employment (60 percent of employers now check credit records, up from 40 percent four years ago, according to the Society for Human Resource Management).

- Debt doesn't always go away. By simply walking away from your obligation, you might end up with a large tax bill. However, by working with your lender, any debt forgiveness on your primary residence may not be taxable due to the recently passed Mortgage Forgiveness Debt Relief Act. You should consult your tax professional for background on this tax provision and to understand the potential impact to your individual situation.

DEFAULTING ON a mortgage can affect your future access to credit and even affect your ability to find a job, as some employers check credit scores.

In some states, even after foreclosure, lenders can seek repayment from you for the mortgage if you have the ability to pay the remainder. If you have a second mortgage, often called a "piggyback," in those states where deficiencies may be pursued, the bank may also seek payment on the second loan balance. If you owe back taxes, your municipality may turn your delinquent taxes over to collection agencies for repayment.

- Benefits of home ownership are lost. Balance the cost of renting with the benefits of homeownership. U.S. tax laws still favor homeownership. If you itemize for tax purposes, you will lose the mortgage interest and property tax deductions. Your rent payment may not be lower than your mortgage payment, particularly when you factor in the tax benefits. Meanwhile, as the market recovers and housing prices begin to appreciate, landlords may charge higher rents, so you could miss the long-term upside of a recovery.

Ask your lender about making your mortgage more affordable through a modification plan that could include reducing your interest rate, deferring the amount of principal on which interest is accruing or lengthening the amortization term. Modifying your mortgage may create an affordable payment that makes your monthly expenses comparable with prevailing rents.

- Community is impacted. If you default on your mortgage obligation and your home goes into foreclosure, there are negative impacts on the neighborhood. Foreclosure lowers neighboring home values further. It also affects schools and city services through lost tax revenue—something to consider if you want to stay in the community.

If homeownership is not an option, there are other alternatives such as a short sale or deed in lieu of foreclosure. A short sale is when a property is sold and the lender agrees to accept a discounted payoff.

A deed in lieu allows the transfer of a property to the lender without going through the foreclosure process. These alternatives are last resorts, and may follow other options such as an attempt to sell the property. Check with your tax professional regarding your individual tax situation.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, April 15, at approximately 2:40 a.m., Officer Sean Kelley, while on patrol, entered the parking lot of the Presidents City Inn. There have been numerous car breaks and drug offenses committed in this area.

While proceeding into the lot, the Officer noticed that the door to room 10 was open and the lights were on. Officer Kelley looked in but could not see anyone inside, so he exited his cruiser and approached the door. After knocking and announcing, "Quincy Police", there was no response.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officer pushed the door open further and noticed that both bed spreads were ripped off the bed and on the floor and that the bathroom door was slightly ajar with the light on. Concerned that a crime may have been committed, Officer Kelley informed Dispatch and then entered the hotel room. After a brief check, the Officer did not find anyone inside, so he proceeded to the manager's office to make some inquiries. As the Officer and the hotel manager walked back to room 10, they saw a male wearing a grey hooded sweatshirt, dark pants and dark shoes take off running from the doorway towards the back of the hotel. The individual was holding an unknown object still in his sweatshirt pocket as he ran.

Officer Kelley gave chase and updated Dispatch but was unable to find the suspect. Numerous units responded to the scene to continue the search while Officer Kelley returned to the hotel room with the hotel manager and learned that the last guest there had checked out at 7:30 p.m.

There were no signs of a break-in and all appeared normal in the room. As Officer Kelley checked other doors and cars for break-ins, Officer Kent Yee informed Dispatch that he was involved in a foot chase in the pedestrian tunnel near the St. Ann's School, with an individual that matched the description of the suspect from the Presidents City Inn.

Officer Yee broadcasted that the suspect was now running down Willow Avenue. Officer John McGovern announced that had located the suspect in the bushes next to 44 Willow Avenue and had him detained. The suspect was asked why he fled the area of the hotel and he stated, "I saw the cops and I freaked."

Officer Matt Hockney arrived on scene and started a pat-frisk of the suspect, finding six hypodermic syringes sticking out of the left pocket. The officer then found a white bottle cap wrapped in cellophane. Inside the cap, there was a small cotton ball that appeared to have a small amount of brown residue. The suspect also possessed a brown powder inside a cigarette box that appeared to be heroin.

Through officer training and experience, it is known that heroin users often place liquefied heroin into bottle caps with a small piece of cotton as a filter in order to fill the syringe for injection. Officer Kelley arrived on scene and confirmed that this was the same individual who fled the parking lot at the Presidents City Inn.

At this point, the suspect was placed under arrest and transported to the station. Officer Kelley spoke again with the hotel manager and learned that the suspect had rented room 11 earlier, but under a different first name that he gave to the Police Officers. A check of the suspect's criminal record showed that he had a warrant from Plymouth District Court for Shoplifting as well as a previous conviction for possession Class A Drug.

Officer Kelley knocked on the door of room 11 and spoke with a female who identified herself as the suspect's girlfriend. She said that they heard the Police outside the door and thought that they were there to arrest the suspect on the warrant, so once the Officer left the area, the suspect fled.

It was determined that the door to room 10 had not been secured by management. The suspect, a 31 year old Weymouth resident, has been charged with "Possession of Class A Drug, Subsequent Offense."

Sorensen Dominates Lakers; Berry Homers, Drives In Both Runs as QHS Wins

Presidents Outlast Silver Lake HS, 2-0

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents won a statement game on Monday afternoon, defeating Silver Lake High School, 2-0, on the road, in a matchup against the best team in the Patriot League's Keenan Division. Quincy (6-0 overall, 5-0 in league play) currently leads the Patriot League's Fisher Division with an impressive 4-0 divisional record.

Silver Lake (7-2 overall) lost to Quincy in last year's Division I South Sectional playoffs.

The Presidents had a chance to pad its record this week as the team was set to play a non-league game on Tuesday against Stoughton High School (weather permitting) and yesterday (Wednesday) versus Whitman-Hanson HS. The team will host North Quincy High School under the lights at Mitchell/McCoy Field on Friday night (6:30 p.m. start time).

Against Silver Lake, Quincy's Kori Sorensen continued to add to her remarkable high school stats at QHS. Sorensen limited the high-scoring Lakers, a team that came in averaging close to seven runs a game, to zero runs. The Lakers finished with just five hits while Sorensen struck out ten batters.

Her battery mate, senior catcher Olivia Berry provided the Presidents with all of the scoring they would need to defeat Silver Lake when she smashed a moon shot homerun in the second inning. That dinger gave Quincy a 1-0 lead that would hold up the rest of the way; Berry knocked in her team's second run of the contest in the sixth with a single to left field that scored senior third baseman Julia Yee (2-for-3 in the game).

"Silver Lake is one of the top teams in the Patriot League, and Kori really pitched a gem of a game," said QHS head coach Roger Bacchieri on Tuesday. "Kori is a competitor and she really got up for this game. Kori and Olivia, that combination, has been great for us this season."

"Those two have helped us win all year long and they make our life a lot easier. Olivia is an all-league player and Kori is one of the better pitchers in the area. It was a big win against a very good team."

For the Lakers, the loss marked the team's second straight after a sizzling 7-0 start to the spring. Silver Lake had previously dropped a decision to Plymouth South HS before running, once again, into the buzz saw that is Kori Sorensen.

"Kori is such a talented pitcher," said Silver Lake head coach Mike Brennan. "She has the ability to paint the corners and we have had a difficult time beating her recently. We had the bases loaded in two innings and just could not get that hit we needed. (Quincy) knocked us out of the playoffs last season, and it is possible that we will see them again this year in the post season. We need to figure out a way to get going against her."

"I also have to give credit to Berry. She killed us in this game. We just could not get her out when we needed to. Quincy has a real good team."

The Presidents, after six games, look primed to make another run into the Division I South Sectional playoffs, but according to Bacchieri, the team is still searching for its identity, despite just knocking off the Lakers on Monday.

"We are off to a good start, but I am still trying to figure out how we stack up," said Bacchieri. "So far this season, we have beaten the teams we should have, and we have come out on top in games against Hanover (6-5) and Silver Lake (2-0). Both of these games were close and really could have gone either way. Those are two strong teams, so we are fortunate. One pitch either way could have changed the outcome of those games."

At the conclusion of the North Quincy game on Friday night, this year's Quincy team should have a better understanding of where they are halfway through the schedule. It is possible (although Whitman-Hanson HS should not be taken lightly) that Quincy could start next week with a 9-0 record, quite a difference from last season when the squad had to fight its way into the playoffs. Quincy needed to win two-out-of-its-final-four games in 2009 to qualify (they did).

Fortunately, for the Presidents, Kori Sorensen and Olivia Berry are one of the best pitcher-catcher combos in the Patriot League. With that going for them, Quincy should qualify for post-season action much sooner in 2010 than they did in 2009.

Notes: The month of May begins with a home date with Scituate HS on May 3... Quincy will play three consecutive road games against Duxbury HS (May 5), Hingham (May 7), and Pembroke (May 10), before heading back to Mitchell/McCoy to host Hanover HS May 12 in what may prove to be the deciding game for the Fisher Division crown... the team follows that game with away games against Randolph High School on May 14 and Rockland High School on May 17... a home game against Middleboro High School is set for May 19th... Quincy and North Quincy will meet for a second time on May 25.

The All-City Basketball Tournament is a Quincy Recreation tradition that has been conducted annually for more than 50 years at the conclusion of the winter recreation program schedule. Teams are created from participants in the neighborhood recreation programs from all parts of Quincy, and QRD leaders assigned to the program that started in November coach all of the teams.

Participants are from both public and private schools that regularly attend the gym in their neighborhood.

At the conclusion of the 2010 All-City Basketball Tournament Recreation Director Barry Welch presented certificates of achievements to all the finalists from Sterling Gym and trophies to the members of the Atlantic Gym championship team.

The championship game between Atlantic and Sterling was taped by the QRD staff and will be broadcasted, at a later date, on QATV.

The write-up for the annual George Dunn All-City High School Basketball Tournament, held earlier this month, will be run in The Quincy Sun during the month of May.

Don't Let Bacteria Reign Over Your Shower

Don't let bacteria reign over your celebration. The bride, the new mother, the graduate or other guest of honor will not appreciate the gift of food-borne illness. Even worse, pregnant women, exhausted brides, and graduates worn out from final exam study are at risk from a severe case of bacterial illness. But the hostess or host certainly doesn't want any guest to take home a food-borne illness.

Observe Safe Food Handling Techniques

Bacteria are everywhere, but a few types especially like to crash parties. Staphylococcus aureus, Clostridium perfringens and Listeria monocytogenes frequent people's hands and food warmers. And unlike micro-organisms that cause food to spoil, harmful or pathogenic bacteria cannot be smelled or tasted.

As basic as it sounds, hand washing is one of the best ways to avoid illnesses. Always wash your hands before and after handling food. Keep your kitchen, dishes and utensils clean also. Follow these other safe food handling techniques for a safe celebration:

- Cook foods thoroughly to safe minimum internal temperatures: beef, veal and lamb steaks, roasts and chops, 145°F; pork to 160°F; ground meats, 160°F; and all poultry, 165°F.

- Divide hot, cooked foods into shallow containers for rapid, even cooling to store in the refrigerator or freezer until serving.

- Reheat hot foods to 165°F.

- Always serve food on clean plates-not those previously holding raw meat and poultry. Bacteria present in raw meat juices can cross contaminate cooked food.

- Arrange and serve food on several small platters rather than on one large platter.

- Keep hot food hot in the oven (set at 200-250°F) until serving time.

- Serve hot foods at 140°F or warmer using chafing dishes, slow cookers and warming trays.

- Foods should not sit at room temperature for more than two hours. Discard anything left out for two hours or more.

- REPLACE empty platters rather than adding fresh food to a dish that already held food at room temperature.

- Keep cold foods at 40°F (refrigerator temperature) or colder. Serve cold foods by nesting dishes in bowls of ice, or use small serving trays and replace them.

Tips To Spring Clean Your Health Routine

(NAPSA) - Go beyond typical spring cleaning this year and pledge to get your family fit and healthy.

Dr. Joshua Riff, Target medical director, shares helpful tips to ensure health and wellness throughout the seasonal changes.

Seasonal Sniffles

Is your nose sore and red from constantly blowing it? Many people think they have a reoccurring cold but it may actually be allergies. If you frequently suffer from symptoms, stock your medicine cabinet with over-the-counter medications before symptoms get severe.

Look to save on your supplies by purchasing private-label brands such as up & up All Day Allergy Relief from Target. The quality is equivalent to that of national brands, yet you'll save on price.

Don't forget to address indoor allergens. Vacuum dark corners and under furniture to clean up small dust mites. Don't overlook where you sleep, as bedding and pillows can serve as allergen hosts. Wash sheets, pillow covers and bed skirt in hot water and replace pillows every five years. Also clean miniblinds thoroughly, as blinds are traps for dust mites. In addition to ensuring that you'll breathe easier, cleaning efforts can burn 200 calories an hour.

Nutritional Super Foods

Spice up your summer salads and snacks with seasonal items. Fruits and veggies such as blueberries, strawberries, red grapes, alfalfa sprouts and dates are loaded with antioxidants that enhance the immune system. Not a salad fan? Add side items such as sweet potatoes or carrots, as they also pack antioxidants.

Add a healthy grill twist to your barbecue by replacing hot dogs and hamburgers with wild Alaskan salmon. Salmon is rich in omega-3 fatty acid, which studies show helps lower the risk of chronic diseases. Don't deprive yourself of snacks that aren't completely healthy-it's all about portion control.

Get Outside and Exercise

If you're not up for a high-impact activity such as swimming laps or running on the beach, walking can be a great way to burn calories. Add simple extras every day, such as parking farther from an entrance, getting off the bus a few stops early or walking during your lunch break. Use a pedometer to track step progression and set goals. Start by aiming for at least 10,000 steps a day and continue to increase the number each week for a self-challenge.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman Chiropractor

DIFFERENT STROKES

While warming weather may lead to thoughts of swimming in the ocean, lakes, and pools, this form of exercise offers health benefits any time of the year. Chiropractors encourage swimming because water cushions the joints and greatly reduces the likelihood of injury. The pressure that water exerts on submerged feet and legs helps improve circulation, and warm water relaxes muscles. According to one study that measures blood pressure, cholesterol levels, and other measures of cardiovascular health, swimmers and runners had the best profiles. Another study showed that swimmers had a lower risk of death (2%) than runners (8%), walkers (9%), and non-exercisers (11%). Swimming also relieves pain and increases flexibility among arthritis sufferers and those afflicted with fibromyalgia.

Swimming is the perfect exercise for lifetime fitness. No other activity provides so many health benefits with few dangers. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC we will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you take control of your health. Our safe and gentle adjusting methods offer you relief from pain as well as restored function and mobility of affected joints. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy, Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition, we can offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Swimmers whose bodies are less dense than water (usually owing to a high proportion of fat to muscle and bone) will stay afloat with little required effort.

Howard Deering Johnson created an empire of orange-roofed restaurants that created a chain from New England to the South and on to the West. A well-respected entrepreneur, his logo Simple Simon and the Pieman is fondly remembered and he is credited with being the Father of the Franchise.

Johnson was born in Wollaston, and began his empire on Beale Street selling newspapers, cigars and ice cream, which by the 1930s would include 28 flavors. Eventually, he offered Ipswich clams, roast turkey, grilled frankfurters and other old time favorites that established a loyal clientele.

The lecture is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

For centuries, letters were a principal means of communication between people. Many letters of the past have found their way into literature, and the early forms of the modern novel were written in the form of letters to and from the principals in the story.

During World War II, Kate Smith, one of our country's greatest singers, urged folks on the homefront to write military people to help keep up their spirits during one of the worst wars in history. She made famous the statement: "If you don't write, you're wrong."

This statement still rings true today. Writing to people is a concrete way to touch them. There's something about a nice letter that continues to bless with the passing of years. A person can read a letter over and over again; meaningful phrases can be reread. Letters can be "tucked away" and be brought out when a person needs assurance; sometimes a feeling of togetherness; sometimes a feeling of love.

Wouldn't today be a good time to sit down and send a few thoughts to a friend or a relative?"...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
The Lamb is usually excited about taking on a new challenge. But if that's a touch of doubt you're feeling, maybe it's you telling yourself to go slow on this until you learn more about it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Accepting new commitments when you haven't yet finished the batch on hand could be a bit rash. Better to ease up on the new ones until you get further along with your current lot.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Reward yourself for what's sure to be a dynamic week with a getaway to someplace wonderful, hopefully with a wonderful someone. You'll return refreshed and ready for what's ahead.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Some people might be anxious about your plans. So you need to take time to explain what you expect to do and how you expect to do it. And don't forget to ask for suggestions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Dealing with an unfamiliar problem can be difficult. The wisest course you can take is to ask for advice from those who have been where you are and have come through it. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
Tackle a frustrating job problem by considering possibilities you might have ignored before. This reassures colleagues you're serious about finding a solution, even if it's not totally yours.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Your balanced approach to life proves to be helpful this week when someone you care for needs your spiritual comfort, while someone else benefits from your tough-love practicality.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Once again, you're likely to be asked to keep a secret for someone. But do you really want to do so? Be honest with yourself and with your needs before you make any such commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Taking a more direct approach from the more diplomatic one you've used before could make a difference in finally resolving a too-long-held disagreement. Try it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Being asked for advice is flattering to the Sea Goat, who has a habit of saying the right thing. This time, expect someone to be especially impressed and to act on that sentiment.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
With a number of pressures easing, your project could be making a lot more progress than you expected by this time. That's great news. But don't let yourself be distracted; stay with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
An interesting challenge looms that could be exactly what you've been looking for. Discuss this with colleagues who could have much to contribute and who might want to join with you.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your heart is always open to offer loving concern for others. And they, in turn, reach out to complete the circle.

Policy Already Covers Aspects Of New State Law

Public Schools Taking More Proactive Approach Against Bullying

By JOE REARDON

Quincy Public Schools will be taking an even more proactive and aggressive approach in the battle against students being bullied in the hallways and cyberspace.

Governor Patrick signed anti-bullying legislation at a State House ceremony, Monday attended by numerous representatives from numerous fields, including education leaders, public safety, health and human services and law enforcement. The comprehensive anti-bullying policy of the Quincy Public Schools already covers several aspects of the bill signed by the Governor.

Eight assemblies have already been held at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools to familiarize the students with the language of the bill. "There are demands on us that we have to develop a curriculum for every student in every grade," said Maura Tenaglia, the Director of Student Support Services. "We're going to have a full-court press. Parents are concerned about their children's well being."

Educating the school staffs is a priority for Tenaglia. She intends to have teachers attend conferences on bullying through the Massachusetts Aggression Reduction Center at Bridgewater State College.

The very real problem of bullying was thrust into the national spotlight in January when 15-year-old Phoebe Prince, a freshman at South Hadley High, committed suicide after being bullied mercilessly by nine students. The bullying extended beyond the school halls and onto the Internet, where she was terrorized on Twitter, Facebook, Craigslist and Formspring.

"I'm sad for kids because their social mistakes are so public now," Tenaglia said. "It doesn't end for them at the end of the day."

Governor Patrick is confident the new bill has the bite in it to achieve major changes.

"As Governor and as a parent, I feel very strongly that no child should feel threatened or unsafe in our schools," said Governor Patrick. "Today, with this new law, we are giving our teachers, parents and kids the tools and protections they need so that every student has a chance to reach their full potential. I am proud to sign this bill and thank the legislature for delivering on this critical priority."

The law has several facets to it. It includes new reporting requirements for all school staff to fully and swiftly detail any instance of bullying or retaliation to the appropriate school official. The measure directs the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education (ESE) to establish statewide academic standards that include instruction in bullying prevention and requires schools statewide to provide age-appropriate instruction on bullying prevention.

Also, both public and private schools are now required to develop detailed bullying prevention, intervention and notification plans and to publish those plans to student handbooks.

There is also a requirement that each school district will begin to provide targeted professional development to build the skills of all staff members in schools, which includes teachers, administrators, custodians, athletic coaches, bus drivers and several others, to prevent, identify and respond appropriately to bullying incidents. ESE must provide school districts with a no-cost method for fulfilling this requirement.

The law moves outside of the classroom to include incidents that occur in the community and online. This brings a new focus on cyber-bullying and extending rules and penalties to apply to electronic and other communications.

"The law will protect our children from bullying both during the school day and after school hours," said House Speaker Robert

GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

WORTHY OF ENVY
Emerald, the birthstone for the month of May, ranks among the most valuable and desirable of gemstones. Adding to its legendary status is the fact that Cleopatra, who was exceedingly fond of the gemstone, collected emeralds from a source by the Red Sea that came to be known as "Cleopatra's Mines." A continent away, the Incas and the Aztecs also worshipped the gemstone, as did the conquistadors, who were as dazzled by the brilliant green gemstones as they were by Incan gold. The most beautiful emeralds in the world have been found in the same mines worked by the Incas in Muzo and Chivor in central Colombia. More recently, Colombia's Coscuez mine has become the country's largest source of emeralds.

Being knowledgeable about gemstones is one thing, but when you are making an investment in gemstone jewelry of any color or kind, you need a trained professional. Fine jewelry cannot be judged just on appearance, which is why the experience, ethics, and credentials of your jeweler are so important. If you are shopping for an emerald for someone special with a May birthday, we'd love to show you our collection of one-of-a-kind custom designs. It's always fun to visit at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636.

THREE TO A CAR was the rule as city employees formed relay lines to distribute water during this week's water crisis. Rachel Picard, a laborer with the Public Works Department, stocks one car while co-workers help at two other cars.

accident at the regional water facility.

Fred Laskey, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA), announced the problem Saturday and lifted the ban Tuesday morning.

Basically, the residents of 20 cities and towns, including Quincy, were warned not to drink the water, not to bathe babies in it, wash their hands with it, and not to offer it to their pets.

Bottled water immediately became a vital necessity and, when scarce, caused a few unpleasant incidents such as one witnessed by William Foley, a Quincy native and employee who was shopping in a local supermarket.

Foley said Tuesday that he and his three youngsters saw "...grown men fighting over water."

Foley immediately bought 12 cases of water and distributed them at Adams Playground.

And Foley was among dozens and dozens of examples of kindness exhibited throughout the city during those critical hours.

Residents, city workers and National Guard joined forces to provide free water to local people.

On Sunday afternoon, the National Guard distributed 15,000 cases of bottled water in four areas, including Quincy, through FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency).

Quincy workers followed through on Monday morning and helped distribute bottled water to hundreds of cars which lined up from early morning to meet opening time at 10 a.m.

By 12:30, the thousands of bottles of water were gone and the workers had heard hundreds of "thank you's" from grateful residents.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron who helped organize the project said local stores were fully stocked by Tuesday.

As for senior residents, Jim Fatseas, the mayor's

Chief of Staff, said the city helped deliver six bottles of water to every apartment in senior housing.

"We're working with them and making sure they're covered," said Fatseas.

Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville told City Council Monday, "We are getting good readings. We need 48 hours of clean (reports)."

"We're out there every week," said Prendeville of regular testing. "We're not going to put anyone in danger."

Laskey postponed questions regarding the cause of the break during the crisis but the questioning began this week as Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond asked, "How does a couple less than 10 years old just burst?"

Stamp Out Hunger Saturday: Letter Carriers Food Drive

The National Association of Letter Carriers will hold its annual food drive Saturday, May 8.

Postal customers in Quincy are asked to place non-perishable food items next to their mailbox before their letter carrier delivers mail this Saturday.

Volunteers are needed from 2 to 8 p.m. at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., to sort and box the food.

Drivers are also needed to pick up and transport food from the Quincy Center, Wollastan and North Quincy Post Offices to the Recreation Department for sorting.

The food drive is an opportunity to help the community and for people of all ages, especially children, to accumulate volunteer hours for school or other activities.

This will be the eighth year the City of Quincy has worked closely with the local food pantries and the U.S. Post Office to stamp out hunger in the City of Quincy.

Remember 'The Meanest Mother?'

The following column has become a tradition in The Quincy Sun printed numerous times on this page by the late Henry W. Bosworth, Jr.

We continue that tradition by reprinting it again this week in observance of Mother's Day Sunday.

Happy Mother's Day to moms everywhere.

She might draw a little criticism today.

But "The Meanest Mother" is still fondly remembered.

She first appeared here 39 years ago as a Mother's Day tribute in 1971.

For many readers it brought nostalgic memories of their own mother.

We have never been able to determine where the article came from. Or who wrote it.

From time to time we have requests to reprint it as Mother's Day approaches.

But as you read it, you get to thinking that times and family values have changed somewhat since 1971.

The article seemed most appropriate back then. But today, some readers might take issue with part of it. Might even see child abuse in it.

We thought back then it was a fitting tribute to all the "mean mothers" everywhere who raised their children strictly, but with love and care.

Mothers who took the time to guide their children through those early years, those crucial years.

Someone who wanted to know where her children were. Who they were with. And, what they were doing.

Mothers who were always there for them.

We still think the article is quite appropriate as a tribute to mothers.

But take a look. See if you think it's still on track.

It goes like this:

"I had the meanest mother in the world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs and toast. While others had cokes and candy for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich.

As you guessed, my supper was different from other kids, too.

But, at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang. She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing.

She insisted that if we'd be gone one hour that we be one hour or less-not one hour and one minute.

I am nearly ashamed to admit but she actually struck us. Not once, but each time we did as we pleased.

Can you imagine someone actually hitting a child because he disobeyed? Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come.

We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends.

So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake at night thinking of mean things for us to do.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It truly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running. She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of his country.

And, whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean mother.

Look at all the things we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade, nor to take part in a riot and a million and one things that our friends did.

She forced us to grow into God fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as background, I am trying to raise my three children. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because you see, I thank God. He gave me the meanest mother in the world."

Times and values have changed in the last 39 years.

But frankly, I hope that mean mothers don't go out of style.

Kids need them. The country does, too.

And, just let me add: Happy Mother's Day, all you "mean mothers."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 postcard view of the Wollaston Fire Station, or hose house as they were often called then, located on Beale Street in Wollaston. Built in 1900 of Italianate design this is Quincy's oldest standing fire station. It was built to house horse-drawn fire apparatus. A stable for the horses was in the rear with access via the ramp seen on the right. The lookout tower is a Wollaston landmark visible throughout the neighborhood; it is a reproduction of a 13th century Italian bell tower. Today, the top of the tower is surrounded with an array of antennas, and the classic wooden garage doors shown here have been replaced with powered aluminum overheads. The station is home to two modern fire engines: Engine 4 and Ladder 2. Before this station was built, an early piece of fire apparatus, horse-drawn Hose #2, was kept in a wooden firehouse on the corner of Winthrop Avenue and Marion Street behind the Wollaston Congregational Church. READERS FORUM

An Open Letter To The School Committee

It was disturbing to read the letter in The Sun April 22 from School Committee Vice-Chair Anne Mahoney addressed to the QEA and specifically addressed to me.

Ms. Mahoney accused me of refusing to bring "the discussion of wage deferral to the QEA members." This is not true. Long before she submitted her inflammatory letter for publication, a general membership meeting of QEA members was scheduled to discuss this topic. The membership of the QEA received a blast email notification of the scheduled meeting a full five days before Ms. Mahoney's letter was due at the Sun's office. Quincy's educators know that I, as their president, have always leveled with them. Seeing an untruth like Ms. Mahoney's angers educators. We were a phone call away to learn about that meeting, but Ms. Mahoney chose to make an accusation in the press. Anne Mahoney is grandstanding. Furthermore, Ms. Mahoney never explains why the School Committee has not scheduled a vote on our proposal to them. So I have a simple plea to Mahoney: stop grandstanding in the press; instead, make a deal with us.

Ms. Mahoney claims that QEA refuses to accept a wage deferral. This is not true. Talks between the City and the QEA have been ongoing for over a month. The QEA has proposed wage deferrals that would save the City millions of dollars over the next three years. To date we have not reached agreement. If Ms. Mahoney believes that the talks are over, that is because she and her School Committee have walked away from the discussions. When they left the room, the QEA remained behind, and we are willing to continue discussions.

Ms. Mahoney states that "a decision of this magnitude should not lie in the hands of a leadership team of five." This is not true. The QEA is a democratic organization. Any contract requires a vote of the full membership, by a two-thirds majority. It is entirely out of place for Ms. Mahoney to make false statements about the democracy of our organization. Her false statements are not helpful to the process.

Ms. Mahoney implies that all the points in her lengthy letter have been discussed with the QEA. This is not true. Prior to reading Ms. Mahoney's letter, we have had no conversation on many of those issues. It would have been a matter of common courtesy to discuss these sensitive topics with me before going to the press. At the same time, she could have learned that we scheduled a meeting. QEA members can only assume she chose this form of public disclosure for other reasons.

The QEA has refrained from comment to this point, as is proper during discussions and negotiations. Chapter 150E of the laws of the Commonwealth provide for these talks to be private, and not conducted in public. Ms. Mahoney is bargaining in public. Such behavior is offensive to any union, and is posturing, usually for political purposes. The public might be reminded of the last public official who did this to Quincy's educators. And such behavior is never helpful to the process. Ms. Mahoney's protestations about growing up in a union household are meaningless if she learned nothing from that experience.

The QEA does not believe in bargaining in the press; we regret that Ms. Mahoney's letter forces even this much commentary from us. Good faith bargaining and people of good will should be able to resolve things. Neither side gets everything they want; but the result is what we need. We call on the School Committee to participate in such discussions, behind closed doors, as the law provides.

Houghs Neck Youth Center In Jeopardy For Lack Of Funds

By FRANK McCAULEY

Do you care - really?

The future of a Houghs Neck youth center, recreational, social focal point for area youngsters and a living memorial to a Vietnam hero, is in grave doubt.

Unless financial aid comes from the community, the Sgt. Lawrence Greenham Youth Center, named after the first Houghs Neck boy to give his life in Vietnam, will soon be gone.

It doesn't have to happen. And, it won't - if you really care.

The youth center, located in a former bakery at 1213 Sea Street, came into existence 16 months ago. It was born in the sweat, muscle and desire of 40 to 50 teenagers and a few adults and $12.36.

The building has been rented at $90 a month; the owner has indicated that he will sell it.

Plans for a fundraising drive are underway, with Leo J. Kelly, 29 Charles Street, as chairman. Letter of appeal have gone out to Houghs Neck residents and city officials.

GRACE KELLY EARNS MASTERS DEGREE

Grace Kelly, wife of Quincy School Committee Member Paul C. Kelly, mother of three, and active civic worker, was scheduled to receive a master's degree in education from Boston State College after six long years of night school.

Mrs. Kelly has been active in the Willard School PTA and was co-chairman of the St. Mortiz Association's recreation committee.

Thomas Whelan Wins B.C. High Oratorical Competition

Thomas J. Whelan of Quincy, a senior at Boston College High School, won the Latin IV-V Oratorical contest at the fifth annual Latin and Greek Declamation Ceremonies.

Whelan delivered a dramatic excerpt in Latin from Lucan's "De Bello Civile". It is the finale of the introduction and Lucan invokes the Emperor Nero instead of the standard of invoking the Muse. Lucan begs Nero to watch over Rome after he has become a god and give him the strength to tell his epic. It is basically unrestrained flattery.

The judges for the competitions were Beth Kil-lorin, Eugene Holmes and Ron Fletcher, all English teachers at BC High.

THOMAS WHELAN, B.C. High Oratorical Contest winner.

ST. AGATHA SCHOOL recently raised $800 for La Escuelita. Art teacher Katelyn McEvoy traveled to Costa Rica to volunteer and teach at La Escuelita de Esperanza. La Escuelita de Esperanza is an after-school arts and literacy program in a community of impoverished Nicaraguan immigrants in San José, Costa Rica. While volunteering she bought them supplies and toys they needed for their school. She also was able to buy a mattress for future volunteers. "This huge donation made a tremendous difference," McEvoy said. "Seeing their glowing faces when I showed them the new toys, games and materials that the St. Agatha School Community helped to provide was such a rewarding experience!"

Easy Tasty Ring Of Pastry

After making about 14 of these rings of pastry for Easter, it is such popular desert for family and friends, that I have decided to make this all year long. The only thing missing is the placing of eggs around the ring.

It is so fool proof, and so easy, that the bowl comes out practically clean, as you will note if you decide to make this. I've used anise flavoring, but any other favorite will do and will be equally delicious.

ANISE RING

- ¾ cup butter (softened)
- 1-cup sugar
- 2 eggs (unbeaten)
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 2 tablespoons anise extract
- ¼ cup milk

Place the dry ingredients in a bowl. Then in a mixing bowl or mixer, mix the butter and sugar together. Then alternately add the eggs one at a time with the dry ingredients, milk and anise, and beat until it is dough like mixture

Remove from bowl and place on a lightly floured board and make a large ring or two small ones. Place on an ungreased cookie sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for about 20-25 minutes. Or until a toothpick placed in the center comes out clean. Wait until cool and then add the following icing.

ICING FOR THE TOP

- 1 cup powdered sugar
- A little cream or milk until mixture resembles frosting
- Sprinkles for top (if desired)
- A smidgen of the anise flavoring if desired

Brush the pastry on top and add the sprinkles.

This can be kept in the refrigerator for days and goes great with a cup of tea or coffee.

P.S. This same dough can be used for biscotti or round cookies. If you make biscotti, shape the dough into a log. After it is done, slice and put back in the oven until crispy. If you prefer a soft one, eliminate the second baking.

ENC Commencement May 15

Eastern Nazarene College will hold its 88th commencement exercises on the college's front lawn at 2:30 p.m. Saturday May 15, when approximately 240 graduates will receive associate's, bachelor's and master's degrees from the Christian liberal arts college.

Guest speaker at this year's commencement ceremonies will be Tom Nees, founder and director of Leading to Serve, Inc. Nees served as a pastor at churches in Washington, California, Ohio and Washington, DC, before organizing the faith-based neighborhood agency, Community of Hope, in the nation's capital in 1975.

"The Community of Hope is recognized locally and nationally as a model faith-based community organization that offers a wide range of services, including housing for homeless families, health care, job training, education and legal aid," ENC President Corlis McGee said. "Dr. Nees has a lifetime of leadership experience in the religious and non-profit communities, and we are honored to have him as our commencement speaker."

Through the Community of Hope, Nees organized the Institute for Racial Reconciliation in 1990 as an educational forum to engage students, local residents and community leaders in racial understanding and cooperation. In 1995, he became the director of Compassionate Ministries in the USA and Canada for the Church of the Nazarene, and has since helped start more than 200 faith-based organizations in every major urban area in those countries. From 2003 to 2008, he served as director of the USA/Canada missions for the Church of the Nazarene, providing leadership development resources for 5,000 clergy. He founded Leading to Serve, Inc. in 2007 to advance leadership consulting and coaching in nonprofit and faith-based communities.

Dr. Nees holds a BA from Northwest Nazarene University, a M.Div. from Nazarene Theological Seminary and a D.Min. from Wesley Theological Seminary. He is the author of four books, including The Changing Face of the Church and Compassion Evangelism.

'Journey Just Beginning' For Eagle Scout Sydney Huynh

QHS Junior Achieves Scouting's Highest Honor

By JOE REARDON

When Sydney Huynh was an 8-year-old at the Lincoln-Hancock School, he never dreamed that a simple flyer that caught his attention on the bulletin board would lead him on an exciting ride.

More than 100 camping nights, 280 miles of hiking and 272 camping hours later, Sydney's journey culminated April 25, when he achieved the rank of Eagle Scout.

The 16-year-old North Quincy High School junior was recently presented with the most prestigious of scout badges at the Eagle Court of Honor held at the Christ Church of Quincy. A member of Troop 42, Sydney is the second scout to earn the highest honor possible this year. Raymond Chung achieved Eagle Scout status back in January.

"I never thought I'd be an Eagle Scout," said the soft-spoken Sydney. "There was a flyer at my school. We called up one of the packs. It was very exciting. I really liked it. My grandpa and father were scouts in Vietnam so I'm a third generation scout."

Adorned with a sash of 49 merit badges, Sydney explained the significance of the various multi-colored awards and the 12 white-bordered badges required to reach the rank of Eagle Scout.

At the ceremony, Sydney read his statement of ambition and life purpose.

"Now I'm an Eagle Scout, about to embark on a journey beyond what I have earned," he said. "Today is the day where the journey doesn't end, but begins. A new chapter will rise and be written in. Today is the day where my mark on society must not end, but must continue to count. I must strive to become a better person and must every day, 'Do A Good Turn Daily'. I shouldn't be asked to do the task at hand, but I must motivate myself to do that task with a purpose."

In the winter, Sydney attacked his most important task to reach the pinnacle of scouting. He chose to build a flat bridge in Faxon Park over a stream. Sydney wrote out the measurements for the bridge and its exact locations. He also had to secure a building permit from the city.

There were obstacles from the start, but Sydney was ready for them. Because the bridge was well into the woods, Sydney decided his best plan of attack would be to pre-cut the wood.

There was still snow on the ground on the day Sydney and a handful of other scouts went to work on the bridge. It took nearly the entire day, but when dusk fell, Faxon Park had a sturdy, 16-foot long, 6-foot wide walking bridge over the stream.

EAGLE SCOUT Sydney Huynh stands on the 16-foot bridge he constructed for Faxon Park as part of his requirements to achieve Scouting's highest honor.

"I chose one day," said Sydney. "It wasn't the type of project you could do over a period of time. It took me a few hours to build it."

Sydney's final step in reaching his Eagle Scout goal was going before the Eagle Board of Review. He had to answer a number of questions relating to the scouts, including many of its skills and laws.

Sydney admitted he had some butterflies with the oral test. "I was a little nervous," he said. "The first question they asked was if I was nervous."

Sydney said there is something for everyone in the scouts and working to attain Eagle Scout doesn't necessarily have to be every kid's goal. And earning the honor of Eagle Scout wasn't without its frustrating moments.

"Sometimes I'd go to a troop or pack meeting when I didn't think I could earn the requirements," he said.

SYDNEY HUYNH and his Troop 42 Scoutmaster Ray Theberge share a moment at the Eagle Court of Honor ceremony where Sydney was awarded the rank of Eagle Scout.

"But then I did and I felt good. Scouting is supposed to be fun. If you stay at the lowest rank and have fun, that's fine."

"I didn't give up and stayed focused on one thing."

Troop 42 Scoutmaster Ray Theberge has witnessed Sydney's maturation from a shy little kid into a teenager who is mature beyond his years. "He was extremely shy and extremely quiet," said Theberge. "Scouting helped Sydney grow out of his shell. Sydney was always the one to go over to the new kid and make him feel welcome."

And Theberge regards Sydney as a scout who lives by the organization's 12 points: Trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent. "He's one of the few boys I've ever met that lives by all 12 points," said Theberge.

The honor was all the more special because both Sydney's father and grandfather were scouts in the home country. When the North Vietnamese invaded the south in the 1970s, they were forced to burn their badges and medals. The north would have considered them examples of capitalism and both men would have been killed.

An honor roll student, Sydney wants to attend college and eventually become a pharmacist. As for the scouts, he has two more years, but wants to work with younger kids and share the knowledge and experience that he has to help them achieve their goals.

"I want to help people be healthy and have a good lifestyle," Sydney said. "I want to still be involved in scouting as an adult. I want to help them have fun in scouting and just enjoy it."

At his Eagle Scout ceremony, Sydney said what he has learned in his years as a scout will never be forgotten. "Scouting is a brotherhood to me, the family that I had never had before. My generation is the new generation of scouts and we will change the world and seek peace and tranquility in the world."

Quincy Police Dispatcher Russell Deming Receives 911 Outstanding Achievement Award

Russell Deming, Dispatcher for the Quincy Police Department, received the state of Massachusetts prestigious "911 Outstanding Achievement Award" at the 3rd Annual Awards Ceremony held recently in Worcester.

Russell, affectionately known as "Russ" to his co-workers and many in the community, has been employed by the Quincy Police Department for the last 32 years. He graduated from Boston College with a degree in economics. He is also a member of the Whiteman Knights of Columbus and plays in the band "Chowda Heads."

As Russ searched for work after graduating college, he was hired by the Quincy Police Department and quickly found this to be his real love and purpose in serving people efficiently and effectively with compassion. He recently appeared on "Your Local Police Department" as part of Quincy Access Television, to educate residents on how "911" and regular business calls are handled. Russ also teaches at North Quincy and Quincy High School's "Student Police Academy" programs, educating students about the role of the Dispatcher in the Police Department.

In 2006, Russ was selected as the Atlantic Community Center's citizen of the year, receiving numerous citations including one from Senator Michael Morrissey.

2.5% Meal Tax On Council Plate

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council will consider a proposal for a 2.5% meals tax that would be added to restaurant dining in the city if approved by the council.

Not all restaurant owners are welcoming the proposal which will increase the total meals tax to 7.5%. Currently, the state imposes a 5% tax on restaurant meals.

Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance, projected a minimum of $784,000 in new revenues, if passed next month. That sum would represent three quarters.

Puleo expects at least $1 million in revenues for a full year of receipts.

"It's fair to say some of the estimates are underestimates," said City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, who suggested the council fast track the proposal recommended by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Puleo and Koch said the new funds will not be used to offset municipal costs but will be added to the Stabilization Fund in anticipation of major hikes in the city's debt service in years to come.

"There is no appetite for property tax increases," Koch said earlier Monday when discussing the meals tax proposal.

Koch said the new revenue would allow "more money in the existing budget" rather than funds being directed to debt service which will increase from $10.5 million this year to $14.8 million in 2013.

The meals' tax proposal was submitted to the council for discussion Monday and will be reviewed at a later date by the Finance Committee.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro asked that there be a public hearing on the proposal which is tentatively set for mid-May.

There are over 200 restaurants in Quincy which would be affected, according to Maralin Manning of the Chamber of Commerce and the Chamber's Co-Director Mark Carey of the Chamber of Commerce.

One local restaurant owner, Greg MacDonald of the Common Market, said he was very disappointed in the proposal.

"I think we have missed an opportunity to promote the city..." MacDonald said, suggesting the welcome sign would offer diners a different low-tax atmosphere unlike other cities.

MacDonald proposed that the city plug a unique and better tax climate like New Hampshire, "Don't you think New Hampshire has positioned itself as a place to shop?"

"It would have been worth the effort," said MacDonald who believes it would have helped the city more.

The Restaurant League, which includes the owners of 75 restaurants, scheduled a meeting on the issue Tuesday after The Quincy Sun deadline.

Chris Walker, the mayor's Director of Policy, will speak at that meeting and Koch plans to meet with the restaurant owners at a later date.

MassDOT Public Meeting Here May 19

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) will hold a public hearing Wednesday, May 19 from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

the Foy Conference Room, second floor, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

According to MassDOT officials, the meeting will provide an overview of how capital planning plays an important role in today's transportation environment, describe asset management systems now in place, and discuss next steps.

As part of the 2009 transportation reform legislation, MassDOT is required to develop a 5-year capital spending plan. MassDOT's Office of Transportation Planning is holding a series of public meetings across the state to solicit comments as part of the plan development process.

Mayor's Budget Cuts 3-10% From City Departments

ian employees of the police department in the current plan.

The police, fire and school budgets will be cut 3.7% while other departments face ten percent slashes under the proposed budget which must be approved by City Council.

Councillors may reduce proposed budgets and line items of all departments except the school budget which was not discussed at Monday's meeting.

In order to fund the layoffs, the Unemployment Compensation account will soar to $3.2 million, an increase of almost $3 million.

"It's not unique to Quincy. It's not unique to Massachusetts," Koch said of the economic squeeze.

"We had a gap of $12 million to deal with," Koch said, later stating, "I didn't expect it to be this deep."

"We've been back to the unions asking for deferrals again," said Koch, acknowledging that not all unions may agree.

"It doesn't change the bottom line in the budgets," said Koch of the deferrals. "It helps offset some of those cuts."

Koch said the budget was developed with an eye to cuts that were "least disruptive" to residents.

While the bottom line appears to show an increase of $3.5 million, Koch explained that the funds were actually in the 2010 budget through federal stimulus money that was designated separately but must be included this year.

In his formal statement, Koch said, "While we will see cuts in our public safety department for the second straight year, all neighborhood police patrols will be maintained, and all of our firehouses will remain open.

"Our Quincy Public Schools will retain its core mission and its place as the single largest recipient of taxpayer funding."

In presenting the budget, Koch illustrated the allocation of city funds through the use of a pie chart. The largest category was education which accounts for 37% of the General Fund expenses with Employee Benefits second highest at 19% and Public Safety third at 17%.

"The growing cost of local government can not be sustained," said Koch whose budget assumes only $2.7 million in new growth and a $2 million reduction in state aid.

The official report also states, "Quincy is anticipating a drop in auto excise receipts of approximately $500,000.

In addition, debt service represents five percent of expenditures and is now at a high of $10.5 million and will increase by $4 million by 2013.

Both the Recreation and Library's budget will be down 9% with four library positions eliminated under the current plan.

In line for some of the hardest hits are Human Resources, an 18.3% cut and Inspectional Services budget slated for a 13.4% cut and the elimination of two positions. The Inspectional Services department will drop from last year's 18 slots to 16. In 2009, Inspectional Services employed 20.

One of the highest increases is the budget allocation for Public Buildings which will add three employees and increase by 20% due to the consolidation of related accounts.

The Assessor's budget increases by 41% due to the state-mandated revaluation of all city properties due in 2011

While the administration's budget is decreased by 10.9%, there are no layoffs in that department or the City Council budget which increases due to the transfer of the Auditor's salary from the Department of Municipal Revenue.

Other departments slated for staff reductions are the Public Works Department by five, Treasurer/Collector, and the Assessors, the equivalent of two and one each at the Park Department, Health Department, Elder Service, Legal Department, Traffic, and Information Technology.

The cemetery budget appears to be reduced but new funds are added through perpetual care accounts, representing a 1.5% increase and maintaining the same staff.

No details of the School Department budget were discussed at Monday's meeting.

The proposed budget lists a bottom line of $821,263,995 for next year's school budget, suggesting an increase over last year's budget of just over $81 million.

However, Koch pointed out that the millions in federal stimulus money were not included in last year's budget.

The school budget will be discussed at the May 12 School Committee meeting.

"Specific cuts in the school department are the purview of the full school committee," said Chris Walker Tuesday.

Walker was responding to rumors of major teacher cuts in the schools. The school budget was not discussed this week.

Nick Puleo, Director of the Department of Municipal Finance prepared the budget documents presented to the council in a binder form with explanatory passages for each item. The budget will be posted on the city's website.

DPW Offering Discounted Rain Barrels, Bio-Orb Composters

The City of Quincy is offering discounted rain barrels as part of the Recycling program.

The rain barrels retail for $119.95, but are available for the bulk discount price of $74.95.

The Bio-Orb® composters, found in online stores for $130 - $170, are available through this program for $89.95. The city has teamed up with The New England Rain Barrel Company to help residents conserve water, reduce pollution from storm water runoff and the use of commercial fertilizers, and cut down on the waste that ends up in the landfill.

Rain Barrels

The rain barrels are made in Peabody, from 55 gallon blue plastic containers originally used in the US food industry. They have a 6" inlet opening in the top covered with a screened louver to keep insects and debris out. The barrels have 2 brass spigots, one to connect to a hose for watering, the other for overflow. A second hose may be connected to the overflow valve to direct excess water away from the home. Included is a 5' starter hose with a shutoff valve and complete installation instructions. Homeowners may join multiple barrels together for additional capacity, and paint the barrels if a different color is preferred.

Rain barrel use is a way to capture and store rainwater from a home's roof gutter system for later use. The New Englander is designed for watering flowers, vegetables, shrubs and trees either by connecting a garden hose to the rain barrel or filling a watering can. By capturing the rain falling on the entire roof area, even a gentle shower will provide plenty of water...as little as ¼ inch on an average roof will fill a barrel.

Storm water pollution is a growing problem. When rainwater flows over the paved surfaces in our cities and suburbs, it picks up fertilizers & pesticides from our lawns, oil & antifreeze from our driveways, pet waste and litter from our sidewalks and gutters, and deposits it all into our streams and rivers. Rain barrel use diverts a portion of the rainwater from the paved surfaces around the home and will filter naturally into the ground when used to water plants and shrubs. By watering plants directly from a garden hose, drip hose, or watering can, we also reduce the water wasted when running a lawn sprinkler.

Composters

The Bio-Orb® is a spherically shaped home composting bin which can be rolled to mix the compost. It's made in America from 100% recycled plastic (50% from home recycling). Bio-Orb® is 3 feet in diameter with a 13 cubic foot capacity and assembles without tools in 10 minutes. It is an enclosed system to keep rodents and raccoons out, with small holes to let in rain, air, beneficial insects and worms. It comes complete with assembly instructions and a composting tip sheet.

Composting is an easy way to improve the health of your landscape by using all natural fertilizer instead of buying chemicals or bagged compost. Compost can be used to enrich the flower or vegetable garden and improve the soil around trees and shrubs. It also makes an excellent soil amendment for house plants and planter boxes, and, when screened, as part of a seed starting mix or lawn top-dressing. Composting kitchen and yard waste can reduce the number of leaf bags brought to the transfer station and reduce waste on trash pickup day. This translates into a smaller carbon footprint and less money spent by the city or town on trash removal which can be better spent on other municipal services.

The unique design of Bio-Orb® makes mixing the compost fun and easy. Just tip it up on its axis (think wagon wheel) and roll it around once or twice a week. This will speed up the breakdown of waste and yield usable compost sooner.

Ordering

For more information and to place your order, call The New England Rain Barrel Company toll free at 877-977-3135 or order online at www.newrainbarrel.com.

Orders for Quincy area residents must be placed by May 24 for pickup at the DPW at 55 Sea St. on Wednesday May 26, between 4 and 7 p.m.

Wollaston School To Dedicate Bench In Memory Of Teacher Joanne Daley

Wollaston Elementary School is preparing to honor Joanne Daley—a wonderful teacher, mother and friend.

Mrs. Daley was a teacher at the Wollaston School from 1987-2009. She taught fourth grade for most of her years there. She was loved and respected by all those who knew her. Her students remember her as being a kind, generous and challenging teacher.

Joanne lost her courageous battle with cancer in April 2009.

Her friends at Wollaston School wanted to find an appropriate way to remember Joanne and all that she meant to the students, families and staff. Assistant principal, Linda Billikas along with other staff members came up with the idea of a bench, set under a tree on the lawn of the school. With the help of A. Monti Granite, staff members, Principal Jim Hennessy and Joanne's family, the plan is now on its way to becoming a reality.

The bench will be a lasting reminder of the contributions that Joanne made to our school, and can be enjoyed by the entire school community.

There will be a dedication Wednesday, May 19 at 3:30 p.m. in the front of the school. It will be an opportunity for Wollaston School alumni and friends to be a part of honoring the memory of such a special person and her remarkable career with the Quincy Public Schools.

All are welcome to join the staff, and Joanne's family for this dedication ceremony.

Anyone wishing to make a donation toward the cost of the bench can send a check to: Wollaston School 205 Beale St., Quincy, MA 02170 Attn: Linda Billikas.

Make checks payable to: Wollaston School Sunshine.

Care Package Collection Drive For U.S. Troops May 15

The Republican committees of Quincy and Milton has joined forces with Weymouth's CarePacks to collect items needed for care packages to be sent to U.S. troops in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The committees will hold their second annual care package collection day from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday May 15 at the Heritage Hall American Legion Post, 114 Granite Ave. in Milton (across from President's Golf Course).

Residents are encouraged to stop by and drop off items for the troops, such as insect repellent (spray/solid), baby wipes, toothpaste, shampoo, razors and shaving cream as well as prepaid phone cards, sunglasses, deodorant, cereal bars, cookies, candy and gum.

In addition to toiletries, non-perishable food and other items, monetary donations as well as cards and letters thanking a U.S. serviceman or woman may also be dropped off at the collection site.

"Memorial Day is the perfect time for Americans to thank the men and women who devote their lives to protecting our freedoms," said Jennifer Logue, chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee. "We hope everyone will show their support by stopping by Heritage Hall on May 15 and dropping off some items for our soldiers."

Monetary donations may be made payable to CarePacks, Inc. and either dropped off May 15 or mailed to CarePacks, Inc., PO Box 536, South Weymouth, MA 02190.

Following the May 15 collection day, donated items will be delivered to CarePacks for packaging and delivery to the troops.

CarePacks is a non-profit organization—staffed and managed entirely by volunteers—that is dedicated to sending care packages to U.S. troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. Founded in 2004, CarePacks' goal is to provide soldiers with supplies to help improve their morale, mental health, and quality of life, and to remind soldiers that they are remembered by people "back home."

Named in honor of the university's first graduate, the award is presented annually to a woman whose significant accomplishments and service make her an exemplary role model for young women. CORLIS MCGEE

Sandra Day O'Connor.

"I am deeply honored to receive this award from one of our sister Nazarene institutions of higher learning," said McGee, who was presented with the award at a recent chapel service at Olivet Nazarene University. "My life was heavily influenced by faculty members at Trevecca Nazarene University, who encouraged me to move beyond my comfort zone, dream bigger dreams and to attempt more challenging endeavors with their help and God's help."

After graduating from Trevecca with a bachelor of science in business administration, McGee continued her education, earning an MBA from the University of Tennessee at Nashville and later a Doctor of Arts in Economics from Middle Tennessee State University. While pursuing her advanced studies, she taught in Trevecca's Business Department, progressing from instructor to full professor and later chair of the university's Department of Business and Economics. Disaster Recovery Center Open For Foreseeable Future us they're people who still need help.

"It's a one-stop shop for anyone affected by the March 12 storm. We'll be open until the numbers fall off dramatically."

FEMA mitigation experts have been on hand to answer questions for residents who are working on fixing the damage to their homes. Many have filled out public assistance worksheets, which include detail of the damage of public infrastructure from March 12.

FEMA will reimburse up to 75% of eligible cost.

"If there's a water system with $100,000 of damage, FEMA will reimburse $75,000," said Inge. "The remainder is made up by the municipality and the state of Massachusetts."

The deadline for flood survivors in the Commonwealth who have not yet registered for both FEMA grants and SBA loans is May 28. Recovery officials are concerned that many survivors in the seven counties that were deemed disaster areas are "short-changing themselves" by not registering for state and FEMA disaster assistance.

Inge said the number of individual assistant applicants is still an unknown. "It may be a few hundred or it may be a few thousand," Inge said. "This (flooding) was an unprecedented event."

Those registering for FEMA assistance in Norfolk County reached 5,390 last Saturday. The number of the seven counties was at 28,383. So far, 21,000 Bay State residents have received more than $41 million in Housing and Other Needs Assistance in the month since President Obama designated the seven counties eligible for Individual Assistance for uninsured disaster-related losses.

Those needing assistance can register online at www.DisasterAssistance.gov or by calling 800-621-FEMA (3362) or 800-462-7585. The toll-free numbers are open daily from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The information needed by both phone and online registration includes a social security number, current and pre-disaster address, telephone number where you can be contacted, insurance information, including policy number if available, total household annual income, a routing and account number from your bank if you wish to have disaster assistance funds transferred directly into your bank account and a description of your losses that were caused by the disaster.

More Proactive Approach Against Bullying

A. DeLeo. "No child need know the terror of a bully."

The law increases efforts to educate students about bullying including regulations on student handbooks and classroom instruction; institutes new rules and expectations for reporting incidents of bullying; provides new opportunities for training for all adults in schools on how to identify, prevent and manage incidents of bullying; and enhances efforts across state and local education, health and law enforcement agencies to build more collaboration to ensure the new efforts are effective.

There is also a provision designating the fourth Wednesday in January as "No Name Calling Day" to increase public awareness of what can be devastating effects of verbal bullying. The provision encourages students to use positive dialogue and pledge not to use hurtful names on that day.

"Now that the comprehensive anti-bullying legislation is law, it is imperative that we work together to bring all the stakeholders – parents, teachers, administration, legislators and especially students – to the table so that we will eliminate bullying from every corner of the Commonwealth," said Jose Rodrigues, the Treasurer of the Governor's Statewide Youth Council.

ENC Choral Union To Present Haydn's 'The Creation' May 9

The Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union will present a free performance of Haydn's The Creation at 3 p.m. Sunday May 9 at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, located adjacent to the ENC campus in Wollaston. All are invited to attend.

Comprised of ENC students and members of the community, the Choral Union will perform along with soloists Jean Danton (soprano), Jason McStoots (tenor) and Donald Wilkinson (bass) under the direction of ENC professor and composer Delvyn Case. The Quincy Bay Chamber Orchestra will also perform at the concert, which is being presented as part of ENC's ongoing Musica Eclectica concert series.

For more than 75 years, the Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union has performed two major masterworks of the choral literature each concert season. In the fall, the Choral Union prepares its annual presentation of Handel's Messiah for a free concert offered as a holiday gift to the city of Quincy. In the spring, the Choral Union performs a different piece each year. Past repertoire has included the Requiems of Brahms, Mozart, and Faure; Mendelssohn's Elijah, and choral masterworks by Bach, Haydn, Beethoven and other composers.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

Many people eventually start to feel comfortable and secure in their surroundings. It's easier to prevent a burglary than deal with its consequences. Dead bolts and alarm systems are two preventive measures to consider. Evaluating your home insurance policy each year is also important. Please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600 for answers to your home insurance questions. We can review your current policy and identify any gaps in coverage. Our office is located at 151 Hancock Street.

As with most consumer products and services, if you want to get the best price in an automobile insurance policy, it pays to shop around. In fact, by simply choosing another insurance company, consumers can save up to hundreds of dollars on their policies. To save time, start your search for the best policy at the best price with your own independent insurance agent. Doing so circumvents long, time-consuming searches on the Internet. An experienced independent agent is familiar with the prices and products of a wide range of insurance companies from which a consumer can make an informed choice. Web sites may offer price comparisons, but they do not help you devise cost-saving strategies the way an agent can.

NOTE: It may be a good idea to offset the recommended increase in the liability coverage of your auto policy by raising the deductible.

soldier from the 186th G Company are our very personal way of showing our support for our service men and women."

Coughlin also said the ribbons would act as 'missionaries' to persuade the thousands of people who pass by City Hall Plaza to remember the service and sacrifices of our men and women serving in harm's way.

"And what more fitting place to do that than outside the seat of government, in this cradle of liberty and across the street from the burial crypt of one of our founding fathers?"

Mayor Koch, who along with the Quincy City Council, supported the Yellow Ribbon Day, thanked the families for establishing this "outward sign by our community of our admiration, affection and gratitude to our soldiers and their families."

Donna Conlin and Susan Lynn, mothers of serving National Guard soldiers, are co-chairs of the Family Readiness Group, a self-sustained support group for families from Eastern Massachusetts whose loved ones were deployed from the Quincy Armory.

Susan's son, Moses Lynn of Germantown, has been in Afghanistan since March. She said, "I think this is the first time that the National Guard at the armory has recognized a family readiness group—we started last spring, we have different events, family gatherings, barbecues."

Donna's son, Sgt. Brendan Conlin, is experiencing his first deployment. Donna expressed her gratitude for technology made available by the website skype.com, which allows family members to see each other while communicating over the internet.

"It's tough when you can't go and touch them whenever you want...thank goodness for SKYPE, I can skype once a week —it's awesome to see his face and know he's OK."

Group-member Anne FitzGerald, whose son Eric is one of the deployed soldiers was pleased that the Armory provides a meeting-place when necessary, as when "packing meetings" are held to send articles to the troops.

Also using the internet to see and hear her husband, Sgt. Joe Zero, is Amy Zero and her two young children, Anthony and Christina, students at Snug Harbor School.

"They can see their Daddy right on line, using Skype...its wonderful, it works very well, and they really feel like he's still there most of the time."

The 186th G Company, whose members number among the 600 National Guardsmen recently deployed to Afghanistan, is responsible for supporting and mentoring Afghan army and police in regard to operations, training, and policy development in support of the government's Operation Enduring Freedom.

Galvin comes to the Adams Inn after serving 29 years with Bank of America as a vice president in corporate operations. He has strong management skills specializing in team building and personnel organization.

few years and most recently has expanded and renovated their Adams Pub.

Palmucci Named Manager For Morrissey DA Campaign

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci announces he will leave his job at the Department of Correction, as an attorney prosecuting dangerous sex offenders across the state to manage Michael Morrissey's campaign for Norfolk County District Attorney.

"Michael is passionate about standing up for people and fighting crime, and those are the kind of values we need in our next District Attorney," Palmucci said. "I loved my job working to protect people from sexual predators every day, but this is a great opportunity to help ensure that the residents of Norfolk County have the experience, commitment and resolve they need in their chief prosecutor."

Palmucci, 32, a former Assistant District Attorney in the Plymouth County District Attorney's Office, has been prosecuting sex offenders for the Department of Correction for the last two years, and is now serving his first term as Ward 4 City Councillor in Quincy, which includes West and South Quincy. He will be based out of Morrissey's Willard Street headquarters, where he will run the day-to-day operations of the campaign that is building an "energetic base of volunteers in all 28 cities and towns in the county."

BRIAN PALMUCCI

"The campaign has already collected 5,000 signatures from each and every community in the county, well beyond the 1,000 required to get on the ballot," Palmucci said.

"Brian is a talented young man, he helped manage the successful campaign of Suffolk County District Attorney Daniel Conley in 2002 when Dan was a lawyer in my law office. I'm thrilled to have him on board," Morrissey said. "In a lot of ways, he personifies what our campaign is all about: experience taking on criminals and the professionalism to get the job done for a law firm that represents our citizens - the District Attorney's Office."

Palmucci said he was drawn to the Morrissey campaign by a combination of factors: his 25 years of trial work as a managing partner in a 50-person law firm and his tough-on-crime record as a state legislator. Palmucci noted that Morrissey wrote one of the first and toughest laws against drug trafficking in Massachusetts, and has consistently sponsored laws aimed at repeat drunk drivers, sexual predators, and domestic violence offenders.

"Michael runs a large law firm, tries complex cases, and at the same time actually supported and authored the laws I used as a prosecutor to put criminals behind bars," Palmucci said. "No one is going to work harder than Michael, and no one is going to represent the people of this County more effectively. I wouldn't have quit my job if I did not believe that so strongly."

Palmucci said his new role will keep him in Quincy on most days, something that he has wanted to do since becoming a ward councillor in January. His previous day job made it difficult for him to answer constituent requests during the day-time hours, but his new role will allow him to spend almost of all his time among his West and South Quincy constituents. Palmucci and his wife, Alison, live just blocks from campaign headquarters.

"I know how dedicated Brian is to his role on the Council, and he is going to be given as much flexibility as needs to do that job," Morrissey said. "Brian has a passion for politics and a proven record of winning campaigns, both other people's and his own. He is a great addition to our team."

Obama Administration Official Visits With QCAP Head Start

About 80 friends of Quincy Community Action Programs' (QCAP) Head Start, led by QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo, recently welcomed Yvette Sanchez Fuentes, director of the U.S. Office of Head Start to Quincy.

The welcome took place at the future site of QCAP's Head Start Early Learning Center, 22 Pray St. in Quincy.

Local dignitaries including Cong. Bill Delahunt, Mayor Thomas Koch, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond and City Council President Kevin Coughlin attended, along with QCAP Board members, Head Start Policy Council members, parents, Head Start staff, and other supporters.

Director Sanchez Fuentes' visit celebrated a $1 million grant from the federal Office of Head Start to support the acquisition and renovation of the former parochial school building. Construction is planned to begin in fall 2010 and will create 150 construction related jobs. Once the renovations are complete, the facility will be home to QCAP's Head Start program and will serve 240 infants, toddlers, and preschool children in 16 classrooms.

"Director Sanchez Fuentes visit is a first for our program," said Strollo, QCAP Executive Director. "We are delighted that she is part of the kick-off of an economic stimulus project that will significantly benefit the area by expanding our services to more children and families, and creating construction and early education jobs," said Strollo.

After an official welcome to Director Sanchez Fuentes from Strollo, Delahunt and Koch, QCAP Board Member Josephine Shea presented her with gifts related to local historical figure Abigail Adams. Shea noted that the Director, like Abigail Adams, is a leader who believes strongly in the importance of universal education.

The event ended with a song from a group of Head Start children, who then joined Director Sanchez Fuentes and dignitaries in planting flowers to symbolize the new beginning for the school, neighborhood and community.

When QCAP's Head Start Early Learning Center is complete the facility will have approximately 30,000 square feet of high quality early childhood space, including 16 classrooms (5 rooms for toddlers and 11 rooms for preschool-age children) for about 240 toddlers and preschoolers.

Special Education Rights Workshop At Ward 4 Neighborhood Center May 15

A workshop on Special Education rights entitled "Basic Rights: Denied" will be held Saturday, May 15 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Ward 4 Neighborhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., Quincy.

The workshop will be presented by Ellen Chambers, a special education advocate-turned-activist. She will explain what Massachusetts with special needs are entitled to under the law, how to increase the chances these youngsters will receive the service they need to succeed in school and in life.

Chambers is the recipient of the Diane Lipton Award for Outstanding Educational Advocacy on Behalf of Children with Disabilities given by the national Council of Parent Attorneys and Advocates, and the Women of Justice Award given by Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly.

She is the founder and executive director of the non-profit group special education watchdog group, SPEDWatch.

Happy Mother's Day

Mother's Day Gifts To Remember

(NAPSA)-The key to making Mother's Day memorable is to make it personal. When shopping for the moms in your life, remember to focus on what she really likes, wants or wouldn't purchase for herself.

Here are some personalized gift ideas:

A Gift in Her Name

If your mom has a favorite cause or social concern, consider making a charitable donation in her name. Make sure the organization you are donating to reflects her values and lifestyle. For example, if she loves animals, you may want to make a donation to a local animal rescue organization on her behalf. Make her a personalized card to let her know all about your gift and the organization. Include a photo of the family pet.

Her Name in Print

Consider giving your mom a set of custom-printed note cards emblazoned with her name or monogram. It's a gift she can use all year round for writing notes to friends and family or as thank-you cards.

Retailers such as FedEx Office can help design the cards if you are among the creatively challenged. They have a wide range of design templates to get you started from floral and elegant to modern and monogrammed. You can even order them online if you prefer.

Basket of Luxury

Chocolate is almost always a hit, particularly if your mom has a taste for handmade confections. Create a basket of goodies with a selection of her favorite chocolates and baked goods. Add a variety of gourmet coffees or teas and

Works of Art

Take drawings made by your kids and turn them into quality art pieces in a few simple steps. Make photocopies of the drawings in the sizes you'd like for the framed pieces. These color copies will also last longer and look nicer in the frames than the originals. Next, visit a local craft or frame store to choose the mats and frames. Then, trim down the copies if needed and put it all together for a truly personal present this Mother's Day!

Personalized gifts make great presents. Consider giving custom note cards this Mother's Day.

Shower Your Way To Younger-Looking Skin

(NAPSA)-Not just a pretty face: There's more to having a youthful appearance than soft, smooth facial skin. Your neck, décolletage, hands, arms and knees are also prone to visible signs of skin aging.

"As body skin ages, it loses moisture and elasticity, which can make skin appear older as well as lead to dryness," says beauty scientist Rolanda Johnson.

A disparity between face and body skin care can exaggerate the signs of aging, according to evolutionary biologist Dr. Bernhard Fink. He recently conducted a study on the effect of body skin's appearance in relation to perception of age. It found that in terms of age and attractiveness perceptions, people are sensitive to the appearance of body skin. In addition, the study indicated that when judged independently from the face, body skin, if maintained, is perceived up to 10 years younger and adds to the overall perception of youthfulness.

"The study indicates that skin around the neck and chest, arms and hands are important areas for women in terms of age perception," said Dr. Fink. "Keeping your skin moisturized is one of the most basic things you can do to prevent visible signs of aging. Using products that go beyond basic moisturization to provide additional anti-aging benefits can be a further help."

To that end, there's now a product that helps you shower your way to younger-looking skin. It contains a proprietary technology that goes beyond cleansing and basic moisturizing to remove dry skin cells and improve skin cohesiveness for younger-looking, more radiant skin. It fights seven signs of aging, brightens dull skin, evens skin tone and improves elasticity in seven days.

The product, Olay Total Effects 7-in-1 Advanced Anti-Aging Body Wash, comes in two formulations: Deep Penetrating Moisture, with jojoba butter and VitaNiacin; and Exfoliate & Replenish, with microderm beads and VitaNiacin to remove dry skin cells and replenish your skin with moisturizers.

"We lavish attention on faces and bodies but necks get no respect," said author Charla Krupp, who examines over 1,000 smart, easy ways of hiding fat without dieting in her book "How To Never Look Fat Again." "The neck often ages faster than the face. A lot of women who began using a sunscreen on their faces a decade or two ago continued to tan their neck and bodies and the contrast between neck and face is unsightly."

Krupp recommends daily use of a broad-spectrum SPF 15 or higher sunscreen. Re-apply it every two hours if you've been swimming or perspiring. Also, wear protective clothing and stay out of the sun at midday and when at high altitudes to protect your skin from premature aging.

For more information, visit www.olay.com or call (800) 285-5170.

Talking Straight About Debt

Anytime somebody talks about having a "strategy" to get out of debt, it pays to be leery. There are scams galore, including those that promise (for a fee) to take your payments and make arrangements with lenders to accept a smaller amount each month. (Unless you send the check yourself, you really don't know where it's going.)

However, there's a new book out that talks about strategy, and it's one you can trust: "Debt-Free Forever (Take Control of Your Money and Your Life)" by Gail Vaz-Oxlade (Collins, $14.95).

There's a lot of no-nonsense tough love in Vaz-Oxlade's plans, and there should be if a strategy to reduce debt is going to succeed. After all, the average consumer has $16,000 in credit-card debt. But under the humor (yes, there's that, too) is a sound plan. She tells you upfront that it's going to be hard work, right in the first line of Chapter One, then moves quickly into the all-important first step: Find out where your money's going (spreadsheets are provided in the book).

Step two, facing your debt, is where Vaz-Oxlade takes things beyond the typical "get out of debt" book. Not only are debts written down and categorized, they're critiqued and analyzed for what they really cost.

There is plenty of hands-on help. Focus on long-term goals. Decide what you really want, because with debt control, it matters. Write down your core values, prioritize and set a goal. Find friends who are compatible with that goal (spending less to have fun). Swap bad habits for good ones.

"Debt-Free Forever" explains how to get a handle on disappearing money (what happens when the pocket monster eats all the change when you break a $20), 401(k) plans, insurance, credit cards and more. There are worksheets, guidelines, instructions on how to make a budget -- everything you need to become debt free, except for a pencil, piece of paper and a calculator.

Vaz-Oxlade has a television show called "Til Debt Do Us Part" (about couples in debt) on CNBC and has written 11 books on finances. As she says on her blog: "Money is only a tool. You can use it to your advantage or you can misuse it to your detriment. You decide."

David Uffington regrets that he cannot personally answer reader questions, but will incorporate them into his column whenever possible. Write to him in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columnreply@gmail.com.

Check With Local Officials For Permits, Advice

Rebuild Wisely After A Disaster

Bay State homeowners, landlords and business owners are urged to check with local government building officials regarding permits before repairing or rebuilding a structure damaged by the record-setting March rainfall and resulting flooding.

There are often strict local requirements on how and where structures may be renovated, especially for residences located in a floodplain. By consulting with local building permitting officers, home and business owners can assure that any repair or rebuilding project meets current standards and will not require further work to bring it into compliance.

Recovery specialists suggest that a visit to local building officials also affords an opportunity for residents to review the latest updates to floodplain maps as well as learn about low-cost risk-reduction measures that can reduce the likelihood of future flood damages.

Residents in federally designated disaster counties may visit Disaster Recovery Centers to talk with FEMA Hazard Mitigation specialists for rebuilding advice and low-cost remedies to reduce risks from future storm hazards. Most DRCs are open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily Monday through Saturday.

To find the DRC nearest to you, use the FEMA helpline option at 800-621-FEMA (3362) or 800-462-7585 (TTY) for people with speech or hearing disabilities. The lines are open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. Multilingual assistance is available.

City Planners Attend Regional Conference

Staff members from the city's Department of Planning and Community Development recently attended the Spring Conference of the National Community Development Association, held in Worcester.

Topics of the conference included the Homelessness Prevention and Rapid Re-Housing (HPRP) Program, the Sustainable Communities Planning Grant Program, the Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant Program, and Fair Housing -- all of which are Federal programs that the Department of Planning and Community Development is currently administering or applying for funds.

Sean Glennon, Principal Planner, in the city's Department of Planning and Community Development, was on the HPRP panel, along with representatives from the State, and one representative from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Of the 37 entities throughout New England that received an HPRP grant, Quincy and only one other city were selected to be on the panel.

Glennon gave a presentation of Quincy's "best practices" of its HPRP program as a model community, and also gave a demonstration of a computer module he developed in Microsoft Excel to assist his department in administering the city's HPRP program. Since the demonstration, both the New England HUD office and HUD headquarters in Washington, D.C., have asked Glennon to make the module available for communities to use both regionally and nationwide.

"It was an honor just to be asked to present at the conference," said Glennon. "I never expected the module to take off as it has, and I'm thrilled that a Federal agency is looking at our program as a national model."

Glennon credits the success of Quincy's HPRP program to his colleagues in the department, and the staff of Father Bills & MainSpring and Quincy Community Action Programs, who administer this program at the service level.

Keeping Your Lawn Disease-Free

"Lawn diseases are tough to diagnose because they can look like insect damage or even fertilizer burn," says Lance Walheim, Bayer Advanced(tm) Garden Expert and co-author of "Lawn Care for Dummies." "So the first step is to know what's causing the trouble and then attack it early. That'll save you time, money and headaches."

Lawn diseases are often caused by bad lawn-care habits. Here are some simple steps to prevent common lawn diseases:

- Proper drainage and watering methods: Most lawn diseases thrive in moist or humid conditions, so you need to make sure your lawn has proper drainage and is being watered correctly. If part of your lawn is constantly wet, you've got a breeding ground for fungus, so be sure to aerate to improve drainage. Another tip: Be sure to water your lawn early in the morning so that it dries off in the afternoon. Deep, infrequent waterings give your grass time to dry out as well.

- Read the fertilizer label: Some diseases like heavily fertilized lawns. Others like underfertilized lawns.

SIMPLE STEPS can help prevent lawn disease.

You can help prevent lawn diseases if you follow the recommended fertilization schedule for your type of grass.

- There's a correct way to mow: Keep your lawn mower's blades razor sharp. Dull blades tear the grass. That injures it and provides a breeding ground for fungus spores. Don't cut wet grass. Wait for your lawn to dry off from the morning dew or after a rainfall.

- Use a preventive fungus control product to prevent common lawn diseases such as brown patch, dollar spot, rust and others.

Energy-Efficient Appliances Cut Bills And Save The Environment

In fact, the amount of energy used in your home matters on a larger scale. U.S. households use about one-fifth of the total energy consumed in the nation each year-and the number of home devices requiring electricity continues to grow.

"Energy prices are rising and are predicted to increase more in the future. As a result, there is growing interest in energy-efficient appliances that can help save money," said John Farley, senior environmental and brand marketing manager for Bosch home appliances.

Kitchen and laundry appliances alone account for more than 35 percent of home energy use, with refrigerators accounting for approximately 40 percent of that figure.

Besides helping Americans to save $17 billion on their utility bills in 2009, the Energy Star program, which promotes the use of energy-efficient appliances, has also reduced greenhouse gas emissions equivalent to those of 30 million vehicles.

Manufacturing "green" appliances involves many different steps-from using raw nonferrous materials such as steel and glass and minimizing energy, water and material waste in production to reducing energy consumption and harmful emissions resulting from distribution.

Yet 90 percent of the environmental impact of appliances comes from their operation in the home. Today's high-efficiency appliances are making a measurable difference in conserving energy and water during their life span in the home.

SHOP ENERGY-SMART. Energy-saving appliances save consumers money and reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Heavy Rains Take Toll on Basements

Q: I have a dry basement. But recently, after heavy rains, I noticed that in two corners of the basement the paint was bubbling up a bit and, when I pressed one of the bubbles, the paint split and water trickled out. I haven't experienced dampness issues before. What's the problem? - Gary in Waltham, Mass.

A: Considering all the pump hoses I saw trailing from basements around my neighborhood following recent heavy rains in the Northeast, a little dampness doesn't seem like much. But you're paying attention to the problem right away, when it's relatively small and new -- and that's actually very important. It can save you from having to bale out the basement a few years from now.

The first thing to do is to find out if water is draining correctly away from your foundation, or if something is impeding that drainage. Check outside the house, near those corners. Are there gutter downspouts nearby? Do you have shrubs, hedges or other plants in place next to the foundation?

If gutter downspouts are near the corners, make sure the water is draining well away from the foundation and that it disperses evenly. The small bend at the bottom of the downspout may not be enough -- water should be directed at least a foot away from the foundation, so you might need to purchase a gutter extension.

Should the rains return before you're able to do that, you could do what my neighbor did in a pinch during the storms, and improvise a drain extension. What he did was set a flat piece of concrete directly beneath the downspout opening, raised the end slightly by placing a few pebbles underneath so the water flowed away faster. He then found a length of flexible plastic tubing about 4 feet long in his shed and duct-taped that to the end of the downspout.

Check the distance of plants from the house. They should be planted more than a foot away from the foundation to prevent their roots from extending to the foundation and allowing water to seep in through the cracks they exploit. Plants that are set too near, or plants whose roots have crept to the foundation, should be removed and new plants placed farther away.

If you don't see improvement in the water seepage, or would just like to make sure, have a licensed contractor double-check the basement and foundation for unseen damage. The faster you tackle any issues, the less you'll have to shell out for repairs down the road.

HOME TIP: Inspect your home's gutter system twice a year, in spring and fall, for debris clogs and damage to the gutters.

A Job Well Done

On April 25, at approximately 9:15 p.m., Officer Timothy Simmons, on foot patrol in Quincy Square, approached the Washington Street side of the Thomas Crane Public Library, when he observed four people standing on the lawn area.

Officer Simmons recognized three of the four from prior police related incidents. There were two males and two females, and they appeared agitated. The officer continued to observe the group and then witnessed one of the males assault one of the females and quickly stopped by the other male.

The three suspects who were involved in the assault incident then gathered around a cell phone briefly, which led to the same male suspect (#1) yell at the same female he assaulted, followed by a push. As Officer Simmons neared the scene, he notified dispatch that he was responding to an assault. The other male then pushed suspect #1 away from the victim.

Officer Simmons observed that the victim was pregnant. The officer stepped in between the males and broke up the fight as back-up arrived. He then interviewed the parties to determine what occurred.

The second female stated that suspect #1 was her ex boyfriend and that they broke up in February 2010. She said that her ex boy friend took photos of her on his cell phone and started showing people. She added that the purpose of tonight's meeting was to transfer some of the photos to another phone and erase the rest. While this was being done, suspect #1 began to "flip out" and assaulted the victim. The victim confirmed that she was six months pregnant and that suspect #1 knew she was too.

The victim stated that she was erasing and transferring photos from the suspect's cell phone when he became agitated and assaulted her. At this time, Officer Simmons placed suspect #1, a 19 year-old homeless man, under arrest for "Assault & Battery on a Pregnant Person."

After giving the suspect his Miranda rights, the suspect stated that he was aware that the victim was pregnant. Once at the station, it was determined that the suspect was out on recognizance/bail from Norfolk Superior Court for "Armed Assault to Rob, Armed Assault, and Attempt Larceny Over $250." These crimes occurred in Quincy in November 2009.

In his report, Officer Simmons stated that he has had numerous run-ins with the suspect, who hangs around the Square with no real purpose. Based on this incident and his criminal record, Officer Simmons requested that the court revoke the suspect's recognizance / bail.

Nice Work!

A SENSITIVE ISSUE

Those who experience muscle weakness as well as a loss of feeling and the ability to distinguish hot and cold in the feet may have peripheral neuropathy. There are numerous causes of this condition including injury from trauma and inflammation or nerve destruction by disease. Common diseases such as diabetes, vitamin deficiency, and alcoholism can also lead to neuropathy. Symptoms usually progress slowly over a period of months. Pain and numbness ensue, and the skin can become extremely sensitive. Although there is no proven treatment for peripheral neuropathy, there are some options available to help relieve the symptoms. If you suspect that you are experiencing neuropathy, make an appointment with your podiatrist immediately.

The first step in treating any foot problem is an accurate diagnosis.

This requires a comprehensive history, physical exam, and, in some cases, x-rays and lab tests. Depend on it - whatever is causing your foot pain, whether it's peripheral neuropathy, a hereditary condition, or any number of ills that can plague the feet - you can count on us for relief. For family podiatry that combines state-of-the-art technology and old-fashioned care and compassion, call 781-986-3668 for an appointment at 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Certain antidepressants and anti-seizure medications are effective for relieving neuropathy symptoms in some people.

Stop The Common Cold Or Flu From Ruining Your Vacation

(NAPSA)-In the next few months, people across the country will pack their bags and head out on vacation. Students will flood popular destinations on their school break and families will load up the car to visit relatives. Some vacationers will head to warmer climates, while other people will explore other countries. Regardless of the destination, everyone is looking for a little rest and relaxation, and nothing can ruin a vacation quicker than catching the common cold or flu. But cold and flu symptoms should never get in the way of living life to the fullest.

While living a healthy lifestyle, washing your hands and staying hydrated are credited for warding off the everyday illnesses, sometimes, catching a cold or the flu is inevitable, even while on vacation. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that 5 to 20 percent of the U.S. population comes down with the flu during each flu season. Regardless of the time of year, travelers will come in contact with millions of germs throughout their travels. It's not uncommon to find your airplane seat next to someone who has a cough, or board a train alongside a traveler suffering from the sniffles. Even though staying healthy is the desirable hope of all travelers, getting sick doesn't have to mean your vacation is over.

While there isn't a cure for the common cold, fortunately, years of research from the trusted cold and flu experts at Vicks have found dependable ways to alleviate the symptoms. An important part of recovery from a cold or flu is to get a good night's sleep. Taking an over-the-counter product for nighttime multi-symptom cold relief can help you get the rest you need. Vicks NyQuil features the same trusted multiple-symptom cold relief as the original formula, but is now updated and enhanced with improved Original and Cherry liquid flavors. Getting lots of rest is vital to lessening the duration of your cold or flu. Luckily, while on vacation there should be a lot of options to help you rest. Get cozy in your hotel room and read a book, or find a shady spot on the beach and take a long nap.

Other than getting lots of rest, drinking plenty of liquids is essential for a quick recovery from a cold or flu. If this doesn't help ease symptoms, products such as Vicks VapoSyrup can help relieve chest congestion by thinning out bothersome mucus and phlegm, and relieving nasal congestion.

Along with treating your symptoms, make sure to build up your immune system with a balanced diet. Being on vacation can make eating healthy, fun and easy. Load up on local fruits or head to the nearest farmer's market for fresh veggies. If you're not in the mood to search for a good meal, put on your pajamas and order room service. Vacations are about relaxing, after all, so don't be afraid to slow down and let someone do the work for you.

It's always best to take preventative measures against getting sick, but not feeling well because of a cold or flu shouldn't put an end to all vacation plans. Not feeling well is a great excuse to finally finish a book that was started months ago or to sit back and enjoy the local scenery.

Low Sodium Level Causes Many Symptoms

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What can you tell me about a low sodium level? My visiting friend (from England) was refused embarkation on his cruise because he was acting belligerent and confused. The ship's doctor sent him to a hospital. He had scans, an EEG and numerous blood and urine tests. Everything was normal except he had low sodium. His insurance carrier sent a doctor from England to accompany him on a flight back to London. He has since seen his own doctor. His sodium level has risen. What happened to him? -B.L.

ANSWER: Sodium has many functions. It keeps body fluids at the right level. It maintains blood pressure. It's essential for muscle contractions. It participates in generating the heartbeat. It carries a positive electric charge, so it balances the negatively charged body substances.

A drop in blood sodium leads to fatigue, nausea and weakness. If the level dips farther, people become confused and dizzy. At very low levels, they could have a seizure and lapse into a coma.

Your friend's doctor has the task of finding out why your friend's sodium level fell. In quite a few instances, it comes about from an inappropriate release of a body hormone called ADH, antidiuretic hormone. This hormone stops kidney urine production. The result is too much water in the body. The extra water dilutes sodium and produces a low reading. Liver diseases, troubles with the adrenal glands and a sluggish thyroid gland are other causes for a lowering of blood sodium.

Restoring the body's sodium content is not too difficult. Tracking the reason why it dropped is.

Has your friend's mental function normalized now that his sodium level has returned to normal? If it has not, then his doctor has to look for explanations of his erratic behavior that have nothing to do with his sodium.

The booklet on sodium and potassium explains why these minerals are so important and what happens when they are out of kilter. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No 202W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been eating ice cream and cookies sweetened with Splenda for about four years, enjoying them very much and not experiencing any bad side effects. Then someone told me that Splenda is really bad poison and that it has made a lot of people sick, so I stopped using it. I have noticed no improvement, but I didn't have anything wrong in the first place. I miss Splenda foods. What is your opinion? -N.B.

ANSWER: Splenda is not bad poison. It's made from sugar. It's a product that is 600 times sweeter than sugar. It is not absorbed, so it contributes no calories to those who eat it. It's FDA-approved, and I trust the people at the Food and Drug Administration more than I trust your informant. There's no reason for you not to use it.

Some people delight in passing on alarming information. Your "someone" has to be one of them.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

COMPETING INTERESTS

Chiropractors have long extolled the benefits of chiropractic treatment for younger patients, particularly athletes. Now, a recent study shows that chiropractic treatment for teenagers who play competitive sports may be more appropriate than some had thought. According to the study of nearly 5,000 college students, those who had been involved in sports since elementary school were more likely to suffer from low back pain than their less-competitive peers. In fact, 72% of the competitive sports players suffered back pain compared with 62% of those with less competitive sports experience. This study shows that youth alone does not provide immunity from back pain, whether or not youngsters play sports. Chiropractic is suitable for patients of all ages and activity levels.

PLASMA JETS INSTEAD OF DRILLS?

The future of dentistry may be more akin to science fiction than patients might ever have believed. In fact, it seems that new research involving streams of bacteria-killing plasma may replace today's drills in the near future. Plasma is formed when electrons are emitted by energized gases. In this case, researchers used a relatively cool beam of purple plasma to eliminate oral bacteria in dental cavities. The plasma beam removed dentin (the material beneath the enamel that comprises the majority of the tooth) more selectively than a conventional drill. While this research is preliminary, researchers believe that plasma jets can be ready for removing tooth decay in as few as three to five years.

This would certainly make visits to the dentist's office a bit less nerve-racking. Talk to us about dental concerns. As your dental professional, we pride ourselves on providing the highest quality dental care for you and your family, in a relaxing and comfortable environment. A good experience with dentistry is based on making the right choice in a family dentist and in taking steps to keep dental costs at a minimum through self-care at home between visits. P.S. It isn't the heat of the plasma that is thought to kill cavity-causing bacteria; it is the highly reactive molecules produced by charged oxygen molecules surrounding the plasma jet that get the job done.

4-2 Victory Over QHS Followed By 16-1 Loss To Pembroke HS; QHS Beats Scituate 10-2

Red Raiders Need to Get Back On Track

By SEAN BRENNAN

The law of averages has not been working in the favor of the North Quincy Red Raiders. Over the last two weeks, NQHS has had its share of close-but-not-close-enough games, losing multiple times by one-run, and once in extra frames. A much-needed, 4-2, victory over Quincy High School last Friday night at Adams Field, which brought North Quincy's record to 5-8 overall, was followed by a 16-1 defeat at home against Pembroke High School on Monday.

This team is hot one day and ice cold the next. If NQHS wants to advance into postseason play then consistency and grit are going to need to come into play big time over the last part of their schedule.

The Red Raiders are currently 5-9 overall. The team needs to reach ten wins to qualify for the Division I postseason.

"We have been pitching pretty well over these last two weeks, but we just haven't been able to get timely hits when we really needed them," said NQHS head coach John Fidalgo on Tuesday. "We are not giving our pitching enough support. I really feel like we are on the verge of breaking out. That is sometimes the trend in baseball, and if we play good baseball, we are going to win some of these close games."

"The team needs individual players to step up because when we show up to play we can beat anybody. It is not an issue of talent with this team."

Unfortunately for the Red Raiders no one showed up against Pembroke HS. North Quincy got blown out 16-1. The lone offensive star for NQHS was junior Colin Ryan (two hits).

"Tough game," said Fidalgo. "They showed up and we didn't. We are going to have to regroup after this game."

The Pembroke game came on the heels of a 4-2 victory over cross-city rival Quincy High School last Friday night.

The Presidents (5-6 overall) jumped out to an early 1-0 lead on a RBI double from Bobby Kozlowski in the second inning, but North Quincy, behind a strong pitching performance from Ryan O'Connell (complete-game, three hits, three strikeouts), tied the game in the third inning when Colin Ryan singled home pinch runner Torrey Gustin.

The Raiders upped their lead to 4-1 with a three-run fifth inning. Senior center-fielder Devin Hudson drove in two runs with a single and junior Mike Stille drove in a run with a RBI single.

Quincy's Kevin Keith plated the Presidents second run of the game. Junior Lukas McDonough pitched well for QHS in the loss.

"We played well and hit well in that game," said Fidalgo. "It was a nice win. Quincy is a strong team."

The Presidents rebounded from their 4-2 loss to NQHS with a 10-2 victory over Scituate High School on Monday.

Kevin Keith (4-1 record) pitched a complete-game three-hitter, and finished with seven strikeouts. Lukas McDonough (2-for-4, two-run home run, RBI single) and Bobby Kozlowski (3-for-4, three RBI) led the Quincy offensive attack.

Notes: North Quincy is set to play a makeup game against Scituate HS today (Thursday) before traveling to Rockland HS on Friday. Next week NQHS will play at Hingham HS (May 10), at home versus Whitman-Hanson HS (May 12), and at Silver Lake HS on May 13... Quincy played at home against Duxbury HS yesterday and will host Hingham HS on Friday at Adams Field (4 p.m.). Next week QHS will play at home against Pembroke (May 10), on the road at Hanover HS (May 12), and at home against Randolph HS (May 14).

Girls Softball

Presidents shutout

Red Raiders, 6-0

Junior hurler Kori Sorensen threw a complete-game and finished with 13 strikeouts as the Quincy Presidents (9-1 overall, 6-1) knocked off the North Quincy Red Raiders, 6-0, last Friday evening.

Seniors Erin Curran (2-for-3, RBI) and Kylie Kozlowski (1-for-3, RBI) were the offensive stars for QHS.

NQHS senior pitcher Sammi Bonnani went five innings and had eight strikeouts.

Emma Ainsley went 2-for-3 with a double against Sorensen.

NQHS currently has a record of 3-5 overall.

The Presidents continued their dominance of the Patriot League's Fisher Division following a 2-0 shutout of Scituate HS on Monday. Sophomore pitcher Nicole Parry scattered five hits over seven innings and struck out eight batters to earn the win on the mound.

Seniors Julia Yee (1-for-2, two runs scored) and Olivia Berry (2-for-3, RBI) were the offensive catalysts for the Presidents.

The Red Raiders rebounded nicely from their loss to Quincy with a 13-1 win over Pembroke HS Monday afternoon. The win gives NQHS a 3-5 record this spring.

Sophomore Jackie Hughes earned her first varsity win on the mound going five-innings and finishing with three strikeouts.

Freshman Liz Kelley went 3-for-4 with five RBI and senior Jessica Ainsley went 3-for-4 with a RBI.

Notes: Quincy played at Duxbury HS on Wednesday. The team will travel to Hingham HS on Friday before traveling to Pembroke on May 10 to play the Titans... North Quincy played ABWHHS at home yesterday and will host Rockland HS on Friday (3:30 p.m.). The Red Raiders will host Hingham HS on May 10.

Anon.

On Mother's Day - we think back... We know mother is someone special... a special person who constantly tried to shape our character for the best. In thinking back, we realize we can never repay her for her uncountable acts of kindness; her gifts of patience, love and sacrifice. Nor can we reimburse her for the tears she shed for us in times past.

Mother's Day... What better time is there for us to re-dedicate ourselves to do better - to make our lives more meaningful to God and to our fellow man? Would not a message of such intent, by letter, card, phone or personal visit... or promise by prayer... be a priceless gift to her?

place exotic. Or you might be setting up meetings with potential clients or employers. Whatever it is, good luck.

Romance dominates this week when Cupid spears the Archer, for a change. Positive things also are happening in the workplace. Expect important news to arrive by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Anyone trying to bully the Sea Goat -- whether it involves a personal or a professional matter -- will learn a painful lesson. Others will also benefit from the Goat's strong example.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Congratulations. With things going the way they are, you should be able to spare some time and take a break from your hectic schedule for some well-earned fun and games.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21)

Boston Firm Selected To Design New Central

The Massachusetts School Building Authority, working with the Central Middle School Building Committee, has selected the firm A13, LLC to design the new Central Middle School in a major step forward for the project, officials said Tuesday.

The Boston-based firm has designed dozens of school projects in Massachusetts and other parts of the country, including in Whitman, Lynnfield and Hull.

The firm was picked by a designer selection panel that included members of the School Building's Designer panel and three members of Quincy's Central Building Committee, Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Central Principal Jen Fay-Beers and City Solicitor James Timmins.

Mayor Thomas Koch is expected to deliver to the City Council in coming weeks the borrowing package needed to purchase land for the proposed site - the former Winfield House property - across from Mer-rymount Park.

Koch stressed that the Central Project must move forward despite the economic climate because Central is already 115 years old and deemed by state authorities as in dire need of replacement.

The School Building Authority will reimburse the city for about 68 percent of the cost for the new school. Koch has said repeatedly that he will propose selling the current Central site to help defray land-acquisition costs.

Turbine Community Meeting May 24

Mayor Thomas Koch's Office will host a community meeting Monday, May 24 at 7 p.m. at the Squantum Elementary School on a joint proposal with the City of Boston to develop a 1.65 megawatt wind turbine on Moon Island in Boston Harbor.

"Our team is greatly looking forward to talking about this project with the community," Koch said, "but this meeting will be a first step in what will be an extensive public process."

The proposed turbine, which would be a maximum of roughly 400 feet tall at the tip of its highest blade, the northern most area of is proposed to be located in NORFOLK COUNTY District Attorney William Keating receives the Alfred P. Malaney Award from Margaret R.S. Krippendorf, Esq., at the 52nd annual Quincy District Court Law Day Observance. The award is presented in memory of Mr. Malaney, an active practicing attorney in Quincy, who died unexpectedly at the age of 51 just prior to becoming the incoming president of the Quincy Bar Association.

Quincy District Court Law Day Theme:

'Enduring Traditions, Emerging Challenges'

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

"Law in the 21st Century: Enduring Traditions, Emerging Challenges" was the theme of Quincy District Court's 52nd annual Law Day, held May 5 to honor recipients of awards for distinguished service and outstanding performance in the field of law and law enforcement.

A standing-room-only crowd of family-members, public officials, Quincy Court judges, law enforcement officers, educators and community leaders saluted the flag presented by The Quincy Color Guard before beginning the presentations.

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating presented the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service

ATTORNEY VICTOR GARO, who proved the innocence of Joseph Salvati and helped commute his life sentence, was the keynote speaker at the Quincy District Court's 52nd annual Law Day observance.

In June, 2009 Officer

Curran saved the life of a woman who had fallen from a boat which had run aground and administered emergency medical care to her. He was praised for his "quick action, seamanship, and dedication to duty."

A member of the Marine Unit's Dive Team, Curran is a graduate of Mass. Maritime Academy and a veteran of the Iraq war, where he served as a military police officer with the U.S. Army Reserve.

"It's such a great tribute this early-on in my career to receive this high-expectation award such as the Robert Dana Award...I was totally blown away by it."

Also receiving the Dana Award were seven police officers from the Braintree

Police Dept., and four Milton Police officers, who had intercepted a murderer in a gruesome crime scene in Milton last year, where two little girls were killed.

Officers from the Cohasset and Weymouth Police Departments were also awarded for deeds which D.A. Keating referred to as "extraordinary examples of service to the community."

This year marked the 26th anniversary of Dana's passing, the Metropolitan Police officer who was killed assisting a Milton Police Officer during a traffic stop in 1984.

Keating also presented the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award to Siobhan Foley, Esq. for her "exemplary service to the court."

The Quincy Bar Association thanked Keating for his "twelve years of service to Norfolk County."

"District Attorney Keating is the ideal recipient of this prestigious award," said Margaret R.S. Krippendorf, Esq. "He captures the essence of what this award embodies and, in doing so, he exemplifies all that we expect of our District Attorney — to protect the innocent as well as to convict the guilty."

Keating has served as Norfolk County D.A. for 12 years. He is not seeking reelection as district attorney. He is a Democrat candidate for Congress.

VIVID DREAM

It is well worth noting that a "vivid pink," five-carat diamond recently sold for a record $10.8 million. The fabulous diamond gemstone is "cushion-cut," which is an antique cut that resembles a cross between the Old Mine Cut (a deep cut with large facets) and a modern oval cut. While the cushion cut is not as fiery and brilliant as many modern cuts tend to be, its classic look exudes romance. Although the South African-mined diamond is not quite flawless, its highly saturated color is considered to be near perfect. The fact that the vivid pink diamond commanded a price that exceeds $2 million per carat should not be lost on consumers. High-quality colored diamonds are highly desirable. We have come to believe that selecting diamond jewelry is eminently more involved than purchasing an automobile and every bit as complicated as buying a home—there are that many variables to consider! Don't make this important decision alone. Simplify your life and trust an experienced, qualified jeweler to guide you through the intricacies of fine gemstone purchase. When you're considering the investment in diamond jewelry, we're ready with knowledge, advice, and a spectacular selection at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636.

City's Retirement Fund Posts 18% Increase

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Officials at the city's retirement fund posted an 18.8% increase in the fund investment balance in 2009 in contrast to a major hit in 2008.

According to city records, the fund balance increased from approximately $224 million in December 2008 to $252 million in December, 2009.

"We're going in the right direction," Ed Masterson, Executive Director of the Retirement Services recently told the Finance Committee. Masterson, also, reviewed the figures with The Quincy Sun this week.

Masterson cautioned councillors that the increase does not yet bring the fund total back to its 2007 high of approximately $312 million.

In addition, Masterson discussed the city's unfunded pension liability which is $158,401,998 as of fiscal year 2011.

That $158 million total will be adjusted this year, according to Masterson who said the last valuation was in 2007. The new valuation will be announced in mid-summer.

"It's an old number," said Masterson, noting that the updated figure should be finalized by mid-July.

The unfunded pension liability must be covered by 2023, according to Masterson who stated that several small blocks of city payments won't be due until 2028.

Masterson said that state legislators are considering a bill that would extend the city's unfunded pension liability payments to 2040.

At the committee meeting, Chairman John Keenan noted that the city would pay more if its employees were covered by Social Security.

curity.

"There is a belief out there that public employees don't contribute," said Keenan, pointing the percentages that the employees currently contribute to their pensions.

With Social Security, the city would owe millions more and lose the employees' contribution.

Keenan said moving the employees to Social Security sounds like a good idea but it isn't. "It sounds like a quick easy fix."

After-Hour Pothole, Street-Light Hotline: 617-859-9011

The city has launched a pilot program allowing residents to call in pothole requests, graffiti, an unlit street lights after business hours and speak to a live person.

The new program, in conjunction with AnsaPhone, Inc. of Quincy, is being performed on a three-month trial basis at no cost. Essentially, residents can call 617-

"Our residents see potholes at all hours, and this is a way for folks to call in and talk to a live person at any time," Mayor Thomas Koch said. "It's not going to replace calling City Hall or the DPW during the day, but this will help enhance services not replace anything we currently do."

Residents should use the traditional phone lines for service requests during regular business hours, including the Mayor's Office at 617-376-1990.

"Quincy is a great place I want to be able to do a little part in making it a better place," said Will Porter, marketing and sales director for AnsaPhone. "Calling these hotlines and getting a person on the other end after regular business hours will be a great benefit to the residents of Quincy and can increase the public's participation in providing the city the information they need to address constituent concerns in an efficient and effective manner."

• On May 20, 1506, the great Italian explorer Christopher Columbus dies in Valladolid, Spain. Columbus, and most others, greatly underestimated the world's size. In 1492, Columbus sighted Cuba, which he thought was mainland China, and in December he landed on Hispaniola, which he thought might be Japan.

• On May 18, 1917, six weeks after the United States formally enters the First World War, the U.S. Congress passes the Selective Service Act, giving the president the power to draft soldiers. By the end of World War I in November 1918, some 24 million men had registered for the draft.

Making 'Old' City Hall 'New' Again

It's been the epicenter of Quincy government for 166 years and it's showing its age.

Big time.

"Old City Hall" - also known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center - appears headed for a significant renovation. The scope, to be determined by architects, a feasibility study and a three-member committee, could encompass installing new gutters and roof, waterproofing the basement and updating electrical, heating and plumbing systems.

It may also entail refurbishing the Council Chamber to its original look and expand the Chamber to accommodate larger gatherings for public meetings and other civic events. It was in the "Great Hall" on the second floor that John Quincy Adams II, grandson of the President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years.

The idea of renovating City Hall is nothing new. It's been discussed by city leaders since the 1930s. The project is now positioned on the front burner.

The city is seeking request for qualifications from architectural and appropriate engineering design services which would include an assessment of current conditions in the building that was erected in 1844. It's also seeking a feasibility study, pre-design and schematic design documents as well as a preliminary cost estimate for the renovation and restoration of the property located at 1305 Hancock Street in the heart of Quincy Center.

"We're going to put out a bid, get an architect to give us a complete study and form a committee to make a recommendation. We want to make sure this grand, classical edifice is protected and preserved for future generations," Mayor Tom Koch said. "We have a very old building in need of a lot of work."

Areas that need to be addressed include: the electrical system which is the old "knob and tube" wiring; inefficient heating and plumbing systems, leaky windows, and aging copper gutters and slate roof. The mayor noted in the 1920s skylights were installed in the roof which have been covered over.

There's also a chronic water problem in the basement of City Hall where some vital records - among them birth, death, marriage certificates as well as voting records - are stored. The building should also conform for handicap accessibility.

Any renovations to the outside of the building would match the historical integrity of the structure that was built on land deeded to the town by Daniel and Hannah French. The deed - which cost $1,000 - stipulated that the building "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said inhabitants."

However, the interior of Old City Hall could be in store for a massive makeover and upgrade. It may require some city workers to be temporarily relocated to other city offices or perhaps space leased by the city near the building in Quincy Square.

"City Hall has a significant sense of history but aesthetically and structurally, the space hasn't evolved over the years. It's disappointing. It's minimized the historic value of the building," Koch said.

"It's the seat of government and the people's house. It should be protected," the mayor added.

Cost-wise, Koch said it's too early to estimate the price-tag until the study is done and recommendations are made. He emphasized the city would seek grants and perhaps use funds from the community preservation fund to help pay for the renovation.

The original building cost $19,115.93 to build - that included 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

The cost to build "New City Hall" - the three-and-a-half story reflective glass addition in 1979 - was $1.9 million.

The last renovation in old City Hall occurred in 1997. The Council Chamber was spruced up with a new ceiling, new floors, new walls and paint among other improvements. That project - paid for by state preservation funds - cost $271,000. But that's really been it for quite some time.

"This place is the same as it was when I first arrived here in the 1970s," says City Clerk Joseph Shea who was the executive secretary for former Mayor Walter Hannon. "The idea of renovating City Hall was even mentioned back in the 1930s during some inaugural addresses."

Anyone who works or visits City Hall should agree the time has come to give this historical building some much deserved TLC. And to take a proactive approach so it's done

The mayor hopes the architectural study will be completed by the end of the summer. Once the study is completed, a committee with representatives from the City Clerk's, Law and Planning Offices will formulate its recommendations.

"It's interesting to note the original building was approved for construction in April of 1844 and was completed by November of the same year," Koch said. "I don't think we'll get through the bidding process in that short a time period," the mayor added with a laugh.

THE CITY is deciding what to do with the recently discovered letter from John Quincy Adams dated Sept. 8, 1826. The letter outlines the burial wishes of his father, President John Adams who died two months earlier on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

John Adams and his wife, Abigail, wished to be buried in the crypt of United First Parish Church with a "plain and modest monument" built in their memory. John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are also entombed in the crypt.

The original letter is being preserved. Mayor Tom Koch would like the letter to be publicly displayed in a suitable and secured place, perhaps in Old City Hall.

Because of its importance to the history of United First Parish Church, the image of the letter may be imprinted on an oversized piece of aluminum or some other material and be placed outside the crypt of the church. That would certainly lend itself to the historical interpretation of why two U.S. Presidents and their wives are buried there, the only burial site of its kind in the United States.

ELECTION UPDATE: It appears Rep. Ron Mariano will have an opponent in his bid for re-election in the First Norfolk District this fall. Gary M. Lowell, 21, of 223 Academy Ave. Weymouth, has filed more than 150 required signatures to be on the ballot this fall. Lowell, who is running as an Independent, filed the signatures at Weymouth Town Hall. He didn't submit any nomination papers in Quincy. The 1st Norfolk District includes all of Ward 2 and Ward 4 Precinct 5 in Quincy; Precincts 2, 3 and 4 in Holbrook and Precincts 5, 6, 9, 12 and 16 in Weymouth.

The list of candidates running in the 2nd Norfolk District is minus one. Julie Berberan did not file the minimum number of signatures (150) to appear on the ballot. So, it appears to be a six-candidate field. Democrats Tackey Chan, Elaine Dwyer, Joseph Keegan and Leo Kelly will square off in the Democratic Primary Sept. 14. The winner advances and will face Independent Karl Roos and Republican John Iredale in the final election Nov. 2.

CAMPAIGN TRAIL: Three Quincy candidates announce they will have campaign receptions this month.

A rally for Independent gubernatorial candidate Tim Cahill will be held tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 10 p.m. at Florian Hall, 55 Hallett St., Dorchester. Tickets are $20.10 and can be purchased at the door. The event will feature live entertainment by Dick N'Jane.

Michael Morrissey, Democratic candidate for Norfolk County District Attorney, will hold a campaign kick-off Wednesday, May 19 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Elks Lodge, 254 Quarry St. No donation is requested.

John Iredale, Republican candidate for state representative in the 2nd Norfolk District, will officially kick off his campaign at a reception Tuesday, May 25 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, 1310 Sea St., Houghs Neck.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1941 real photo postcard view of the Pneumatic Scale Corporation's building that was on the corner of Newport Avenue and Holbrook Road across from the Norfolk Downs railroad depot. Founded in 1896 in Boston by William H. Doble, a West Quincy grocer, the company manufactured food-packing machinery. They soon outgrew the Boston shop and moved into two wooden buildings on this site in Norfolk Downs in 1906. In 1920, this three-story, 100,000-square-foot factory was built for $30,000 with poured-in-place concrete. It was the most modern factory in Quincy. As the company grew it produced a wide variety of machinery used in all aspects of product packing; from filling bottles, labeling and capping them to producing boxes, folding, filling, weighting and sealing them. They also made machines to fold and fill teabags. Thousands of familiar products were packaged with their machines and a large billboard on the plant showcased some of the products to the passing trains. At any time the company employed several hundreds of workers here. The business was sold in the 1990s and moved out of state. The building was demolished and today a Stop & Shop Supermarket is on this site. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

The Salvation Army In Quincy Is Alive And Well

It has come to my attention that misinformation about The Salvation Army has been spreading throughout our community.

It reminds me a bit of the old game of "telephone," where one person says something at the beginning of a line and by the time it gets to the end of the line, it rarely even resembles what was originally said.

Here's what was first said at the beginning of our imaginary line: The Salvation Army is closing our Adult Day Health Program. That is true. Because of the economy and a general lack of funding for this type of program, we are one of the many local providers who have been forced to close down this one aspect of our services.

However, at some point down the "phone line," the word got changed to "The Salvation Army is closing, leaving Quincy and a homeless shelter is moving into our building!" That's certainly a far cry from reality.

The Salvation Army has been serving the greater Quincy area since 1895. We are very happy here and plan on being around for at least another 115 years! In fact, we are always looking for new ways to expand our services and programs.

Our SonShine PreSchool is in excellent shape and has provided a wonderful learning experience for generations of families and their children. We are currently enrolling for our 2010-2011 school year. Interested families can contact the director, Chris Koch at 617-472-2345.

Besides offering daily Social Services and emergency services in case of disaster, we have recently expanded our after school youth programming to six days a week. Our worship services have never been better, which include a 13-piece brass band and contemporary music with encouraging messages from the Bible that help you address important issues in your life today (come worship with us some SonDay - we'd love to have you!) And I haven't even begun to scratch the surface of all The Salvation Army does (and will continue to do) in greater Quincy.

So in order to "set the record straight," perhaps your readers will help us get the correct word out to the greater Quincy community - The Salvation Army is here for the long haul.

We're not going anywhere - you can always count on us to be there when we're needed!

God bless you!

A Real Treat

I was at the new BJ's opening in Quincy on May 1 and it was quite a treat. They had employees dressed in black outfits going around the store all day serving everyone with refreshments all nice and pretty on trays - croissants, cake, fruit, quiche, and orange juice - through different sections of the store.

They had live cooking demonstrations like macaroni and cheese with meatballs, which was extremely delicious and served hot as it was being made. What a way to market the products in the store and at the same time are genuinely nice to the customers.

The staff was so courteous and helpful to each and every person who walked through the door, all the way from the VP to the managers to the custodians. They made an extra effort to be nice and the shoppers were thrilled as I saw loads of carts being stacked all the way to the top leaving the store from the non-stop visitors to the opening all morning.

This goes to show how great it is when the city and the corporate businesses work together in making sure that the community comes first. I would like to thank Mayor Koch and all involved for making this important bridge between community and business such a welcome and enjoyable one.

Strong Opposition To School Board Expense Account

By FRANK McCAULEY

A suggestion to grant school committee members expense accounts appears doomed in the face of strong school committee opposition.

The matter was scheduled for discussion at an upcoming school committee meeting at the request of School Committee Member Daniel G. Raymondi who is opposed to the expense account proposal.

Raymondi said he planned to "air once and for all" a suggestion to grant expense accounts to school committee members.

Raymondi said committee member John J. Sullivan raised the matter during an executive session meeting of the committee.

School Committee Members Harold Davis, Frank Abseimo, and Frank McCauley also expressed opposition to the proposal.

CITY MUST TAP E & D FUND TO AID TAX RATE

Mayor Walter J. Hannon said the city would be forced to tap the Emergency and Deficiency Fund (E & D) to keep the tax rate as low as possible.

The E & D Fund, known as the city's rainy day account, now contains $370,313 according to City Auditor Charles L. Shea.

The city was faced with a loss of $2.2 million in state aid, which could add nine dollars to the present rate of $159.90.

Hannon blamed the unexpected loss in state aid revenue on forced busing in Boston. "We are paying for busing," said Hannon. "Boston needs the money to bus kids."

FRANCIS SULLIVAN VETS SERVICE DIRECTOR

Mayor Walter Hannon appointed Francis L. Sullivan as Director of Veterans Services. He succeeded William Vilone who retired.

Sullivan has been assistant director for 15 years. A graduate of Quincy High School, he was a lifelong resident of Quincy.

In making the appointment, Mayor Hannon said he was "pleased to be able to fill the position with a career employee of the city."

The house is 323 years old dating back from 1686. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was also the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, as the wife of John Hancock.

Author To Speak At Historical Society May 17

Stephen Puleo, author of Dark Tide: The Great Boston Molasses Flood and The Boston Italians, will discuss his just-published book, A City So Grand: The Rise of an American Metropolis, Boston 1850-1900, at Quincy Historical Society's Annual Meeting, Monday, May 17 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

One of the Historical Society's most popular guest speakers, Puleo will discuss his work on A City So Grand and how he developed his thesis that the era from 1850-1900 is the period that transformed Boston into a world-class city. He will talk about the abolitionist movement of the 1850s, the 35-year engineering and planning feat of the Back Bay project, the arrival of the Irish that transformed Boston demographically, the Great Fire of 1872 and the subsequent rebuilding of downtown, Alexander Graham Bell's invention of the telephone, and the grand opening of America's first subway.

Copies of A City So Grand will be available for purchase and autographing at the conclusion of Mr. Puleo's talk. Also, as part of the Annual Meeting, the Historical Society will elect its officers and trustees for the coming year.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no admission charge.

Easy Tasty Ring Of Pastry

After making about 14 of these rings of pastry for Easter, it is such popular desert for family and friends, that I have decided to make this all year long. The only thing missing is the placing of eggs around the ring.

It is so fool proof, and so easy, that the bowl comes out practically clean, as you will note if you decide to make this. I've used anise flavoring, but any other favorite will do and will be equally delicious.

ANISE RING

3 cups of flour
¾ cup butter (softened)
1-cup sugar
2 eggs (unbeaten)
¼ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons anise extract
¼ cup milk

Place the dry ingredients in a bowl. Then in a mixing bowl or mixer, mix the butter and sugar together. Then alternately add the eggs one at a time with the dry ingredients, milk and anise, and beat until it is dough like mixture

Remove from bowl and place on a lightly floured board and make a large ring or two small ones. Place on an ungreased cookie sheet and bake in a 350-degree oven for about 20-25 minutes. Or until a toothpick placed in the center comes out clean. Wait until cool and then add the following icing.

ICING FOR THE TOP

1 cup powdered sugar
A little cream or milk until mixture resembles frosting
Sprinkles for top (if desired)
A smidgen of the anise flavoring if desired

Brush the pastry on top and add the sprinkles.

This can be kept in the refrigerator for days and goes great with a cup of tea or coffee.

P.S. This same dough can be used for biscotti or round cookies. If you make biscotti, shape the dough into a log. After it is done, slice and put back in the oven until crispy. If you prefer a soft one, eliminate the second baking.

56 Students Earn Associate Degrees

All Quincy College Nursing Students Pass License Exam

Quincy College President Martha Sue Harris announces all 56 graduates of the Associate Degree in Nursing Program (Part Time) have passed their licensure examination to become Registered Nurses.

This marks the first time the college has achieved a 100 percent pass rate on the NCLEX-RN examination.

The NCLEX-RN (National Council Licensure Examination-Registered Nurse) exam is required of candidates for licensure as a Registered Nurse (RN) by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Board of Registration in Nursing. The NCLEX examination is designed to test the knowledge, skills, and abilities essential to the safe and effective practice of nursing.

Quincy College has become well known on the South Shore for the excellence of its nursing program, attracting an increasing number of applicants each year. In addition to the Associate Degree in Nursing Program (part time), the college also offers the Associate Degree in Nursing Program (full time), Associate Degree in Nursing-Advanced Placement Program (full and part time), and the Practical Nursing Certificate Program (full and part time).

Students attend classes and labs at the Quincy and Plymouth campuses and complete clinical nursing placements within a variety of healthcare settings under the supervision of qualified nursing faculty.

Quincy College's nursing programs are accredited by the National League for Nursing Accrediting Commissions (NLNAC) and approved by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Board of Registration in Nursing.

Founded in 1958, Quincy College is a two-year, municipally affiliated college serving approximately 4,000 students at campuses located in Quincy and Plymouth.

The college is accredited by the Board of Higher Education of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to grant the degrees of Associate in Arts and Associate in Science.

The college offers 29 associate degree programs and 10 certificate programs in a variety of disciplines, including those within business and public service, liberal arts, natural science and allied health.

QC Partners With Workforce Investment Board, Healthcare Companies

Quincy College President Martha Sue Harris announces the formation of the Health Work Alliance (HWA), a partnership between the College, the South Shore Workforce Investment Board, and several area healthcare employers.

Funded by an American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) grant from the Federal Government and awarded by the Patrick-Murray Administration through the Commonwealth Corporation, the HWA is a workforce development program aimed at connecting South Shore residents with the training they need for high-growth jobs in the healthcare industry.

"The HWA is helping South Shore residents get the skills and training they need to find rewarding jobs in the growing healthcare field," Harris said.

"Quincy College is proud to partner with the South Shore Workforce Investment Board and area healthcare businesses to put people back to work."

The South Shore Workforce Investment Board will administer the grant totaling $209,189 and recruit potential program participants from the South Shore through its Career Centers in Quincy and Plymouth.

Quincy College will admit 26 new students identified by the Career Centers during the summer and fall of 2010 and prepare them to receive certificates in Medical Billing & Coding, Surgical Technology, Phlebotomy, or Exercise Science/Personal Training.

A substantial portion of the tuition and expenses associated with the certificate programs will be funded by the HWA. As students in the HWA program, participants have access to all of the tutoring, career advising, and student aid programs offered by the College. The Career Centers also provide participants with access to their programs and services, including career workshops, resume reviews, job search assistance, veteran's services, and connections to area employers.

Healthcare company partners, which include Manet Health, the Quincy YMCA and other clinics and private medical offices, have helped to shape the HWA program to meet their current employment needs. These partner employers will open their jobs to graduates of the HWA program first. For more information about how to participate in the program, contact Cleo Cakridas at 617-745-4020.

Founded in 1958, Quincy College is a two-year, municipally affiliated college serving approximately 4,000 students at campuses located in Quincy and Plymouth.

KAITLYN AND EMILY Hart take a look at the SuperCobra chopper under the watchful eye of Lieutenant Colonel Paul Ozmer at Pageant Field. The helicopter visited Quincy May 4 as part of Marine Week Boston.

Marines Helicopter Offers Close-Up Look Of Military Might

By JOE REARDON

Emily and Kaitlyn Hart were sitting in class at the Beechwood Knoll elementary school last Tuesday afternoon when they heard a dim sound become increasingly louder. A minute later, the sound became so deafening the students could barely hear their teacher speak.

The classroom of students raced to the window and jostled for a good view of the low-flying helicopter as it swooped past the school and over Black's Creek in the direction of Pageant Field.

The chopper wasn't just any old whirlybird. This particular type of copter, a USMC AH-1W SuperCobra, was used in Vietnam and both Iraq and Afghanistan.

"The mission of the aircraft is to supply close air support for the marines," said Lieutenant Colonel Paul Ozmer, veteran of both the Iraqi conflicts and the fighting in Afghanistan.

The twin engine, 3,600 horsepower aircraft touched down on the middle of the lacrosse field and after school let out, dozens of kids descended on Pageant Field to get an up-close look at the ominous piece of aircraft which makes its home in Georgia.

Sisters Emily and Kaitlyn Hart were surprised by the sight of a marine chopper flying low over the Beechwood Knoll School. "I think it's really cool," said 11-year-old Kaitlyn. "We heard it. We couldn't hear the teacher so well because it was so low. Some kids ran over to the window."

Emily was able to sit in the cockpit of the chopper after it landed. "It's really cool," she said. "There's so many buttons. It's different from a car because you have to step up into it."

The chopper made a pit stop in Quincy after being on display on Boston Common as part of Marine Week Boston. The public was able to get a close look at the Marine's humvees, choppers and various weapons on Boston Common, in Copley Square and Faneuil Hall.

Ozmer said the public has shown a great deal of kindness to the Marines and it hasn't been lost on them. "We don't often get to say thank you to the taxpayers," he said.

Along with the SuperCobra, a CH 53 Super Stallion and MV 22 Osprey were available for the public see. Sergeant Frances Goch, the Marketing and Public Affairs Chief in New England, said parents and kids alike have given the marines kind words. "People just come up and say thank you," Goch said. "It's not just the kids. It's adults coming up to us and thanking us for what we have done."

This is the second year of Marine Week and it's been a huge success so far. Last year the event was held in Chicago and next year it will move to either St. Louis or Philadelphia.

Update Residents, Businesses On City Projects

Koch, Chamber Launch Communication Partnership

Mayor Thomas Koch and the Quincy Chamber of Commerce announced Tuesday a new communication partnership to help keep residents and business owners up-to-date on a series of upcoming projects across the City.

"Quincy On The Move" will debut this week with a newsletter announcing a community meeting at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 20 in Council Chambers at City Hall. The newsletter will be distributed to local businesses, Chamber members, and be available for residents on the City's website at www.quincyma.gov.

"We are moving forward on many important projects for our City over the coming months and years, and this new partnership with the Chamber will help keep everybody fully informed about many issues in the City," Koch said.

Added Edward Keohane, Chairman of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce: "It is important that the business community is aware of the various impacts associated with the many construction projects so that they can plan accordingly and better inform their customers - we are happy to partner with the City administration in an effort to disseminate the correct information throughout the community in a timely and comprehensive manner."

The first newsletter will also feature information on the Neponset River Bridge reconstruction project; future plans for the Fore River Bridge and contact information for a number of agencies.

The communication effort will also include FAQ sheets on various projects in the City, including plans to redevelop Quincy Center and the details of the Quincy Center Concourse project.

Restaurant Owners Mull Mayor's Meals Tax Proposal

City Council Public Hearing Monday

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce is surveying the city's 200 plus restaurant owners in an effort to gauge their opinion on a new .75% meals' tax proposed last week by Mayor Thomas Koch.

The City Council will hold a public hearing on the issue Monday at 6:30 p.m. and both the South Shore and Quincy Chamber of Commerce are urging restaurant owners to attend.

Mark Carey, Co-Director, said the Quincy Chamber has sent out letters, e-mails and personally contacted local owners for their opinions. The Chamber held a meeting last week in an effort to alert businesses to the proposal.

"We are aggressively finding out what restaurants owners want and their point of view," said Carey who said that many owners feel, "They're just getting hit everywhere."

The proposed tax would add .75% to the state's current meals tax of 6.25%. A previous report in The Quincy Sun incorrectly described the proposed tax as adding a considerably larger tax of 2.5% to the dining bill.

Koch's Director of Policy Chris Walker said the easiest way to understand the new tax would be to consider that 37 cents would be added to a $50 dinner bill.

To date, Carey said local owners have offered mixed opinions with opponents asking, "Why aren't they taxing the Red Sox?" or other major entertainment instead of going after hotels and restaurants again and again.

Carey said some owners are willing to accept the tax while others are weary of taxes directed to them and wary that any kind of tax that could be hiked at any time.

"We just have to protect our restaurants," said Carey. "I see both sides of the situation," said Jennifer Ormond, co-owner of four Coffee Break restaurants in Quincy and one in Braintree.

Ormond said she raised the issue on Coffee Break's Facebook page and asked her customers if they would stop patronizing her Quincy spots and head to Braintree.

The answer was a unanimous "No." "They would not change their habit," according to Ormond. "They wouldn't go out of their way to leave the city."

On the flip side of the issue, Ormond said that when or if the tax is implemented, her prices go up.

"No matter what, it looks like Coffee Break is increasing our prices," said Ormond who said she has not hiked her prices in two years. She finds it "devastating" to think that "people who aren't paying attention" will think her prices have gone up."

In addition, Ormond wonders, "What's next?"

Ormond said she expects to attend and speak at Monday's meeting, but believes the proposal is a difficult question and there are two sides to the issue.

While local owners are weighing the consequences of the tax, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce issued a statement last Wednesday strongly opposing the local tax after acknowledging, "The amount of the tax is not large but there are significant reasons to oppose it. Once in place, we are concerned it will become easier to raise the new meals tax further."

Directors Peter Forman and Jeffrey Poirier of the South Shore Chamber said, "The meals tax is fundamentally unfair in that it singles out a specific segment of our local economy and forces its customers to pick up the tab."

Forman and Poirier pointed out that Quincy would be only one of two communities on the South Shore taxing restaurant meals.

According to Nick Puleo, the city's director of Municipal Finance, the projected income from the tax for the first three quarters would be approximately over $750,000 and for a 12-month period, $1 million.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

If you have rented out your home or an apartment in your home, be aware of tax regulations. You also need to check your insurance coverage to protect your assets in the event of damage from the tenants or lawsuits due to circumstances beyond your control. Please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600 to learn about our policies for homes, condos, rental apartments. We have served the North Quincy community for 53 years and look forward to addressing your insurance questions. Our office is located at 151 Hancock Street.

The current housing downturn has produced a new generation of reluctant landlords who are choosing to rent their homes instead of selling them at a loss. These homeowners have turned to tenants to subsidize their wait until homes prices improve. Many turn to management companies to conduct background checks of prospective tenants and manage their property. Whether or not they assume these burdens themselves, landlords should know that rental income is taxable. These costs can be offset, however, by deducting mortgage interest, real estate taxes, depreciation, repair costs, and insurance. In fact, a landlord policy will cost about 25 percent more than a standard homeowner's policy, but it will cover structural damage, as well as any resulting lost rental income.

NOTE: A landlord policy covers a landlord's legal fees in the event that a tenant should sue.

Demolition Crews Prepare To Raze Quincy Fair Mall

some sidewalk access will be barred. "That building's right on the sidewalk. You can't have anybody walking there."

However, Harrington said portions of Revere Road will be closed to allow a partial building demolition on that street.

Mayor Thomas Koch will present the full details of traffic plans and routes at a public meeting scheduled May 20 at 5:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street. All are welcome.

Harrington said an environmental report on the demolition has been cleared through state and federal agencies and work has already begun on the interior of the former mall located at 1563-1597 Hancock Street.

The building, formerly owned by F. X. Messina once housed two cinemas, the Registry of Motor Vehicles, a furniture store and restaurants.

The demolition bid of nearly $600,000 was awarded to J.R. Vinagro Corp. of Johnston RI, according to Fran Sandonato, Project Coordinator, who said that federal recovery money will cover the cost of this phase of the Concourse.

"Originally, the city was going to have to pay," said Sandonato who explained that the application for federal funds for Phase 2 slightly delayed the Concourse schedule but the funding offers a major savings to the city.

Sandonato noted two lanes of the Hancock Municipal Parking Lot have already been closed down for the project.

A portion of the parking lot will be used to widen the street and the balance restored to the parking area, which has been targeted for the Quincy Center Street-Works, projected.

Vinagro will also grade the span and construct a new wall once the demolition is completed, according to Sandonato.

Currently, the city is completing Phase 3 of the project which involves the resurfacing and utility work on McGrath Highway.

The concourse project will offer a 4/5's of a mile bypass which is intended to relieve traffic congestion in Quincy Center.

Once completed the Concourse will skirt Quincy Center and allow a single four-lane East-West roadway from Granite Street to Southern Artery with direct access to Burgin Parkway.

The project which will span roughly 4/5's of a mile has been a source of controversy for decades. It was first proposed in the 1970's.

Officials originally expected the Concourse to be completed this year.

Granite Links Team Will Contest Milton Landtaking

Milton leaders scrapped a plan to use a helicopter fleet to build a $6.5 million wind turbine near Granite Links Golf Course, then turned to an eminent domain land taking that may wind up in court, according to William O'Connell, President of Quarry Hills Ltd.

Now Milton plans to reclaim to town-owned roadway and several small parcels leased to Quarry Hills in the 1990's.

"Quarry Hills intends to challenge Milton's plan," O'Connell said Tuesday of the land taking approved by the Milton Town Meeting on May 4.

That land taking could allow Milton the access road needed to build a town-owned wind turbine near Granite Links Golf Course.

A 50-year lease that Milton and Quarry Hills executed in the 1990's apparently granted Quarry Hills exclusive rights to the span which will be needed by trucks and cranes during the wind turbine construction.

The land taking, also, extends to two small parcels off the road where construction equipment will be stationed.

"It's our opinion this is the best way and the cleanest way for the town to gain access," Selectmen Chairman John Shield said when introducing the article at the board meeting on March 25.

"Town council is recommending an eminent domain land-taking," Kevin Mearns, Town Administrator, said after noting that Quarry Hills officials were claiming sole control of the roadway.

"We even talked about helicoptering in the 60 tons (of equipment)," Shields said of proposals to bypass Quarry Hills claim to the property. Shields said that plan was discarded. "We would still need to get the trucks there."

O'Connell believes the proposed wind turbine is too close to Granite Links greens and will adversely impact golfers. He previously outlined his group's energy projects and said this week, "I know everybody wants to be green."

Quarry Hills officials have charged that noise and flicker from the wind turbine will interfere with golfers on the Granite Links prize-winning 27-hole golf course. Eight holes of the 27-hole course were built on portions of Milton's former landfill.

O'Connell, also, responded to critics questioning whether Quarry Hills' opposition was an automatic 'NIMBY' reaction. "This is not in our backyard. This is in our front yard."

Granite Links' attorney Jeffrey Tocchio responded to Milton's plan for an eminent domain land-taking by noting there are a number of significant problems ahead for Milton's wind turbine.

Tocchio first noted that Milton never acknowledged leasehold rights to the road until Quarry Hills raised the issue. Excerpts from Tocchio's response follow:

"Quarry Hills has also informed the Town of numerous other significant problems associated with the industrial turbine scheme, but the town appears content to first deny, and then attempt to address the problems in a reactive, piecemeal fashion. Unfortunately, we'll be dealing with those problems for the next few years.

"The Town proponents are so excited by the general concept that they are turning a blind eye towards the hurdles and negative effects of the scheme on others.

"Quarry Hills will participate fully in the process before the Planning Board, and they'll do their best to protect both their investment and the long-term interests of the property for use as a professional level golf course."

Grant To Be Used To Spay, Neuter Feral And Domestic Cats

Animal Shelter Awarded $2,000 To Address Feral Cat Problem

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy Animal Shelter is taking a proactive approach to the feral cat problem in the city after receiving a $2,000 grant from the Charles River Alley Cats organization.

The Mass Animal Coalition (MAC) awarded the Charles River group a portion of the $180,000 it granted to animal shelters around the country. In turn, Charles River gave the QAS $2,000 to spay and neuter feral and domestic cats.

Feral cats are felines that have never had contact with human beings in a domestic setting. They tend to band together in colonies and have excellent survival skills. "There are colonies everywhere," said Jan Parisi, the QAS's Feral Cat Manager. She estimated there are hundreds of feral cats in Quincy. Colonies of the cats have been found in North Quincy near Sycamore Street and Germantown.

The QAS is hoping to garner another grant within the next few months. The shelter needs to present an itemized list of their costs with exact figures to justify the funds.

Parisi said that many people have good intentions when they buy a cat, but cannot afford the necessary steps to keep it healthy. They wind up letting them out the door to fend for themselves.

"People have a cat or dog and they don't consider neutering them and they keep reproducing," Parisi said. "People have to learn that when they take in a cat it's a big responsibility. We'll never solve the problem until people realize they need to have cats neutered or sterilized. Unfortunately, cats are throwaway animals. They're not even licensed."

Lynda Southerland, director of the QAS, said most people have good intentions when they buy a cat, but cannot keep up with the costs of maintaining their health.

"The good nutrition is not there," Southerland said. "The mother cat should be eating kitten food for the protein. I'm sure they have the best intentions to take care of the animals but it's a costly thing and they just can't afford it."

The QAS is involved in a low-cost spay neuter program to the residents of the Germantown Housing area. The shelter meets every Wednesday with preregis-tered residents who bring their cats to the Community Center. The cats are then transported by the shelter workers to the MSPCA. They are examined by a vet and given shots if it is deemed necessary. The cats are ID chipped and spayed or neutered. The cats are then driving back to the Center to their owners.

The grant is made possible through the purchase of the spay/neuter "I'm Animal Friendly" license plates. The cost is $40 each, $28 of which is used to help fund the statewide spay/neuter program. Up to 10 cats per week are spayed or neutered.

Since 2004, more than 7,400 licenses have been sold. As of last July, nearly $665,000 has been granted out and more than 13,000 animals have been spayed or neutered.

Plates can be purchased online at www.mass.gov/rmv or any full-service branch of the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

"It's a tremendous value for us and a tremendous value for the city," said QAS Director Lynda Southerland. "Normally, what is done for the cats would run from $100-200 at a regular veterinarian."

Cats can multiply at a high rate. They can reproduce up to three times a year with as many as six to eight kittens in each litter. They continue to multiply to the point where the offspring number as much as 100,000.

"There are probably thousands of feral cats in the city," Parisi said.

In her neighborhood alone, Southerland has seen as many as 10 feral cats. "One day you'll see one or two cats and a week or two later you see five."

"We haven't scratched the surface."

Feral cats have also been collected through the use of shelters throughout the city. These cages are perfectly safe and don't harm the animals in any way. There are currently 40 within the city boundaries. They're on legs and insulated to protect the cats from the elements.

Feeding stations, which number in the 100s, are also in various spots in the city that have been identified as having colonies.

Moon Island, more than one mile away from the nearest home in Squantum. Moon Island is owned by the City of Boston but accessible via land only through Quincy.

As the public process begins, officials from Boston and Quincy are continuing to work on a formal agreement that would split the cost and revenue from the turbine, which is estimated to cost $4.3 million. Any agreement between the two cities would stipulate that revenue from the power generated by the turbine would more than offset costs to build it.

The City of Boston is also working to obtain grant money from several sources to add to the economic benefit that will be shared by the cities, including work with the Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance and the Massachusetts Renewable Energy Trust.

The City of Boston has spent the last several years researching potential wind projects in the Boston Harbor Island areas, and the proposed Moon Island project meets a series of standards for a successful wind energy project, including meeting a Federal Aviation Administration height restrictions.

Keating thanked everyone involved in his recognition and said, "I have been blessed to have a staff dedicated to public service... what an extraordinary place Quincy Court is...and how wonderful to be mentioned in the same breath as McIntyre."

The McIntyre award is named in memory of the late state senator and Quincy mayor. Recipients are recognized for their selfless concern in the promotion of human well being.

The Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award was presented by Marion (Feldman) Neddleman and her son, Steven Feldman, to Quincy Police Officers William Mitchell and Matthew Miller, and to Capt. James Mullin and Det. Edward Williams of the Weymouth

Mrs. Neddleman thanked the Quincy Court for "remembering my husband each year. Your award choices have always been outstanding."

The Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award was named for the noted Quincy rabbi, now deceased, whose dedication to Quincy's Law Day was unparalleled; since its inception, Rabbi Mann had attended forty-eight consecutive Law Day ceremonies.

The Award went to Retired First Justice of the Plymouth District Court Thomas F. Brownell who, it was said, shared the same ideals espoused by Rabbi Mann. Mrs. Brownell was an Atherton Hough school teacher for 28 years.

Two North Quincy High School 11th grade students, Angie Wu and Thomas Nigl received the Dennis F.

Ryan Student Essay Contest Award, presented by Dennis Ryan, Esq.

The Law Address was delivered by Attorney Victor J. Garo, who dedicated 33 years of his legal career to the wrongful conviction and imprisonment of North End resident Joseph Salvati for a gangland murder in Chelsea in 1967.

Ultimately, the courts found that the FBI had withheld and/or hidden evidence which would have proved Salvati's innocence. In 1997, after nearly three decades in prison, Garo was able to have Salvati's sentence commuted, and in 2001 all charges against him were dropped.

Of the $31 million awarded Salvati - the largest single award granted for false imprisonment - Garo said, "Thirty-one million dollars can't return 29 years to a person's life."

He emphasized the importance of sticking with a goal for justice. "We just can't quit when things are tough against us."

HISTORIC GRANITE RAILWAY Inclined Plane as it appeared with debris between the rails and granite supports before a recent cleanup by Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum members and friends.

Quarry, Granite Workers Museum Members, Friends Spruce Up Historic Granite Railway Quincy's Cleaner, Greener At Inclined Plane Railroad

The Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum took part in the recent Cleaner, Greener Quincy initiative by cleaning up the historic Granite Railway Inclined Plane in West Quincy.

The inclined plane was designed and built by Gridley Bryant in 1830 for the Granite Railway Company to allow granite to be brought down from their newly opened Pine Hill Ledge to the railroad below.

The inclined plane is listed on the Massachusetts' Historical Register and is also a National Civil Engineering Landmark.

Over the years, the site has been overgrown with trees and brush which obscured the railroad components of the inclined plane which included portions of the original metal rails secured to the granite supports and pulley blocks on which the chain ran.

In three hours, members of the Museum and friends from many parts of the city completely removed the overgrowth and brought the inclined plane "to life again," said Museum President Al Bina.

"This was a great effort to help move us in the direction to stabilize the remains of the granite industry," Bina said. "With the site cleared visitors can walk up and down the site and visualize how the inclined plane worked.

"The Museum is committed to keep the area presentable to the public and tourists to our great city. The Museum would like to thank Cleaner, Greener Quincy for allowing the Museum to be part of the city-wide cleanup and also Home Depot for their generous donation of specialty tools which allowed the clearing of debris from between the rails and granite supports," Bina added.

Boy, Cub Scouts Help Clean Up Faxon Park

Boy Scouts from Quincy Troop 42 and Cub Scouts from Quincy Pack 42 recently worked with the Quincy Park Department and Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi to clean Faxon Park.

The Scouts helped clear some left over items from abandoned homeless shelters and the Pack (with the assistance of boys from the Troop) planted a Red Dogwood Centennial Tree in the Park. These Scouts joined Cubs and Scouts across the United States, grabbing shovels, rakes, and trash bags to help out at their local towns or in state or national parks.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, May 1, at approximately 6:30 p.m., Officers Timothy Simmons and M.J.O'Brien were dispatched to a Quincy Point address to investigate an incident of harassment. Upon arrival, the officers interviewed the caller, who stated that her 13 year-old daughter and her daughter's friend (age 13) were riding their bicycles in their neighborhood on April 30 at approximately 4:30 p.m.

As they rode past a group of men drinking beer in a driveway in a nearby street, some of the men started yelling at them, notably "Hey sexy, you're sexy," while others blew kisses at the young girls. The caller said that the girls went out riding again this evening and as they drove by the same house, a group of approximately 10 men were drinking in the driveway and again yelled to the girls, "Hey sexy - hey sexy" and whistled at them. The suspects also spoke in a foreign language that the girls could not understand.

This time this situation escalated when two of the men began chasing after the girls, who peddled harder and got away from them. The girls stated that they were afraid that the men were going to hurt them. The girls told the caller/parent, who then called the Police. At this time, additional officers were requested due to the amount of possible suspects.

Sergeant Mark Foley, Officers Paul Brown and Bruce Tait met with Officers Simmons and O'Brien and they then went to the address where the suspects were. Upon arrival, the officers confirmed that there were about 10 men drinking in the driveway and on the porch. When told why the officers were there, all except one male claimed not to speak any English.

Identifications were requested from the men. Three had passports, one had a BJ's Whole sale card with photo, one produced a forged foreign Driver's License and the other's had no identification at all. Through the one English speaking suspect, all the men claimed that they did not do anything.

Officer Brown brought the victims and parent to the scene to identify the males who were yelling and chasing after them. For the first identification, Officer Brown brought the daughter and her mother up in an unmarked cruiser, where she positively identified two of the men who were yelling derogatory remarks while chasing them. The second victim, in a separate identification, confirmed the same two suspects.

Based on all available information, Officer Simmons arrested the two suspects, one a 32 year old Weymouth resident, the other a 39 year old Quincy resident, and charged them both with "Enticement of Child and Disorderly Conduct." The first suspect was also charged with "Possession of a forged Brazilian Drivers License." The second suspect was charged with "Giving a False Name to a Police Officer" during booking. When his fingerprint check came back from the F.B.I., it was learned that he was deported from the United States back to his country in April 2007, and re-entered illegally.

Nice Work!

RECOGNITION also goes out to Officer Peter Curley, who was staying overnight at his parent's home when he observed two males acting suspiciously. As the suspects tried to open car doors, Officer Curley contacted the Police and then followed the suspects on foot. As they were about to break into a car, Officer Curley identified himself as a Police Officer. The suspects fled but the Officer was able to apprehend one of them. A search of the suspect uncovered a stolen IPOD from a car break a day earlier!

Nice Work!

Two Solutions To Consider For Sewage Backflow Problems

For many Bay State residents, the cost of flood clean-up and repair has been a sobering experience. Specifically, homeowner's or renter's insurance rarely covers the cost of unforeseen events such as sump pump failure or sewer back-ups.

There are two basic ways to approach this problem, both having advantages and disadvantages: a backflow valve or adding a rider to your homeowner's insurance policy.

Historically, backflow valves have been installed to resolve the problem. Backflow valves, also known as check valves or flaps, allow water to flow in one direction but automatically close when the direction of the flow is reversed. Estimates vary on the cost to install a complete backflow valve system, yet it can typically run from several hundred to thousands of dollars depending on the complexity, location and number of valves needed. It is also important to note that valves require regular inspection and maintenance.

Through the Hazard Mitigation Grant Program, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) offers grants to cities and towns for up to 75 percent of the total cost to install backflow valve systems in residences and businesses. This is an important consideration, as cities or townships are generally not responsible for sewer-related damages since most stoppages are beyond the city's control, and thereby the costs fall to the property owner.

Hazard Mitigation specialists also suggest a second option: to purchase a special rider on a homeowner's or renter's insurance policy to cover the expense of clean-up expenses - at a cost far less than that of a backflow valve system. However, a homeowner needs to weigh the cost of an annual insurance rider, including the potentially harmful introduction of sewage bacteria in the home, versus the one-time cost of installing a backflow valve.

Rebuilding with disaster prevention should always be the top priority, and Commonwealth residents are encouraged to make informed decisions. Homeowners are urged to speak with their local insurance agent for advice on the cost of adding a sewer-backup rider onto your home policy, or speak with a licensed plumber or contractor in order to receive information on installing a backflow valve.

Yet the experts agree: Doing nothing is not the solution.

As a reminder: Residents and business owners who sustained losses in the designated counties may apply for assistance by registering online at www.DisasterAssistance.gov, by calling 800-621-FEMA (3362) or 800-462-7585 (TTY) for people with speech or hearing disabilities. The toll-free telephone numbers are open daily from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Multilingual assistance is available.

Spot-Cleaning a Carpet

Q: I held a barbecue at my new apartment last weekend, and I found out afterward that a few drinks were spilled on the living-room carpet and some food was dropped as well. I cleaned up as best as I could, but there are still spots where the spills occurred. How can I get rid of these stains? - Abigail G., Carrollton, Ga.

A: Carpet stains can be difficult to completely eradicate, even if you are able to tackle them immediately after a spill. Commercial products are available to help, but you've got to purchase the right product for the task and use it exactly as instructed, or the problem may get worse.

Here's a few common tips on cleaning spills and stains.

- Blot up liquid spills, don't rub them. Rubbing will just grind the liquid deeper into the carpet and padding.

- Pick up food spills and gently lift stuck-on food from the carpet fibers using a blunt tool like a spoon.

- Vacuum up dried food particles, then blot the spill area with a damp cloth to loosen and remove stains.

- Coffee stains can be tackled with warm water and white vinegar: dip a clean cloth in the water and dab onto the stain, then dab vinegar on. Blot up, then repeat until the stain is gone.

- Red wine can be blotted up and the area rinsed with club soda -- if done immediately after the spill. Dried red wine should be re-moistened by dabbing on white wine or vinegar and blotting up; repeat as often as necessary.

- Other stains, like chocolate or Kool-Aid, may come up if you dab the area with a solution of 1/4 teaspoon dishwashing liquid (Dawn or Joy) to 1 cup of warm water, let sit for about 15 minutes and then blot up with a clean cloth; repeat until the stain is gone. Dab the area with white vinegar to remove the detergent.

If home remedies don't work, head for a home improvement or carpet store and ask for advice and products that address exactly the type of stain you're dealing with.

HOME TIP: Patience and persistence are needed to get older stains out of a carpet. Never resort to scrubbing or rubbing a stain, as this will damage the fibers and can push the stain deeper into the carpet and padding.

Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,

Tell him how we miss him,

Taking Over For Legendary Coach Bob Sylvia Tim Lewis: "One of their own" Back To Coach Quincy Presidents

By JOE REARDON

By the time the 2010-11 high school hockey season is over, Tim Lewis just may have the moniker of the hardest working coach in Massachusetts schoolboy hockey.

Lewis, who is taking over the reigns of the Quincy High hockey program on the heels of Bob Sylvia's retirement after 45 years at the helm, has already dove into the job since being informed of his new position on April 9.

An assistant coach at Catholic Memorial for three years, Lewis has come full circle, having played on the varsity squad for four years under Sylvia, manning the blue line as a tenacious defenseman until his graduation in 1998. It's the work Lewis put in on the ice and his love for the game that he believes will trickle down to his players.

"It's an honor," said Lewis. "The only reason I left CM hockey was to go back to Quincy. I wasn't going to leave to go to Matignon or Norwell. I'm very hands on. I'll get to know these boys in a real way. I have a tremendous work ethic. I've already begun working for next season because the boys deserve it."

Lewis has ample experience when it comes to the pressure and sense of urgency of postseason play, both as a player and coach. He's been a part of the elite, Super 8 tournament all three years with the Knights and saw postseason action both his junior and senior year in high school. As a junior, the Presidents were bounced out in the first round of Div. 1 play against Xavierian, but Quincy rolled through the tournament the following year, eventually coming up just short against Needham in the state finals at the Fleet Center.

Lewis didn't know it at the time, but his days on the ice playing competitively were coming to an end. He underwent his third knee operation while the Presidents' varsity football team. Lewis still plays for fun, but never got the opportunity gear up in college.

"It was all football," he said with a laugh. "I never once got hurt playing hockey."

Sylvia believes Lewis' experience as both a coach and player bode well for Quincy High's future in the rink. "He was a hard working kid and a defenseman on one of our best teams," said the hall of fame coach. "Timmy had to work hard for everything he accomplished, and he did work hard. He put a lot of work in. It was time for new blood to come in. He's young and he'll get right on it."

"Timmy's young and he'll bring a lot of enthusiasm. He's a guy with a lot of character and he has a lot of experience."

Lewis is looking to put Quincy High hockey back on the forefront in the city and at the same time developing players that are assets both in the community and classroom. A philosophy and theology teacher at CM, Lewis is a strong proponent of athletes being well-rounded individuals.

Most importantly, there's no "down time" during a Lewis-run practice. Skill drills are worked on repeatedly and the hour-plus the team spends on the ice is nearly as intense as games. Lewis believes that games are an extension of practice. He's simply not satisfied with having a good program; Lewis wants to build Quincy High hockey into a great program in the coming years. The master plan is to have a schedule with nonleague contests against proven hockey powers such as CM, Archbishop Williams, Hingham and Malden Catholic. And his ability to teach extends beyond the classroom onto the ice.

"I've been told I have a distinct ability to explain the game in layman terms," said Lewis. "I can coach to any talent that walks in the door."

"The plan is to be where Hingham is someday. We're going to look to make the schedule more competitive. I'm in this to build the team so Presidents hockey is well known as a winning program. Competition builds excellence. As we progress as a program we'll get the CMs, Hinghams and Malden Catholics."

Lewis plans to have the team in motion well before the opening day of practice on November 29. He's a big proponent of off-ice conditioning, i.e., hard work in the weight room, and wants his players skating as much as possible.

Lewis has an eye on the future of the program and wants to begin improving the young talent in the city with a weeklong middle school camp at the Quincy Youth Arena over the summer. He's already reached out to North Quincy High coach Matt Gibbons to brainstorm ideas as to

SUN SPORTS

TIM LEWIS, a 1998 graduate of Quincy High School and a former star defenseman for the Presidents, is taking the reigns from the legendary Bob Sylvia next winter as the new head coach of the QHS hockey program. Lewis, a teacher at Catholic Memorial HS, has been an assistant coach on Bill Hanson's staff for the past three seasons. Lewis was a member of the 1998 QHS state finalist team.

how to strengthen the hockey programs of the schools and in the city.

"I'm impressed that Tim reached out to Matt," said Quincy High athletic director Jim Rendle. "They'll compete during the season. The rest of the time they'll collaborate."

Probably his biggest challenge is coaching a squad at a school he doesn't teach at. "It's a challenge," Lewis said matter of factly. "But I've never shied away from challenges."

Lewis also has the backing of legendary CM coach Bill Hanson. The Knights' head coach wrote in his letter of recommendation that not only did Lewis play under Sylvia, but is a Presidents' alumnus who thrived on the ice.

"If people see that one of their own is in, the kids will be more likely to stay," said Hanson. "He's played the game and coached the game. The Xs and Os will take care of themselves."

Not surprisingly, Lewis dubs 1980 United States

Olympic coach Herb Brooks as the coach he most relates to. Brooks, Lewis said, was a tremendous motivator and student of the game. Lewis has read former UCLA basketball coach John Wooden's book and others by Bill Belichick and Brooks, specifically focus on the ways in which they motivate their players. Lewis said Brooks' job behind the bench at Lake Placid was probably the best piece of coaching he has ever seen in any sport.

"What he did with that team is nothing short of a miracle," said Lewis. "Herb Brooks was the absolute best at getting the most out of his players."

Lewis fully intends to have the same approach, but he won't be asking more from his players than he does himself. "A good coach has to be confident to make his boys confident," Lewis said. "Bill (Hanson) challenged me to constantly continue my education of the game."

To that end, Lewis will be meeting with coaches Ted Donato (Harvard), Jerry York (Boston College) and Jack Parker (Boston University) in the fall to observe their pre-season practices in order to incorporate their styles of coaching into his practices.

What Lewis is most confident about is that the Presidents will be ready to play, and play hard, next winter. "My job is to put us in a position to win every time the puck drops," he said.

Lewis saw it play out this past winter in the Super 8 tournament. Hingham had losses against CM and a small smattering of other schools during the regular season, but was on top of its game come March. The Harbormen pulled out the 1-0 upset of CM in a classic final.

"Once you get to a certain point in the season, anyone can win," said Lewis. "On one March day, they (Hingham) beat the best hockey school in the state, 1-0. They became the best hockey school in the state."

Quincy Resident Co-Owner, Co-Operator of Cyr-Farrell Boxing Gym

Nick Cyr Doesn't Forget The Kids

On one fall day back in 1997, Tony Cardinale happened to be in Quincy Square. Cardinale, a North Shore attorney and who at the time was the manager of Heavyweight Champion John Ruiz, asked Jimmy Farrell who the sensational young heavyweight he was training. That boxer happened to be 17-year-old Nick Cyr, Jr. of North Quincy.

Cyr, as a result of that chance meeting, went on to win half-dozen local and regional junior titles. The "can't miss" 6'2" Cyr seemed to be on a path to boxing greatness, however, he soon experienced a bevy of shoulder and hand injuries and was forced to delay his boxing career.

Fast-forward 11 years. Cyr is now 28 and is the co-owner of the same gym (Cyr-Farrell Boxing Gym) he wandered into as a 14-year old kid. And now, he is providing other aspiring boxers the chance to reach their dreams of being a professional boxer, while still preparing himself for future bouts.

Cyr, a Quincy car detailer, takes particular pride in developing kids who live in Quincy including local boxers like Lamont Toombs, Tommy White, Luis and Joe Valentin, Kelvin Kule, PJ Campbell, Mike Stanton, Peter Ealey, Joe Schmitz, Kevin Keith, Brian Lehane, Domenic Farrell and Ryan Kielczewski.

The Cyr-Farrell Boxing Gym is located at 1452 Hancock Street in Quincy Square. The hours of operation are Monday-Sunday 10 a.m. until 9:30 p.m.

Playoffs Still On Radar For All Four Teams Baseball, Softball Seasons Winding Down

By SEAN BRENNAN

The final two weeks of the baseball and softball spring seasons have huge implications for both North Quincy and Quincy teams. Out of the four varsity squads, just Quincy softball has already qualified for the postseason tournament.

The Presidents, following a 3-2 victory over Pembroke High School on Monday afternoon, are sitting pretty with a 12-1 overall record. The team is currently 10-1 in the Patriot League's Fisher Division. The Presidents still have to play Middleboro High School (undefeated in the division) twice before the end of the season. These two games will determine which high school ends up capturing the Fisher Division crown in 2010.

As for the other three programs, all of them, if the season were to end today (it doesn't) would be on the outside looking in when tournament play begins at the end of the month.

North Quincy softball, despite a 9-6 victory over Hingham High School on Monday, currently has a 5-7 overall mark. The Red Raiders have a difficult road ahead as the team still has to play against Whitman-Hanson HS (May 12), Silver Lake HS (May 13), Duxbury HS (May 17), Scituate HS (May 19), and Quincy (May 25). Whitman-Hanson, Silver Lake, and Duxbury are the top-3 teams in the Patriot League's Keenan Division, while Quincy is one of the best teams on the South Shore.

On the baseball diamond, the North Quincy Red Raiders suffered a tough 8-7 loss in extra innings to Hingham High School on Monday. That loss dropped North Quincy's record to 7-10 overall. With five scheduled games left against Whitman-Hanson HS (May 12), Silver Lake (May 13), Duxbury (May 17), Scituate (May 19), and Catholic Memorial (May 25), the Raiders are going to need to win at least three of these games in order to qualify for postseason play.

The Quincy Presidents

earned a huge victory over Pembroke High School on Monday. The final score was 7-6. With a 5-9 overall record, Quincy is going to need to continue to win games if they want a shot to compete in the playoffs. The team has games remaining against Hanover HS (May 12), Randolph (May 14), Rockland (May 17), Middleboro (May 19), Brighton (May 24), and Silver Lake (May 26). Quincy has to win five-out-of-these-six games to qualify.

Game Results

Quincy Softball

Behind the solid pitching of junior Kori Sorensen (seven innings, nine strikeouts), Quincy squeezed by Pembroke High School, 3-2, on Monday.

Juniors Lisa Lam (2-for-3, two runs) and Jamie Shaughnessy (2-for-3, walk, run) paced the Presidents' offensive attack.

With pitching ace Kori Sorensen taking a break, Quincy's other starting pitcher, sophomore Nicole Parry, was the story versus Hingham HS on May 7. Parry threw a no-hitter, striking out 12 batters as Quincy won 6-0.

Senior Julia Yee went 1-for-3 with two runs and Shaughnessy finished with two hits.

North Quincy Softball

The Red Raiders picked up their fifth win of the spring on Monday with a 9-6 victory over Hingham HS.

Junior Montana McBirney went 2-for-4 with three RBI. Sophomore Emma Ainsley (triple, three RBI) and senior Katie Sheridan (3-for-4) also shined for North Quincy at the dish.

Late last week North Quincy picked up its fourth win of the spring with a convincing 7-2 home win over Rockland HS.

Senior Sarah Martin went 2-for-2 with two RBI.

Baseball

Quincy Baseball

Senior Kevin Keith upped his record to 5-1 on the hill as he helped pitch the Presidents past Pembroke HS, 7-6, on Monday.

Keith (two hits), Bob

Kozlowski (two hits), and Lukas McDonough (two hits) provided the offense for Quincy.

On May 7, the Presidents lost to Hingham HS, 10-7.

North Quincy Baseball

Greg Nelson went 2-for-3 with an RBI as North Quincy lost a heartbreaker, 8-7, in eight innings to Hingham HS on Monday.

Earlier last week, the Red Raiders won consecutive games against Scituate HS (May 5) and Rockland (May 7).

Against Rockland, senior Ryan O'Connell went six innings and struck out five batters to earn the win on the mound. The Raiders won 19-5 and collected 22 hits, including six base hit bunts.

Senior John Ainsley (four hits, six RBI), junior Colin Ryan (three hits, four runs), sophomore Joe Alibrandi (four hits), junior Eric Kelly (three hits), senior Ryan Louis (three runs), junior Mike Stille (two hits, two RBI), Tim Liuzzo (two hits, two RBI), sophomore Torrey Gustin, and junior Greg Nelson all had timely hits.

On May 5, the team traveled to Scituate and won 6-4.

Ryan Louis threw a complete-game with six strikeouts. At the plate, Mike Stille (home run, single), John Ainsley (two hits, RBI), senior Devin Hudson (two hits, three stolen bases), Greg Nelson (double, run), and Colin Ryan (single, two walks) all contributed.

NQ Red Raiders Facts

Junior Colin Ryan leads the team with a .433 batting average (26 hits); Senior John Ainsley leads the team with 16 RBI and a .500 on-base percentage; Seniors Devon Hudson and Ryan Louis are tied for the team lead with nine stolen bases; Junior Mike Stille has the team's only home run to go along with 13 RBI and 17 hits; Sophomore Joe Alibrandi is hitting .357; Junior Eric Kelley is hitting .417; Senior Ryan Louis leads the team with three wins, 49 strikeouts, and a 2.80 ERA, and senior Ryan O'Connell has two wins.

Defeated Snug Harbor Gym, 53-51, To Earn Championship Atlantic Gym Captures Annual George Dunn Basketball Tournament

Atlantic Gym defeated defending champion Snug Harbor Gym, 53-51, last month in the championship game of the 2010 Quincy Recreation Department's Annual George Dunn Basketball Tournament. The exciting game was played at Atlantic Gym.

Kevin Hill (21-point performance) led Atlantic Gym to victory. Hill sealed the win with a game-high five three-pointers; Zerick Fadairo (nine points) and Justin Nguyen (nine points) also contributed offensively for Atlantic in the finals.

Jason Yu (eight first-half points), Jeff Liang (four points) and Yi Kit Wong (two points), along with the defensive play of Yixuan Yu, Tim Tran, Sam Li, Jiabao Shang and Geoffrey Quach, helped give Atlantic Gym a 36-28-half-time advantage.

Joe MacRitchie coached the Atlantic Gym championship team.

Snug Harbor, the 2009 champions, cut a seven-point Atlantic lead down to two points in the final ten seconds, but a tipped ball on an inbound play spoiled their comeback hopes.

David Nhan scored nine of his team-high 13 points on three-pointers. Kory Hill scored seven of his 11 points in the second half, and Gerald Santana (ten points) and Mark Sarro (ten points) also contributed offensively for Snug Harbor. Jonathan Mullin chipped in with five points in a losing effort.

Dennis Nguyen, Dennis Nguyen (yes, there where two Dennis Nguyens on Snug Harbor), Chad Farnsworth, and Dan Nguyen all played solidly for Snug Harbor in the game.

Paul Carson and Keith Kane coached Snug Harbor

In a post-championship game ceremony, Barry J. Welch, QRD Director, presented trophies and certificates to the members of both teams and then presented the George Dunn Trophy to Atlantic Gym head coach Joe MacRitchie. The George Dunn Trophy is engraved with the championship team and coach of the team; it remains on display in the QRD Main Office year-round.

In order for Atlantic Gym and Snug Harbor Gym to advance to the George Dunn Championship Game, both teams had to play against some tough competition. Atlantic defeated Point Webster Gym, 48-44, in the semifinals, while Snug Harbor beat Montclair Gym, 62-40, in the other semifinal.

Montclair Gym knocked off Atherton Hough Gym, 54-39, in the third-place

The Annual George Dunn Basketball Tournament is played each year to mark the conclusion of the QRD Winter Open-Gym Program, which runs from November to April under QRD supervision. The tournament is over 50 years old, and back in 1997 it was renamed for longtime Quincy Recreation Department supervisor and youth coach George Dunn who passed away at an early age from cancer.

All participants represent the neighborhood gyms that they attend, and the players come from public, private and parochial schools. Participants cannot have played on any high school basketball team this past winter.

John T. "Jack" Edwards, a former hockey star at Archbishop Williams High School, a leading Catholic co-educational college preparatory high school located in Braintree, was inducted posthumously on March 27 into the school's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Edwards, a former Quincy resident and a member of the AWHS Class of 1967, earned the distinction as the South Shore League's high scorer in both his junior and senior years. During his career at AWHS, he was named to the Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic and the Boston Globe Second Team All-Scholastic.

Mr. Edwards continued to make substantial contributions to both Deerfield Academy and the UMass-Amherst hockey programs following his graduation from AWHS; in 1972, as captain, he led the Minutemen to the NCAA Division II National Championship.

Prevent Diabetes By Keeping Up Healthy Habits

(NAPSA) - Women who develop high blood glucose (blood sugar) levels during pregnancy are said to have gestational diabetes. These women should be tested for diabetes 6 to 12 weeks after their baby is born. In many cases their blood glucose levels show that they are no longer considered to have diabetes. But what many people don't realize is that new moms who had gestational diabetes will continue to have a greater risk for getting diabetes during their entire lifetime. So even if the test for diabetes is normal right after the baby is born, these women should continue to get tested for diabetes at least every three years.

"Many women think that if the follow-up test after the baby is born shows no signs of diabetes, they are in the clear. That is not the case," said Vivian Pinn, M.D., Director of the Office of Research on Women's Health (ORWH) at the National Institutes of Health. "They continue to have a greater risk for getting diabetes in the future. The good news is that there are modest but important steps these women can take to prevent or delay developing diabetes."

Gestational diabetes occurs more often in women with a family history of diabetes, obese women and Latina, African American,

American Indian, Asian, Pacific Islander, and Alaska Native women. Moms who have had gestational diabetes should be tested on a regular basis for diabetes, so it is important that they tell their doctors about their history of gestational diabetes. This follow-up screening may be a simple blood test. Women who have had gestational diabetes have a 2 in 3 chance that it will return in future pregnancies so they should also talk to their obstetricians if they plan on becoming pregnant again.

Women with a history of gestational diabetes should also make an effort to reach and maintain a healthy weight by making healthy food choices and being active for at least 30 minutes, 5 days a week. Even if women do not reach their "goal" weight, research shows that maintaining a healthy lifestyle can help reduce risk. These action steps are also good for the entire family.

"Children of women who had gestational diabetes are also at risk for obesity and diabetes, so it's a good idea for mothers to let their child's doctor know that they had gestational diabetes," added Pinn. "Keeping a healthy lifestyle as a family is good for everyone. It helps both mom and baby manage their risks for getting diabetes in the future."

How Much
Exercise Do
Adults Need?

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: What is the amount of exercise recommended for a man or woman of 55? I was always under the impression that 15 minutes of aerobic exercise three times a week was a sufficient amount of time for heart health. Am I wrong? - R.K.

ANSWER: That used to be the recommended amount of exercise time for an adult. For readers, aerobic exercise is the kind of exercise that is tailored for the heart. It's exercise that employs the continuous use of large muscles for a somewhat protracted period of time, at least 10 minutes. Jogging, biking, walking, swimming and dancing are examples of aerobic exercise.

The latest advice for adults, if their doctors say they are fit enough to exercise, is to get 150 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic exercise a week. That's 20 minutes of exercise seven days a week or 50 minutes, three times a week. You can divide it any way you wish, but the minimum amount of one session of exercise has to be 10 minutes. If you are a novice, take your time to reach 10 minutes. A single session can be longer if you choose.

Moderate-intensity exercise is walking at a pace of 3.5 miles an hour, a brisk walk.

Or if you want to devote less time to exercise, you can if you make it vigorous exercise. Vigorous exercise for 75 minutes a week fulfills the requirement for heart health.

If you're up to it and if you want even greater results, double those times -- 300 minutes of moderate exercise a week or 150 minutes of vigorous exercise a week. I want to issue the warning again. Get doctor approval for any of this. Strength-training exercise -- weightlifting -- also is strongly recommended for all adults regardless of age.

The booklet on aerobic exercise explains how to benefit your heart in clear language. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue -- No. 1301W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am an 80-year-old woman, and I'll never be able to wear a bikini again because my body is covered with ugly red spots. The doctor calls them cherry angiomas.

They are beginning to appear on my trunk and over my thighs and upper arms. I'd like to know how much longer I can expect to play host to them. - J.H.

ANSWER: Cherry angiomas are tiny, round, firm, smooth, red skin projections that are growths of small blood vessels. People can have a few or hundreds. Mostly they spring up on the trunk and upper arms. They have no impact on health.

You can expect to be host to them forever. If they bother you, there are a number of ways to get rid of them. A doctor can dry them up with an electric current or with a laser.

I don't know why they happen. They just do. And they occur mostly in senior years.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

ARTHRITIS-INDUCED PAIN

Arthritis is a potential source of pain that can be diagnosed with x-rays, computed tomography (CT) scans, and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI). As a degenerative condition of the spine, arthritis can lead to neck pain and neurological symptoms such as tingling, numbness, and weakness of the arms. Once imaging helps rule out conditions with similar symptoms, patients can begin chiropractic treatment to help reduce the exertion of vertebral stress on nerves. The chiropractor can also suggest strengthening exercises such as "cervical flexion" to ease pain. This exercise is conducted with the patient lying on his or her back and lifting his or her head until the chin reaches the chest (without lifting the shoulders), followed by head lowering and relaxation.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be a bit shaken by a friend's request. But before the Lamb leaps to conclusions, insist on a full explanation. You still might say no, but at least you'll know what you're saying no to.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Seeing red over those nasty remarks by someone with an ax to grind? Of course you are. So get out there and give your supporters the facts they need to get the truth out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A changing situation should get you to reassess your vacation plans and make any adjustments as soon as possible. And don't fret -- the change most likely will turn out for the better.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't put off dealing with any negative feelings that might be left over from a recent confrontation. The sooner all is resolved, the sooner you can move forward with fewer complications.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Leos and Leonas might feel the urge to redecorate their dens, and that can turn into a good opportunity to strengthen family ties by putting the whole pride to work to make it happen.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Look for the most efficient way to get a job done quickly and well. Taking more time than you need to make it look more challenging is a short-sighted move you might regret later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Travel remains strong in your aspect. And this time, it could involve someone traveling a great distance to come to see you. Meanwhile, an important matter suddenly could need your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A workplace situation becomes a lot more bothersome than you'd expected. Be careful not to be pulled into all that anger. Look for support among others who also want to avoid trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Cheer up, lonely lovers, wherever you are. Just when you thought you'd been deleted from Cupid's database, the chubby cherub proves that's just not so. Congratulations.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A casual relationship could take a more serious turn. Are you ready for it? Your stars say you are. Paired Sea Goats also will find a renewed richness in their relationships.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Meeting a collaborator with new ideas seems to be a dream come true. But for both your sakes, be sure all your legal i's are dotted and t's are crossed before you start working together.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) A romantic overture flatters the usually unflappable Fish. But since it's a sincere from-the-heart gesture, go ahead and enjoy it. A minor health problem responds well to treatment.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the warm heart of a Taurus and the sensitivity of a Gemini. You would make a wonderful leader. So go ahead: Run for office.

Wollaston Lutheran Chinese Ministry Marks 20th Anniversary

THE CHINESE MINISTRY at Wollaston Lutheran Church celebrated its 20th Anniversary May 2nd. The Rev. Richard Man Chan Law (above, with Mrs. Wendy Law) held the church's first Chinese service in May of 1990. Twenty years ago Pastor Law made a 'leap of faith' by leaving his position as Executive Director of World Vision Hong Kong to come to a small congregation in Quincy without a Chinese membership. In addition to marking Pastor Law's 20 Years of Ministry in Quincy, Sunday's service also celebrated the 40th Anniversary of his ordination in Hong Kong. The noon service was followed by a luncheon with over 200 guests from around the country held at the China Pearl restaurant. Mayor Thomas P. Koch recognized Rev. Law for his 20-year contribution to the Quincy community with a proclamation declaring May 2, 2010 as "Pastor Law Day" in the City of Quincy.

AMONG THOSE CELEBRATING the 20th anniversary of the Chinese Ministry at Wollaston Lutheran Church were (from left): Rev. Terry Chan and Rev. David Chan (Bethel Grace Lutheran Ministries of San Francisco, CA), Mayor Thomas Koch, Rev. Richard Law (Wollaston Lutheran), Rev. Shiu Ming Lau (Lutheran Church of the Holy Spirit of San Francisco, CA), Mrs. Wendy Law, Rev. and Mrs. Adolph Wismar, Jr. (Wollaston Lutheran), Rev. Ingo Dutzmann (First Lutheran Church of Boston), Mrs. Priscilla Keurulainen, Rev. James Keurulainen (LCMS New England District President), Rev. and Mrs. Leong Wa Chu (True Light Lutheran Church of New York, NY), and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee.

John Kastanis QMC Interim CEO

The Quincy Medical Center Board of Trustees has named John N. Kastanis, FACHE, as interim Chief Executive Officer while the Board continues its search process for a permanent CEO.

The Board expects this process to be completed within four to six months.

Kastanis comes to Quincy Medical Center with over 30 years of experience leading teaching, acute/tertiary-care and specialty hospitals. He has a demonstrated record of success in turn-around plans, and building new networks and partnerships. The QMC Board noted Kastanis' successful interim assignment at Southampton Hospital in New York, helping to address many similar issues that face QMC, including successfully recruiting a permanent CEO.

Prior to his interim post at Southampton, Kastanis was the President & CEO of the Hospital for Joint Diseases where he transformed the hospital into a profitable entity with a continuously growing revenue and volume budget. He has also held high-level executive positions with the Mt. Sinai-NYU Health System, Bayley Seton Hospital, New Rochelle Hospital Medical Center and the Manhattan Eye, Ear & Throat Hospital. Over the past few years, Kastanis has also served as a consultant to investment banking firms, management consulting firms and health systems.

$9 Million Shortfall In FY2011 Budget Jobs At Stake At Teachers' Meeting Monday

By LAURA GRIFFIN

When Quincy's teachers' meet Monday, millions of dollars will be at stake as members analyze their role, if any, in easing the school department's 2011 budget crisis.

The major issue will likely be $2.5 million of the $5 million in negotiated raises due school staff next year. Mayor Thomas Koch has asked teachers to defer those raises to help close the school department's $9 million shortfall.

Nothing is on the table on that issue for Monday's meeting at the Boston Teachers' Union Hall in Dorchester, according to Paul Phillips, President of the Quincy Educators' Association (QEA). However, he does expect motions from the membership.

Phillips and QEA representatives have been meeting with Koch in recent weeks after the mayor began seeking deferrals of raises from the city's unions.

To date, Koch has secured wage deferrals from five city unions in an effort to reduce the number of layoffs and cuts in city ser-

FEMA's Flood-Relief Assistance Quincy Location Closing Friday

By JOE REARDON

The Norfolk County Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) at the Richard J. Koch Recreation Center is one of three disaster recovery centers set to close in the coming days.

The centers became necessary in the wake of serious flooding across the state after rainstorms in March. State, local and Federal Dis-saster Assistance (FDA) officials have been on location at each of the 12 centers throughout the state in counties that were deemed disaster areas by Governor Deval Patrick.

"They've been good," said Victor Inge of FEMA. "All of them have been very successful. People came in to register (for federal aid) and found out they qualified.

"The numbers of people registering statewide are slowing."

The disaster center at the Koch Recreation Center is slated to close its doors this Friday at 4 p.m. Both the Bristol and Middlesex County officers will be closing Thursday and Saturday, respectively.

Decision Doe Not Impact 'Chapel' Status Of Church

Friends Of Star Of The Sea React To Vatican Denial

Sean Glennon and Maureen Mazrimas, co-Chairs of the Friends of Star of the Sea, learned Monday that their parish appeal to overturn Cardinal Sean O'Malley's decree of suppression against their parish in 2004 has been denied by a select group of bishops on the Vatican's highest court, called the Apostolic Signatura.

The Star of the Sea appeal is one of 10 appeals that were denied by the Signatura during their session on May 7 at the Vatican.

"I am not at all surprised by the Vatican's denial," said Glennon. "Their decision is in keeping with previous decisions. What does surprise and disappoint me, however, is that the Signatura changed the rules of the game so that our case was only heard by a select group of cardinals, rather than the 'full bench' of judges, which is what was supposed to have happened."

"The whole point of this appeal was to present our case before the full court," said Glennon. "We had a very strong case, citing over a dozen violations of canon law in the suppression of Star of the Sea Parish. The court's last minute game changer leads me to believe that we may have actually won if our case were heard by the full bench."

"While the outcome was somewhat predictable, we needed to wait for the Vatican process to end before we could move on to other options. Our work is far from over," said Glennon.

"We are pleased that Cardinal O'Malley reopened Star of the Sea as a chapel in response to a positive recommendation from the Meade-Eisner Reconfiguration Review Committee, which he established in late 2004. However, we believe the committee's intent was to restore Star of the Sea to full parish status in a model called 'twinning,' which would afford the opportunity to celebrate baptisms, weddings, and funerals at Star of the Sea."

"We are also fortunate that the Vatican's decision will have no impact upon the current 'chapel' status of the church," said Glennon. "Star of the Sea was reopened irrespective of our appeals, and we look forward to working with Cardinal O'Malley to grow and strengthen the Catholic Church, starting right here."

Mazrimas noted that "in the five years since Star of the Sea reopened, members have shown a commitment to regaining the vitality of the parish by having a good showing at mass and contributing financially to its support. We are willing to do more, we are waiting to be asked." Glennon and Mazrimas say that their membership has given them a mandate to exercise every possible option to restore their faith community to full "parish" status. Options currently before them include civil litigation as well as a secondary Vatican continue to hear that we must 'grow the Church.' How can you 'grow the church' if you dispose of the fields?"

The Boston appeals are the result of the "Reconfiguration" program of parish closings announced in early 2004 in the Archdiocese of Boston, in the immediate aftermath of the clergy sex abuse scandal which was settled in late 2003 - with $85 million paid by the archdiocese for 541 claims. To fund this, in May of 2004 the RCAB identified 83 Boston-area parishes to be closed, almost one-fourth of all RCAB parishes then open. When announced, this was the most massive parish closing program in the history of Catholic America.

Although the archdiocese has claimed vociferously over the years that the parish closings of 2004-2005 had nothing to do with its clergy sex abuse settlement, in 2008 the RCAB's own canon advocate in Rome filed a sworn brief with the Signatura, which includes the following remarkable passage (translated from the Latin):

"...maximum discretion was given to His Excellency the Archbishop of Boston so that he might save the entire archdiocese from monetary ruin, provoked by the 'sexual abuse crisis' [emphasis in original]. It is in this context that all actions of this process of reconfiguration and 'closing of parishes' are to be understood, not excluding the suppression of wealthy parishes, not excluding the suppression of parishes of maximum vitality..."

A statement released by the Council of Parishes today, read, in part, "This is the revealed truth about the massive parish destruction program: parishes were closed, to liquidate real estate to fund the sex abuse settlement. The contorted statements inflicted by the RCAB upon its parishioners over the past several years about the reasons for closing parishes (shortage of clergy, changing demographics, insolvent parishes) has turned out to be at variance with the truth - intentionally misleading." The Council of Parishes is an umbrella group for parishes facing suppression. The Council is based in Boston, and has grown to become a national organization over the past two years. The Council has 70 member parishes nationwide.

Since the sexual abuse scandal exploded in Boston more than eight years ago, at least $2.5 billion has been paid out by American bishops. And just last week, Vermont's diocese of Montpelier settled 26 claims for almost $18 million.

Councillors Honor Three With Local Ties

City Councillors recently honored three men who served Quincy during their lifetime and whose passing leaves a loss in the city.

Bill Mitchell

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro described the many contributions of Bill Mitchell who served as a teacher at Quincy High School and tennis coach.

"Bill will be missed," said Gutro, noting that Mitchell attended neighborhood meetings, spoke against unwanted development and spoke for those who couldn't speak for themselves.

Tom Henshaw

City Council President

Kevin Coughlin said longtime Quincy Sun reporter will not only be missed by the newsroom but by all of the Quincy community.

Henshaw covered all aspects of the city and could recount details of past elections and newsworthy development for the past decades.

Sgt. Robert Barrett

Coughlin also honored the late Sgt. Robert Barrett who was killed in action April 19 in Afghanistan.

Sgt. Barrett served in the National Guard and was a member of the Massachusetts Volunteer 54th Regiment Honor Guard Unit.

Some Nomination Papers Invalidated Leaving State Rep. Candidates Short Of Required 150 Signatures

Kelly, Dwyer Names Ruled Off Ballot

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Several nomination papers from two would-be candidates for state representative in the 2nd Norfolk District have been rejected by the Secretary of State's Election Division.

Leo Kelly, former Ward 1 councillor, and School Committeewoman Elaine Dwyer, each submitted nomination papers to run as Democrats in the state representative race to succeed Rep. Stephen Tobin who is running for State Senate.

However, because some of the nomination papers did not list the word "Quincy" with the candidates' names, the papers were subsequently rejected by the state's Election Division. As a result, neither Kelly nor Dwyer had the sufficient 150 certified signatures required for their names to appear on the ballot.

Kelly and Dwyer were notified of the rejection in letters dated May 14.

According to the state's Election Office, Kelly submitted 13 nomination sheets containing a total of 206 certified signatures. Of those nomination papers, four papers – containing a total of 58 signatures – failed to include Quincy as Kelly's city of residence. Therefore, the office rejected the certified signatures on those nomination papers. In essence, Kelly filed only 148 valid signatures – missing the ballot by two signatures.

Dwyer submitted 11 nomination papers containing a total of 165 certified signatures. Of those papers submitted, two papers – containing a total of 28 certified signatures – failed to include Quincy as Dwyer's city of residence. Therefore, the office rejected the certified signatures on those nomination papers. Dwyer had 28 signatures invalidated, meaning she filed only 137 valid signatures – missing the ballot by 13 signatures.

The letters also indicate to Kelly and Dwyer that "although you do not qualify to have your name printed on the ballot, you may still pursue a write-in or sticker campaign," wrote Michelle K. Tassinari, director and legal counsel for the state's Election Division.

Kelly and Dwyer could choose to appeal the decision in court.

Without Kelly and Dwyer, that leaves four certified candidates running for state representative in the 2nd Norfolk District: Democrats Tackey Chan and Joseph Keegan; Independent Karl Roos and Republican John Iredale.

A New Beginning For Hairplace One

The end is near for the familiar three-story brick building at the corner of Maple and Chestnut Streets in Quincy Center.

But for one business in the Bradford Building, a new beginning is just on the horizon.

Hairplace One – a mainstay on Maple Street in Quincy Center for 33 years – is relocating to 85 Quincy Ave. in August. The hair salon founded by the late Russell Affsa and now owned by his 45-year-old son, Ron Affsa, is relocating to the Quincy Avenue site in about 10 weeks. That's because the 91-year-old Bradford Building – where Hairplace One has resided since 1977 – will be knocked down sometime this summer.

For Ron Affsa, the salon and the Bradford Building have been like a second home. The lifelong Quincy resident and 1983 graduate of North Quincy High School has worked there since he was a young teen-ager. He has fond memories of working side-by-side with his dad, learning the business from the ground up. It's also where his wife, Laura, was working before they started dating years ago. Today, the husband and wife have a 17-year-old son, Billy, a junior at B.C. High School.

"I grew up in this building. I have a lot of memories here," Ron says reflecting on the past while casting an optimistic eye towards the future. Since learning the building was slated for demolition, his emotions have run the gamut, from stress and sadness to excitement and rejuvenation.

As the building's final days count down, Affsa is focusing on relocating the second-generation family business into a larger space with plenty of parking. The new Hairplace One salon will be located next to Citizens Bank on Quincy Avenue. The location once housed an automobile dealership and more recently a video store.

Hairplace 1 will also have a new neighbor at its new address; a Tedeschi's Convenience store is slated to open next door in July.

"It's going to be really, really nice," Affsa says describing features of the new salon. "We'll have 25-foot-high ceilings, exposed brick walls and a concrete floor. It will have a very industrial feel to it. The salon will also have a color bar with stools offering (hair color) consultations. It'll be a focal point of the new salon," he says.

The new Hairplace One will be larger with 2,600 square-feet (700 square feet more than the Maple Street location). There will be a facial room, men's area with flat screen TV and 17 cutting stations.

The pending move brings an array of emotions since it was Affsa's father, Russell, who started the business in 1972 which was located on Cottage Avenue before moving to Maple Street five years later. Mr. Affsa retired in 1993. He passed away in January 2009.

"The building has been in my family for years – from 1976 to last July," Ron notes. "But it got to the point where it was too expensive to hold on to and I had to sell it. Steve and Doug Briggs at Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance (who own the building now) have been nothing but gentlemen in handling my relocation situation with courtesy and professionalism.

"But it's still a little sad. I grew up in that building. I've been working there since I was 13 doing maintenance and cleaning up. It's all I know. So knocking the building down is like the end of an era for me. It's not like it's a renovation. I'm moving."

Ron is optimistic that the transition from Maple Street to his new salon at 85 Quincy Ave. will not cause a disruption in business. He's aiming to open Aug. 1.

"We'll close at the end of the day on a Saturday, disassemble the furniture, pack it up and bring it over to the new location and work for 48 hours straight setting up and getting everything squared away so that we can open our doors (the following) Tuesday morning."

If the Aug. 1 date doesn't work, he says the other target opening date is August 28.

"I'm very excited about moving," he continues. "This will be a brand new, exciting salon. It should energize my staff of 18 employees and myself. I can continue to focus on my father's legacy."

As his plans to relocate move closer to fruition, Ron still finds himself thinking about his dad's legacy and all the hard work he's put in to sustain the business.

"My solace is seeing my dad's business going to a new location. He was 45 years-old when he started Hairplace 1. I'm 45 years now and I have an opportunity to continue Hairplace 1 at a new location. Hopefully I can be as successful as my father was. I hope he's proud of me."

The irony is not lost on Ron. In fact, it will have its rightful place at the new location.

"I'm putting my father's name beneath the Hairplace One sign on the front façade."

Hairplace One: a business on the move. Here's to a long and prosperous future.

1550 Hancock Street
Quincy, Mass.

THIS IS A 1940's postcard showing the interior of Baker's Clothing Store in Quincy Center. Baker's was a landmark Quincy men's store for almost 40 years. Starting out on School Street in 1926, Al Baker moved to Hancock Street in the 1930's occupying this store from 1934 until closing in the late 1950's. When it closed, there were over a dozen other men's clothing stores in the Square. Some of them that were popular were: Beebe's, Dale's, Donaher's, Markson Bros., Milton's, Richman's, Sawyer's, Whiteman's, Howard Clothes, London Clothes and of course Remick's men's department. Only Milton's, which moved to Braintree, is still in business. After Baker's closed Standard TV used this store for several years. It is now home to S6 Quincy, a sports bar. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Creedon: Council Axe Will Close 8 Schools, Trigger Heavy Layoffs

By FRANK McCAULEY

Eight more schools and hundreds of employees now face the axe as a result of what School Superintendent Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon calls the City Council's destruction of the school system.

The $4.7 million in cuts made by the Council will force the school system into a total reorganization, cancel summer school, night programs and all sports, eliminate jobs for about 15 administrators, 40 teachers, 125 teachers' aides and an unknown number of other employees, according to Dr. Creedon.

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin responding to Creedon's statements said, "I don't buy it. I believe that some of the statements being made publicly by the school department were totally scare tactics."

Opposing the $4.7 million cut in the school budget were Councillors Joseph J. LaRaia, Francis X. McCauley and James A. Sheets.

JUDGE ADVOCATES DEATH PENALTY FOR DRUG SMUGGLERS

Judge Henry H. Chmielinski, Jr., would like to see certain traffickers in drugs put to death. And the problem being what it is, he says, the death penalty may be coming.

Judge Chmielinski, who is currently sitting at the Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham, is known for dealing harshly with cases involving the sale of drugs.

"Probably 80% of the serious crimes that I sit on, are directly or indirectly connected with the drug traffic," he said.

Open Letter To City Council, School Committee

Please do not accept the budget in its current form. The financial consequences of a decimated public school system are costly: increased juvenile delinquency, decreased property values and suburban flight.

The human costs can not be so easily quantified. So many very talented and successful people will tell you that they did not fit in in high school and that if weren't for the drama club or the sports team or the shop class or a myriad of other extra curriculars, they would never have discovered their gifts; indeed some would not have finished high school at all.

In times of crisis, good parents put their children's welfare first. Communities must do the same. Please find other places to cut the budget.

We can live with shabby parks for a couple of years and I would gladly pay a dollar or two to have my trash hauled away each week if it meant preserving vital programs like Renaissance, full day Kindergarten and JV sports. Put a freeze on any overtime for city employees unless it is for weather-related or other public emergency.

Yours is a daunting task. I recognize that. Please reject this budget and remember that we can not afford to walk away from our obligation to educate our children.

Quincy Will Make It Through These 'Dark Days'

The financial news coming out of Quincy city Hall is not good. Communities large and small across Massachusetts are going through very much the same thing as the City of Presidents.

When times were good, local aid from Beacon Hill helped keep the financial Armageddon at bay. Times are now tough all around from the Statehouse to city halls and town halls. Many folks irate over high taxes and so-called excessive spending think cutting is painless.

Cut the waste and save the important stuff. However, that is not how things really work. It may be good for a bumper sticker or sound bite at election time but managing the financial underpinnings of a municipal government is tougher than many critics apparently wish to think.

There are no easy steps or simple answers to get us out of this crisis. It will take real leadership and it may involve some pain for taxpayers and those depending on services that they have come to take for granted.

What the City of Quincy is experiencing is the same as what the City of Los Angeles is also going through. Whether the population of the community is one hundred thousand or ten million, the principles to survive this financial free fall remain the same.

Blaming the mayor or city councilors for this major municipal issue to be solved isn't the response needed. Not matter who was elected in the last race, this financial mess was already racing along too.

As it is said, the stuff has finally hit the fan. We have met the enemy and it is us. No ways of solving things or financing them must be found because old ways of doing business no longer work.

Recently the former Los Angeles Mayor Richard Riordan co-authored a commentary in The Wall Street Journal (Los Angeles on the Brink of bankruptcy, May 5) in which he offered Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa steps to save the city from ruin.

What works for Los Angeles can work in Quincy. Annual pensions and post-retirement health care costs will continue to increase. Mayors can't control the economy.

Mayor Tom Koch is surely serious about controlling spending. City Councils don't like layoffs, no one does. However, there is much that you can't really cut. Pensions and health care are fixed parts of the budget. They are there and that is it. Public safety (police, fire and EMS) can be tweaked but not much more. Both police and fire need to be run as efficiently as possible.

Public safety can't be had on the cheap and every department will be hit in the next fiscal budget. I would rather save jobs and put police cruisers on hold as the mayor and police chief have reportedly agreed to do.

The City of Presidents is not on the brink of bankruptcy as the City of Angels is but Quincy residents like residents all across the state will have to come to accept a leaner municipal government.

It is easy to blame big spending government for the problems now at our doorsteps but that would be a red herring. All of us in our lives must learn to live with less during this period in our history and government is just all of us living together.

Quincy is okay and will make it through these dark days. No one is smiling at the moment. We all face serious issues in this crisis and if we face them squarely, we can move forward without any rancor. This is not a time to play politics but a time to work together for all.

Phil's Multi-Stuffed Gourmet Peppers

Each week, I, along with my brother Phil and his daughters Ann and Jean take turns preparing dinner usually on a Friday night.

And we don't reveal what we are cooking until all of us are ready to sit down. The element of surprise has us thinking about it all week and sometimes we even try to guess what it is.

It was Phil's turn- and his recipe was gourmet delicious multi stuffed peppers. They can be made ahead of time and refrigerated until time to bake.

Multi Stuffed Peppers

- 1-pound ground beef (any ground meat will do)
- 1 small can mushrooms (fresh can be used)
- 1 small can sliced black olives (or whole, cut in small pieces)
- 2 cloves of garlic

Olive oil for sautéing
6 medium sized green peppers (any color can be used)

½ cup seasoned breadcrumbs salt and pepper to taste
Some of the liquid from the mushrooms and the olives

In a large skillet, heat the oil and garlic and sauté the ground meat. Add the mushrooms, olives and the breadcrumbs. Add as much liquid as it takes to make the mixture easy to place in the peppers. Stuff each pepper with the mixture.

Add a little bit of water and a bit of olive oil on the bottom of a baking pan. Place each pepper side by side and bake in a 375-degree oven for an hour and a quarter or until the peppers are tender.

Along with these great stuffed peppers, we had mashed potatoes, a medley of mixed vegetables, and an arugula salad.

Free Movie Screening Monday At Library

A free screening of the 2007 movie "Away From Her" will be shown Monday, May 24 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The movie is adapted from the celebrated author Alice Munroe's short story "The Bear Came Over the Mountain."

Married for almost 50 years, Grant's and Fiona's commitment to each other appears unwavering. But when neither Fiona nor her husband can deny any longer that she is being consumed by Alzheimer's disease, the couple is forced to wrenchingly redefine the limits of their love and loyalty – and face the complete, inevitable transition from lovers to strangers.

Rated PG-13, the 110-minute film stars Julie Christie, Michael Murphy, Gordon Pinsent and Olympic Dukakis. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Spend More, Take Freeze

I'm writing to offer two recommendations on the budget crisis in our schools.

First, spend more money on schools. Cuts of this magnitude cannot be managed in conventional ways. They call for fundamental change in how education is delivered or for significant new funding. The former is nearly impossible for September. The latter should be strongly considered by the mayor and city council.

Quincy schools used to consume a much larger share of the city's budget. They used to have a much higher enrollment as well. Unfortunately, we are on the verge of a doom loop: programs are cut, enrollment falls, and the schools appear to need less money. We need to invest to stop the decline in programs, turn enrollment around, and make Quincy a magnet for parents with children.

How much is enough? I suggest a simple test: change the allocation until consumers of all city services are equally angry. Right now, I don't hear the outrage and anguish about fire stations, police patrols, or parks that I hear from students and parents about schools.

Second, I ask the QEA to accept a deferral of their contracted increase. This is not easy to ask for, and much more difficult to accept. We all make plans for what we'll do with $25 or $50 more per paycheck; take the family to dinner, make a car repair, or put money aside for a long overdue vacation.

Last year, when I was running for election to school committee, I felt it was reasonable for the QEA to resist a wage deferral.

Their contract had low annual increases in the early years; 2009-10 was a chance to catch up. I'm a more distant observer this year, but I think it's time to accept a deferral. The district, and its least veteran teachers, need it.

I hate to end on a gloomy note, so here's a positive suggestion. Next time employment terms or union contracts are up for negotiation, what about a bonus for city workers who live in Quincy?

Workers who live in Quincy support the city's tax base and have a vested interest in the excellence of the services they and their co-workers provide.

Let's recognize and encourage their commitment.

Budget Cuts Reduce Library Hours

The Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy, announces plans to reduce hours at the Main Library and the branch libraries due to a 9% reduction in the Library's city budget for Fiscal Year 2011, which follows a 10% cut in the current year's budget.

The Library also faces an additional loss of $123,000 in state funding due to reductions in regional library system contracts. The combined cuts will mean a loss of 6.5 FTE (full-time equivalent) employees, leaving the Library unable to maintain 68 Main Library hours per week and 84 combined hours at the three branch libraries.

Mrs. Sandra McCauley, Board of Trustees Chair, expressed distress at the curtailment of library services, and said "While I realize that most city departments are being cut also, I feel we are suffering a disproportionate share of cuts. I can only hope that should additional monies become available, the city will remember the Library and its vital role in our community."

Beginning July 1, each branch library will be open 16 hours per week, down from 28 hours per week.

The branches will be open on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 5 p.m. The Main Library will be closed on Sundays for the duration of the fiscal year beginning July 1, and will close on Saturdays during July and August.

Aura Salon Collecting 'Clippings For Shipping'

By JOE REARDON

The Aura Salon, 1155 Hancock St. is doing its part in helping the environment — one haircut at a time.

Sue Canavan's popular Quincy Center salon is collecting both hair and pantyhose, which will ultimately be used in cleaning up the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

Sound like an odd combination? It's not really.

Phil McCrory, a hair stylist from Alabama, discovered the ability hair has to soak up oil when he was watching coverage of the Exxon Valdez spill in 1989. He saw the otters that were covered in oil, struggling to breathe, and it suddenly came to him: Hair stylists shampooed hair because it collected oil. He took the idea of using hair to soak up oil and ran with it.

McCrory tested how much petroleum he could collect with the clippings from his salon floor. He was impressed enough with the results to develop a hairmat, which is specifically used to soak up oil.

Canavan has two bins in her salon. One is for hair clippings and the other for pantyhose. The hair is stuffed into the pantyhose. Both the hair and pantyhose are used to make absorbent tubing. The hair and pantyhose are boxed and sent to the Matter of Trust headquarters in California.

Canavan has up to 150 clients a week at her busy salon and that adds up to a lot of hair on the floor. "It can be a lot of hair," she said. "Absolutely. It's awesome to recycle anyway."

All types of hair, including straight, curly, dyed, permed and straightened. Washed, used nylon stockings are also accepted.

"It makes perfect sense because the oil gets into the fur of the animal," said Aura stylist Kerin Pittman.

The oil spill was a result of the explosion of the oil rig Deepwater Horizon last month off the coast of Louisiana. Eleven people were killed and millions of gallons of oil spilled.

Through May 17, Quincy residents had received $831,982.42 in disaster relief and grants. A total of $47,025,290 had been given in assistance statewide. Statewide, 305 residents visited a FEMA office on May 17, 11 of which went to the Quincy location. Registration numbers for Quincy had swelled to 595 overall.

Inge said that those people who still need assistance could visit any of the DRC's that are still open. "It's (aid) pointing at where the damage was," he said. "If people had any damage from the flooding, we're encouraging them to register."

Fire Chief Joseph Baron echoed Inge's call for people to continue registering for assistance. "We will continue the formal reviews of the damage to the City's infrastructure such as storm water pumping stations, sewer and drain pipes, brook systems which had walls wash in, tide gates and sea walls, and roadways that were submerged

"The city will continue our goal to not only obtain federal funding to return these assets back to their operating condition but also to partner with agencies like FEMA and the Army Corp of Engineers to expand the city infrastructure to mitigate future flooding events."

Information is also available on the Internet and by phone. Disaster information can be obtained at www.disasterassistance.com and by calling (800) 621-FEMA or (800) 462-7585 through May 28.

Budget Hearings Scheduled

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan Monday announced the following dates for 2011 budget meetings.

The council will hold a public hearing on the budget Tuesday, May 25 at 7:30 p.m. and the Finance Committee discussion will follow at 8 p.m.

The Finance Committee will meet 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 2.

On Monday, June 14, the Finance Committee will discuss the School Department budget beginning at 7:30 p.m. with a full council meeting to follow at 8 p.m.

The City Council is expected to vote on the budget on June 14.

Koch Calls Meals Tax Fair

Standing by his vow not to raise the property tax levy for the second straight year, Mayor Thomas Koch says the City Council's approval of the local option .75 percent increase on the state meals tax is the fairest way for the city to balance the goals of protecting residents and businesses while at the same time securing the city's financial future.

"Holding the line on property taxes will greatly help our city, its businesses and our families to get through this crisis, but at the same time we must recognize that our long-term health will require additional revenue," said Mayor Koch. "This is one small way to help us meet our obligations, and I appreciate the courage and foresight of the Councilors who voted to adopt it."

The local option meals tax will mean an additional 37 cents on a restaurant tab of $50, or 75 cents on a $100 bill, officials said. Koch has pledged that the revenue, expected to be about $1 million for a full year, will be directed toward the City's stabilization account and used only to offset major spikes in debt payments due by the city over the next several years.

The financing package for the new Quincy High School is coming due, which will see the city's annual budget for debt payments increase by more than $4 million over the next several years, Koch said.

Koch said the city waited a full year after state authorities approved the local option tax to see how it would affect other communities. Nearly 100 cities and towns across Massachusetts have adopted the local option — including Boston and Milton — and all of them have met revenue projections on the meals tax.

Council OKs Meal Tax, 6-3

By LAURA GRIFFIN

"Dine out and help build Quincy's schools," might just be a new slogan for the city's restaurant owners who must add a .25% meals' tax to their menus as of July 1.

City councilors voted 6-3 to approve the new tax Monday garnering the two-thirds majority needed for passage.

According to Chris Walker, policy director for Mayor Thomas Koch, the tax will add 37 cents to a $50 dinner bill and over $1 million a year to the city's Stabilization Fund. That fund will help pay down the school building bonds with payments of $14 million due in 2013.

Prior to the vote, councilors weighed both sides of the issue which drew opposition from the two local Chambers of Commerce and restaurant owners.

Peter Forman, CEO, South Shore Chamber of Commerce, warned councilors that the new tax was an added burden for restaurants that "operate on a very thin margin."

"Eventually, they will decide the bill is starting to add up and go out a little less," Forman said of restaurant patrons.

"It's an unfair burden," said Dean Rizzo, Co-Director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce who said local restaurant owners are already operating on the edge due to the economy.

Rizzo and Maralin Manning attended the meeting.

"Discretionary income is down," said Rizzo.

Local restaurateurs, Jen Ormond, owner of Coffee Break cafes and Tina Tuggle, manager of Napoli Pizza, opposed the tax.

Neil Kiley, owner of The Fat Cat, asked to be listed against the tax.

"Raising the meals tax is not business friendly," said Tuggle who said, "You're taking the money people would leave for a tip."

Tuggle also said the new tax will hurt businesses that are already hurting while Ormond said she has already seen a slight drop in business with the slipping economy.

"They walk in with $2.09 to get their coffee," said Ormond, adding when the price goes up, they blame her.

School Committee member Barbara Isola spoke in favor of the increase, noting that she understood how difficult it is for "Mom and Pop shops."

However, Isola said that the new tax would add about 75 cents to a $100 bill. "This is something we need to do.

The debt on those (building) projects will be spiking."

Opponents had some support among the councilors but not enough. Councilors Joseph Finn, Doug Gutro, Ward 5 and Brian Palucci, Ward 4, voted against the new tax.

Councilor Joseph Finn said, "They feel like they're being nickel and dimed. This sends the wrong message." Ward 4 Councilor Brian Palucci said, "I'm uncomfortable putting our businesses as a competitive disadvantage. The businesses are already struggling."

"Nobody likes to impose new taxes," said Councilor John Keenan who cited the severe cuts of local aid. "Our bond rating is tied to our Stabilization Fund."

"Homeowners have had it," said Ward 2 Councilor Dan Raymond who supported the measure along with Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee who agreed that new taxes have "disproportionately fallen on the homeowner" because state legislators will not increase the personal income tax.

"They haven't the courage to do that," said McNamee.

Council, President Kevin Coughlin, Councilors Michael McFarland, and Margaret Laforest, Ward 1 joined Keenan, McNamee and Raymond in voting for the measure.

FALLEN FLAT

There are many causes of flat feet, including decreased exercising and increased weight. Most people have a gap under the arch of their foot when they are standing. Those with flat feet either have no arch or a very low arch. Their feet may roll over to the inner side when they are standing, resulting in the feet pointing outwards. They may experience pain in their feet and leg joints. If flat feet cause pain, an evaluation with a podiatrist can determine the cause. The exact treatment will depend on the cause of the flat feet. Some common treatments are shoe inserts, rest, and anti-inflammatory medication. Complications of having flat feet include shin splints and stress fractures.

To determine the best approach for the treatment of flat feet and other foot conditions, a podiatrist will examine the foot; perform a gait analysis; and look at the patient's medical history, length and frequency of symptoms, and types of current activity. Offering comprehensive care for all podiatric concerns, our state-of-the-art foot-care facilities offer relief from the painful condition of hyperpronation through Hy-ProCure™, an ankle stabilizing procedure that utilizes a titanium implant to eliminate the discomfort caused by excessive motion of the foot and ankle. Call us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment at 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

Napoli Pizzeria: A Quincy Tradition Since 1962

Guy and Josie Consoli opened Napoli Pizzeria at 1570 Hancock Street in Quincy Center in 1962. Since that time, inspired by their collection of authentic recipes from Southern Italy, the couple has worked side by side to make their pizza pie the best Quincy has to offer. After 47 years they have earned what is perhaps the "best reputation" for a perfect hand tossed traditional pizza pie, serving both Sicilian and New York styles. The dough is made fresh daily and the toppings are prepared with the top grade ingredients; the highest quality cheeses, meats and produce available.

If calzones better suit your fancy, these too are made fresh to order with your choice of either mozzarella or ricotta cheese filling and each one comes with a side of Josie's special Napoli marinara sauce.

Top your favorite pasta, ziti, spaghetti, linguini or shells with homemade meat-balls, chicken or eggplant and expect freshly toasted garlic bread to complement your selection; however currently the signature pasta offering is sautéed fresh broccoli, chicken breast and Napoli cream sauce.

Napoli features on their menu a full selection of hot and cold subs, wraps and newly added Panini specialty sandwiches as well as a full range of garden salads with dressings, toppings and add-ons too numerous to mention.

No order is too small or too large; pizza by the single slice or a catering menu to serve large groups at home is available.

Now offering a full delivery service and soon for your convenience curb side pick-up will be available. Napoli is open Monday through Saturday from 10:00 a.m. - 10:00 p.m. and Sunday from 12 noon to 9:00 p.m. Visit www.Napoli-pizzeria.com or call (617) 471-9090 to place your order.

Jobs At Stake At Teachers' Meeting Monday

vices.

"Any proposal must come from the members," Phillips said this week, stating that he will not recommend a wage deferral to QEA membership.

Members can propose a motion to defer the salary increases from the floor Monday, and such a motion must be approved by 2/3rds of those members present.

The QEA has over 900 members with some 880 representing the public schools. The balance staff Quincy College and can not vote on the school issues.

"We don't bargain in public," said Phillips who added, "We have offered them (an agreement) within a couple of hundred thousand dollars."

Phillips, also, indicated that the union would have agreed to a two year freeze, but the city balked at a guarantee for the third year.

At the outset, Koch informed all union leaders that the administration would not reopen nor negotiate contract changes in order to win deferrals.

"The danger is we wind up leaving next week with nothing in place," said Phillips who scheduled a second union meeting next Wednesday in case the membership needs more time after Monday's meeting.

While a deferral from the teachers will help the school department, the 2011 budget still offers a dismal year ahead according to school administrators, the School Committee, parents and students.

The public schools reported an enrollment of 8969 in October, according to state records.

Level Funds Vs. Level Service

Koch has recommended a fiscal year 2011 "level-funded" appropriation of $82,413,157 for the city's schools which received city funds of $81,083,562 in the current fiscal year.

However, school officials have identified an additional $9.1 million needed to actually to maintain the system with level services. The shortfall is due to such increases as $5 million in negotiated salary increases, $600,000 in special needs tuitions and transportation, and a cut of over $800,000 in state aid.

In a preliminary budget report, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, School Superintendent, and his Leadership Team proposed layoffs of the equivalent of over 200 full-time employees, including the equivalent of 89.5 classroom teachers.

The School Committee has not accepted any of the recommendations and has just begun budget review.

The proposed cuts would entail such items as the elimination of full day kindergarten and Reading, Foreign Language and Technology staff in the middle schools as well as 30 teachers in the high schools. In addition, there would be cuts in guidance, nurses, information technology, assistant principals, and extra curricular programs at the middle and high schools.

The team, also, recommended slashing the equivalent of 71.4 full time staff in academic support and programs and 40.5 non-academic support, as well over a 50% cut in the athletic expenses account. That cut would eliminate the department's secretary and coordinator.

The leadership team, also, recommended charging for transporting regular students who live within the two-mile limit, increasing charges for food, building rentals and initiating a system of athletic fees with a cap of $500 to $750 per family.

Committee Response

Nothing has been decided as far as layoffs, fees, or program changes, according to school committee members.

"We need time to look at this," School Committee member David McCarthy said at the May 12 budget meeting. "It's still a working piece of paper."

"It's going to take real leadership," said Vice Chair Anne Mahoney who is also chair of the Budget Committee.

"This is cyclical. It's always been cyclical," said committee member Emily Lebo who is a member of the Budget Committee.

Mahoney, along with Phillips and eight to ten of the residents' speaking at the committee session said they would be happy to pay more taxes to avoid any cuts to the system.

"I too would welcome a tax hike. I too would welcome fees. There is a way we can make this budget palatable," said Mahoney.

However, Koch has firmly rejected any increase in the tax rate this year.

"I have no intention of going up in taxes," Koch said at the May 12 meeting.

Koch, chairman of the School Committee, also warned against new school projects, stating we have to be "very careful about entertaining new programs. The city just can't pick up $8 or $9 million a year."

Students, Parents Speak Out At School Budget Meeting

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Hundreds packed City Council chambers and there was standing room only May 12 as the School Committee opened their meeting and hearings on the 2011 school budget.

The overflow audience then applauded as citizen speakers, 61 in all, offered opinions on everything from graduation ceremonies to potential budget cuts of favored programs, athletics, and school personnel.

Emily Hajjar, president of the Quincy High School Senior Class, said she spoke for hundreds of this year's graduating class who want graduation ceremonies at Adams Field, rather than the traditional Veterans' Stadium.

"Quincy High School has been under construction for the past three years," Hajjar said, adding her class endured loss of power, gas leaks, no gym, a three-building campus, disruptive learning environments and a "Thanksgiving Day rally unworthy of Quincy High School standards."

"Even though we have suffered the most of any class, we will not see the full school completed..." said Hajjar, later stating, "The majority of seniors at Quincy High School, as well as North Quincy High School, want graduation to be held at Adams Field."

Hajjar won loud applause from the hundreds at City Hall, but failed to budge the administration which has scheduled the graduations at the traditional location, Veterans' Stadium.

"It takes about two to three times the manpower and hours to set up Adams Field for graduation and the City can not afford to lose that kind of time and money considering the budget climate and all of the other Park Department responsibilities," Mayor Thomas Koch said in response to Hajjar's request.

No one provided an estimates of the added cost, but Koch, also, said that the graduation set-up could damage Adams Field, especially in wet weather.

Nearly all of the remaining speakers addressed budget issues and described the value of full day kindergarten, and such classes as carpentry, and the Renaissance program.

Tim Marks spoke of learning OSHA rules and how to use tools, a jackhammer, glasscutter, steamroller and the Jaws of Life and developing the skills to be "an overall handyman around the house."

Marks was one of many who praised Carpentry teacher John Burke, not only for the skills learned by life lessons.

"Take note of the number of students behind me who support the arts," said Robert Hudson. "I ask you to keep this in mind when you're moving money around."

"John Adams had a dream that the children of this city would study the arts," noted Hudson.

Students also spoke for cheerleading and the value of the system's eight deans.

The $692,000 budget for the eight deans would be cut and four assistant principals hired at $38,000 under the recommendations.

"Keep the deans," said senior Kyle Waldron. "I wasn't a great kid but my dean kept me in school."

"Why has the city not made an effort to charge a fee?" asked Laurel Blanchard while others like Sue Hersey, former Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien and Paul Phillips, President of the Quincy Educators Association, said they would support a real estate tax increase.

"I would be very willing to up my taxes," said Hersey.

For School Committee members and the School Superintendent, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, the young speakers addressing the committee two hour Citizen Speak session reflected on the high quality of the Quincy schools during a session that was covered by television stations, Channel 5, Channel 6, The Boston Globe and others news outlets.

"They were phenomenal, better than a lot of adults. I was very very proud," said School Committee member Emily Lebo who added that she did not necessarily agree with all the statements.

"I was absolutely inspired by them," said Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney, adding that she knew one of the students who was normally very shy. They youngster still spoke beautifully at the committee meeting.

The following are the names of some of the 61 citizens who addressed the School Committee May 12. Several names were illegible on the Sign-In sheet and are not included.

Teach Life Lesson To North Quincy High School Seniors

Speakers Underscore Dangers Of Drinking And Driving

By JOE REARDON

P.J. Steverman made a seemingly harmless choice nearly 15 years ago and it has haunted his family ever since.

An 18-year-old freshman hockey player at New England College in Henniker, NH, Steverman was celebrating the team's first victory at a keg party at an off-campus house known as "The Outback."

After a couple of hours, Steverman decided to walk the two miles back to the college campus. Steverman set off on that snowy night and it was the last time anyone saw him alive. He was found the following April in woods just 400 yards from the house.

Lynda Steverman, P.J.'s mother, doesn't want to see any family go through the pain her family went through when P.J. died.

She told her story to the hushed senior class in the North Quincy High auditorium last Thursday as part of the school's program on alcohol awareness. The prom was held Friday evening at the Boston Marriott Long Wharf.

"At some point in the night he decided he was going to go home," said Lynda. "He made a choice. It was something that was completely avoidable."

And now that prom season is in full fling, Lynda was out spreading her message so they can avoid the tragedy of losing P.J. She told the students the importance of making good choices in life because they often time affect many people. With the real freedom that goes with being away at college, she said, comes responsibility. "College isn't a babysitting service," said Lynda. "P.J. can't make any more choices but you can."

She passed out a "P.J.'s Wish" card to everyone in the auditorium and urged them to use it. The card has room for three contact names in case of an accident, illness or if the person should go missing.

"Have a great prom, a great graduation and a great summer," Lynda said. "I hope you're all back here for your class reunion. That's my wish for you."

Quincy Police Lt. Dan Minton and Detective Bill Ward addressed the students after Lynda. Minton said drunken driving deaths are common everywhere and the fallout are devastating.

"That's a horrible thing," said Minton. "And it does happen. It happens every single night. You don't know what your parents are going to feel like when they have to bury you."

Ward's demonstration, using goggles that simulated the feeling of being intoxicated, drew laughs from the crowd, but was successful in getting the point across. His talk grew somber when he spoke of his former partner and best friend, Jamie Corcoran. Corcoran, also a member of the Quincy Police force, died from injuries he sustained when he was knocked off his motorcycle after being hit by a car in 2006. Corcoran and Ward were going to Baltimore the next day to watch the Orioles play the Red Sox.

"That guy who hit my partner, I've talked with him," said Ward. "He's never been the same since."

"Just don't make bad decisions. This should be the best summer of your life."

The assembly moved outside where State Police Officer Larry Kiely showed what actually happens to people in cars during a roll-over accident when they're wearing and not wearing seatbelts.

Seat belt fastened crash test dummies, the size of adults and infants, remained secure during the simulated car rollover. The students gasped when the infant-sized dummy was ejected out the window when the simulation was done without the use of safety belts.

"Nobody's as strong as the forces in a crash," Kiely said. "I think they (kids) are able to realize it's a simulation. They know it's not an amusement ride. Prior to ejection they get to see the baby being thrown around."

"It's all about education and enforcement. Today is their warning to do the right thing."

And while the airbag does soften the blow of a car accident, Kiely said it's not a cure-all pillow. "The airbag is going to assist you," he said. "When it's used when wearing a seat belt. They work hand in hand."

Quincy North senior Ed-die Oldham said the morning program would make him take a harder look at the devastation of drinking and driving. Oldham believes the messages of the morning would sink in with his fellow classmates.

"It makes me realize the consequences of drinking and driving," Oldham said. "I think everyone gets a good idea of what could happen."

Third Cat Reported Safe; No Leads in Abuse Case

Investigators are still seeking any information that may help solve the case of two North Quincy cats doused in gasoline.

For one cat Gemini, the incident was fatal.

At the same time, there has been some good news, according to one resident whose black cat was missing from several days.

The cat's owners asked not to be identified in order to protect their cat that meandered home last week after wandering for four to five days.

The feline gypsy was unharmed and likely unaware of the dangers on the street, according to its owners.

As for the cats who were not so lucky, officers from the MSPCA (Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) are still asking for help from the public.

The MSPCA has offered a $1,000 reward to the individual who helps solve the case. The reward will be paid after the conviction of the offender.

Brian Adams, spokesman for the MSPCA, said anyone with information should contact the Law Enforcement Department at 617-522-6008 or 1-800-628-5808. All calls are confidential.

Houghs Neck To Host Drug Abuse Awareness Night

The Houghs Neck Community Council will host a Drug and Alcohol Abuse Awareness Night Sunday, May 23 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

The evening will be co-sponsored by Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, and End Drug Abuse Now (EDAN).

The event is part of the Council's grass-roots program of awareness. Similar programs were attended by nearly 400 people, including teens and parents.

The May 23 program will feature testimonials from those who are the most deeply affected by this epidemic, said Houghs Neck Community Council President Brian Laroche.

"The stories of the downfall, the darkness of addiction and the success stories of triumph over the disease will be shared first-hand by those who are battling addiction," Laroche said.

The event is open to everyone in Quincy.

"This is a family friendly event for all ages - including toddlers who will be provided with a supervised play space and young adolescents with a supervised movie room. Mothers, fathers and caregivers are all encouraged to attend this free program," Laroche said. "We encourage fifth graders and above to listen to this two-hour program."

Laroche said it is important for the community to realize that "drug and alcohol addiction does not prejudice."

"Kids and adults who come from good families are falling prey to drug and alcohol addiction much more than you realize. We're in the midst of an 'epidemic,' there is no escaping this problem - it's everywhere."

"If you don't see it," Laroche pointed out, "you may not know what to look for. Join us, help us increase the awareness. Prevention by awareness is the key to beating this epidemic."

The evening will feature free pizza and raffle prizes. For more information, call Laroche at 617-786-1637.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Carelessness And Consequences

The other day we were getting a rash of outside fires. I'm not talking about fires taking place within acres of trees, grass or brush; I'm referring to fires in smaller areas containing mulch and vegetation. Many of these areas lie along roadways, while more exist adjacent to structures, stores, homes, etc.

An extended rainless period adds to the potential hazard at these sites, while typically, carelessly disposed of matches and smoking materials are all that's required to ignite the vegetation during a dry spell.

That's what we had the other day when in one instance, a fire in mulch extended into shrubbery while the flames reached to the second floor of a high rise residential occupancy. Within that week, this same scenario occurred twice at different locations, while the frequency of calls for mulch fires along roadways increased substantially as well.

While dry weather will significantly increase the occurrence of these incidents, high winds exacerbate the hazard where added air fuels the flame with atmospheric oxygen. A brush fire can quickly take off and easily extend to a structure under those conditions.

Very frequently as well, smokers are not allowed to do so within their home or apartment. So often in these instances, individuals will leave the building and smoke adjacent to a house, or on a porch. Too frequently over the last 32 years, I have witnessed casually discarded cigarettes ignite vegetation adjacent to a home or the cigarette stub will find it's way against the building, often up against a wooden sill while a fire will extend into the building or along the combustible facade. This happens quite frequently.

The point of these comments being, "carelessly discarded" suggests little fore thought for the potential consequences when it comes to smoking material, while the resulting consequences can be severe. *In 2006 alone, there were 4,661 outside fires within the State of Massachusetts that caused one civilian death, six civilian injuries, 22 fire fighter injuries and a dollar loss estimated at $310,790.

Kindly consider the consequences of casually discarded cigarettes, and dispose of them with mindful consideration. Particularly if frequently smoking on a porch or adjacent to a home, consider disposing of cigarettes within a metal container used specifically for that purpose. Keep in mind, trash and discarded cigarettes to not match.

While driving, especially during hotter dry spells, think twice about throwing a lit cigarette out of a vehicle. During those conditions especially, mulch, and vegetation are too easily ignited. Meanwhile there's no telling what ill effect can come from the practice. Thank you.

Volunteers Recognized For Renovation Project

Houghs Neck Congregational Church Dedicates New Sunday School Room

Houghs Neck Congregational Church recently celebrated the opening of its new Sunday School room with a special dedication ceremony.

Held Easter Sunday, the ceremony followed the church's annual Easter morning breakfast.

"It's wonderful that on Easter morning, we can celebrate another resurrection — the transformation of this room into a bright and cheerful space for our Sunday School students," Pastor John Castrium told attendees before offering a prayer of dedication for the new room.

Sunday School Superintendent Jennifer Logue said that while the room has served as the church's Sunday School space for more than half a century, damage sustained from flooding had required Sunday School classes to meet in other locations in the church for the past several years. After a major engineering project addressed the overall flooding and drainage issues, volunteers from the church's congregation turned their attention to renovating the Sunday School room.

"Our congregation is blessed to have a number of construction and engineering professionals, who volunteered their services on nights and weekends for many months to create this beautiful space for the Sunday School," said Logue. "Their hard work will benefit not only our current Sunday School students, but the children of our community for generations to come."

At the dedication ceremony, Logue presented a plaque to Ralph Jacobs and Martin Gordon recognizing their efforts and the contributions of more than a dozen other volunteers who worked on the renovation project. Pastor Castrium then cut the ribbon and invited the church's Sunday School students to be the first to enter their new classroom.

Located at 310 Manet Ave., Houghs Neck Congregational Church offers Sunday School classes for students in preschool through Grade 8 at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday from September to June.

Richard Kurtzman, Rahmy Eltoury Awarded Eagle Scout

By JOE REARDON

The road to earning their Eagle Scout medals was far from all fun and games for Richard Kurtzman and Rahmy Eltoury, but neither one of the Quincy residents would trade their tribulations and frustrations for anything. In the end, it made earning the highest honor in scouting all the sweeter.

The 19-year-old Kurtzman, a sophomore at Salem State, found over the years that scouting was foreign to many people his own age. As a result, he was often-times mocked when he wore his scouting shirt, adorned with patches and medals.

"You have to fight for it," said Kurtzman. "Slowly, as you get older, you do get teased. A lot of people can't handle it. It sucks, really. But you just laugh to yourself. They don't know what I do and they don't know what I can do. You just have to smile and keep trucking."

"A lot of my friends, growing up, started to go their own ways. They didn't always make the best decisions. Some went the way of alcohol and drugs. It's sad really."

Kurtzman's journey towards the Eagle Scout medal wasn't without its speed bumps along the way. He took a year and a half hiatus to concentrate on his grades and he simply didn't have the time to dedicate to scouting.

Kurtzman, who joined the Cub Scouts as a kindergarten when he was 5 years old, transferred from BC High to North Quincy High and dove back into scouting. He steadily began to earn patches and medals, but, ironically, the status of Eagle Scout wasn't really on his radar at the start. And even as the medal became closer on the horizon, Kurtzman was more focused on the work and its own rewards.

"It feels like something that just happened," Kurtzman said. "The entire time you're not thinking about yourself. You think about other people."

Kurtzman believes what the award stands for and the people he interacted with along the way was the most rewarding aspect of achieving Eagle status.

"The most fulfilling thing is all the people I helped," he said. "It's kind of like being the Batman of the community. You do it without expecting a reward. You learn that from the leaders."

"There's a lot of opportunity to do things in scouting you would never have the chance to do otherwise. Everyone can find something they like. It's fun. It's worth your time."

Kurtzman's final project proved to be a massive undertaking. Still, earning his lifesaving badge was more difficult. As a 14-year-old scout, Kurtzman had to tow a large man from the middle of a lake 100 yards to a dock. "Lifesaving was very taxing on the body," he said. "You have to be in shape to do it."

Kurtzman concluded that the smoothest route to beautifying the Houghs Neck Community Center would be detailed planning from the start. He researched the costs of the materials, looking for the best products for a reasonable price. Kurtzman asked for donations to help defer the cost of the materials, rounded up a group of younger scouts to help with the labor.

Kurtzman's plan was to reseed the lawn, rebuild a picnic table, build a wooden guardrail around the yard and discard the frayed rope and reinforce the flagpole with a stainless steel cable.

The biggest roadblock Kurtzman came across was that there was no hose hookup outside to water the grass seed he had put down. Kurtzman rolled up his sleeves and improvised.

"There was a lot of work needed to be done and I wanted to take some of it off their hands," he said. "Because there was no running water I used buckets of water from inside for a few days. I eventually asked the neighbors from across the street. It was fine. The grass grew fine."

When all was said and done, Kurtzman had logged 500 hours into breathing life back into the backyard of the community center.

Kurtzman is still very much a part of scouting, working with the younger kids as an adult leader. On Monday nights, he's busy at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church working with the younger scouts, many of which someday want to attain the Eagle status Kurtzman did.

Kurtzman finds it easy to relate to the younger kids. It wasn't so long ago that he was a young scout trying to find his way.

"I've grown up and the scouts helped me," Kurtzman said. "I see the kids now and I was the exact same way. I try to help them."

Moving forward, Kurtzman wants to work in a hospital in the medical biology field. Helping people is his first priority.

"I want to go further," he said. "I want to help people - to save people. That kind of environment (hospital) feels right for me. I can't sit down. It's not what I do. It's also a challenge."

Eltoury also had an ambitious project planned out to earn his Eagle medal. The 17-year-old junior at North Quincy High worked on clearing a marshy area in the wetlands of Houghs Neck off Parkhurst Street.

Along with constructing a sign with the history of that particular marsh and the different types of wildlife that inhabit it, the articulate Eltoury explained that a perennial reed known as Phragmites ("Elephant Grass") grew in the area and the lack of flowing salt water in the area because of a broken tide gate made it possible for the reed to suffocate the natural vegetation in the marsh.

"It's not native here and it weeds out the other plants because the roots are so strong," Eltoury said. "The extremes will kill it. They're a fresh water reed but they adapt to the salt water."

The nature of Eltoury's project was such that it wasn't going to be completed in a day, far from it. Eltoury began work at the marsh nearly two years ago in June of 2008.

The backbreaking work in pulling out the Phragmites and adding plants was time consuming. In one workday, Eltoury and his helpers would fill at least 15-20 giant trash bags with reeds, an estimated 200 pounds.

"This was a long term maintenance plan," Eltoury said. "What I'm doing is scratching the surface."

He dedicated the informational sign at the site to the late Norval Wellriver, one of the neighbors in the area who was passionate about the marsh and green space in the city.

Eltoury found dedicating his work to Wellriver more than well deserved. "I personally didn't know him but the neighbors said he was a great guy who loved nature," he said.

Eltoury has been a scout since Kindergarten, but it wasn't until just a few years ago that he even thought about earning his Eagle Scout medal. He has a year of scouting left, and even though Eltoury has achieved the highest honor of Eagle Scout, he plans to continue to earn merit badges.

"I'll stay involved," he said. "It's such a great program. You want to stay on and share your experiences."

While many of the tasks to earn merit badges were fun and interesting, Eltoury, runs cross country and plays rugby at North Quincy, said there were others that failed to reel him in. He had to have an awkward, sit-down conversation with his parents pertaining to drugs and sex, as well as doing personal inventory of his fitness every day for three months and log it in a journal.

"You really don't mind doing it but it's a lot of writing," Eltoury said.

He went before the Scout board, which includes the chairman of the troop and chairman of the council, on Feb. 18 for his final interview before being promoted to Eagle Scout. "They asked what's your favorite experience of scouting and how would I go about recruiting new kids," Eltoury said.

Eltoury's hard work in school is paying off as well. A perennial honor roll student, he is being inducted into the National Honor Society on Thursday.

Another honor that didn't come easy, Eltoury had to perform 30 hours of community service as one of the requirements for induction. He worked 50 hours in the kitchen during the Greek Festival at Saint Catherine's in Braintree.

Increase Home Values With Flowering Shrubs

(NAPSA)—There's good news for homeowners whose thumb is only a little green: It may be easier and less expensive than you think to add value to your home.

The secret? Plant more shrubs and bushes in your landscaping.

A recent study by Michigan State University found that high-quality landscaping often increases a home's value by 5 to 11 percent. A separate study by Clemson University estimated this increase to be 6 to 7 percent.

According to research by the American Society of Landscape Architects, when selling your home, you can recover from 100 to 200 percent of every dollar you invest in your landscaping.

Improving your landscaping with shrubs can save you money as well. Replacing part of your lawn with a mass planting of shrubs can reduce costs for lawn mowing and lawn care, such as the cost of fertilizer and gas. Plus, landscaping can reduce your air-conditioning costs by as much as 50 percent, according to the American Public Power Association.

Landscaping is also one home improvement that may actually appreciate over time. As the plants grow larger, they should improve their looks, which can then improve the curb appeal of your home.

Shrubs often provide colorful flowers for years, rather than just one season, making them sound long-term investments for your landscape. Many of the newest flowering shrubs available today are hardy, bloom each year without special care or pampering, and sport interesting colors such as pink or purple, which can add even more value to your landscaping.

LANDSCAPING IS one home improvement that may actually appreciate over time. As the plants grow larger, they should improve their looks, which can then improve the curb appeal of your home.

Consider the new Lo & Behold "Blue Chip" buddleia, a miniature butterfly bush with loads of bright blue flowers. Lo & Behold "Blue Chip" bloom continuously, so you won't need to prune this plant as you do older varieties of buddleia. Like all butterfly bushes, it also attracts butterflies and hummingbirds.

Another new shrub, the Invincibelle Spirit Hydrangea, is the very first pink-flowered form of the 'Annabelle' hydrangea. Like all 'Annabelle' hydrangeas, it's superhardy, adaptable and easy to grow. It also blooms on new wood, so it will flower even after an early spring pruning, giving you pink color all season.

A close cousin to the Invincibelle Spirit is the new Incredible Hydrangea. Some have described this hydrangea as an "Annabelle' on steroids." Its huge, basketball-sized flowers are the biggest ever seen on a hydrangea, creating a burst of white in your landscape or garden.

For repeat color and a wonderful scent, there is the new Bloomerang Purple, a reblooming lilac. Bloomerang is the most compact, heaviest-blooming dwarf lilac ever grown. It produces a bumper crop of fragrant lavender flowers in spring and then continues to bloom again from mid-summer until frost.

Common sense says that the brighter and bigger the color of your shrubs and other ornamental woody plants, the better the chance of catching a potential homebuyer's attention. And in a difficult housing market, increased curb appeal might be the edge you need to sell your home.

All these shrubs are available at better garden centers. To find one, visit www.provenwinners.com/findaretailer.

Hardwood Floors See the Light

Q: Our kitchen has tile floors that are OK, but I don't like the design at all. Then last week, my husband cracked one of the tiles, pulled it up, and underneath was what looks like hardwood flooring. Can this flooring be exposed without too much trouble? Can it be used in the kitchen or should we cover it again? — Taylor H., Madison, Wis.

A: You should be able to remove the ceramic tiles without doing too much damage to the hardwood, but you'll need to use the right tools for the job -- or, if you don't have the time or energy to pull up tiles, hire a licensed contractor for the work.

If the tiles were laid directly atop the wood floor, it's a good idea to loosen the adhesive (mastic) between them and the wood. Home-improvement stores sell products specifically for this task -- make sure they are safe for use on wood. Scrape up and pull up the tiles. Many or most will break during the process.

No matter how carefully you pull up the tiles and remove the adhesive, the flooring will need to be sanded and refinished. Again, there's a fair bit of elbow grease involved with this process, and if you do it yourself, rent a floor sander from the home-improvement store and use according to the instructions. You want to sand away any remaining adhesive and old finish, and smooth out the wood. Sweep away debris and damp-mop, let dry, and then apply new finish.

Hardwood floors in the kitchen are quite attractive and can be kept up as long as you are diligent about maintenance. Puddles of water shouldn't be left standing; clean them up as soon as you notice them. Wipe or sweep the floor daily. Don't use harsh cleaning chemicals on the floor; use plain water and damp mop, and occasionally wash using soap specifically for wood floors.

HOME TIP: Squeaky floorboard? Try pouring a little talcum powder into the cracks between the boards to ease friction.

Staging Your House For A Quick Sale

(NAPSA)-"Home staging" is increasingly popular among homeowners seeking to sell their house. Curb appeal, clutter removal and a thorough cleaning are important, but a few extra steps can dramatically improve the appeal of your home to a buyer.

Design and model home expert Janice Jones, who oversees model home design and decorating for Pulte Homes, offers a few tips to help you create an up-to-date new and fresh look that can set your home apart from the competition:

1. Use Color: Adding the right punch of color to accent walls or trim can create depth, enhance kitchen cabinets or bring a boring bathroom to life.

Jones encourages homeowners to find pops of color in accessories, such as throw pillows, coffee-table books and decorative canisters. The key is to experiment and not be afraid to add extras such as exciting wall art or a playful chair or an area rug. Different colors have different effects, Jones says:

- Red is stimulating and encourages self-confidence.
- Orange promotes happiness and celebration.
- Yellow is uplifting and light-hearted.
- Blue is calming in softer tones, promotes clarity in deeper ones.

WHEN STAGING a home for sale, use neutral colors in flooring, upholstery and window dressing to enhance brighter accents.

• Green is the color of nature; it feels fresh and rejuvenating.

• Aqua is restful while pink is gentle and sweet-making a great pair.

• Purple tones bring out a sense of compassion.

2. Less Can Be More: When Jones decorates model homes, she takes care not to clutter spaces and aims to keep rooms inviting, comfortable and memorable. This requires appropriately-sized furnishings that allow for maximum seating without crowding.

"Use fewer accessories and try not to overstimulate," she advised. "This makes living spaces appear much larger."

3. Focus on the Home: Homeowners achieve better results by displaying only their most important collectible treasures in a bookcase, a see-through furniture cabinet or open shelving. The focus should be on the house, not the current homeowner's knickknacks.

4. Know the Latest Trends: Design trends have been moving toward simple clean lines, an organic approach and a more relaxed look overall. Flat-screen TVs, laptop computers and other technology have changed the need for heavy, deep pieces.

5. Even Small Changes Reap Rewards: Jones stresses that even a small decorating project can make a significant difference.

"Interior design gives home sellers a great opportunity to make a good first impression," she said. "Simple staging can be livable as well as sellable."

Show, Auction Raise $9,000 For Habitat For Humanity Conway Birdhouses A Sign Of Spring

Birdhouses adorned with buttons, ribbons, sparkle paint and fishing nets recently lined the tables at Jack Conway, Realtor's Hanover office for the Annual Conway Country Birdhouse Contest to benefit the South Shore Habitat for Humanity.

The 55 entries were judged internally and then donated to the Habitat's 2010 Birdhouse Show and Auction, held at the Braintree Plaza. The event, which included nearly 400 decorated and themed birdhouses, raised almost $9,000 for the non-profit group's efforts to "build homes in partnership with families in need."

Carol Cahill, coordinator of the Conway Country contest, says her company has taken part in the birdhouse fundraiser for the last 17 years. "We love being involved with such a wonderful organization," said Cahill. "And we know that every dollar earned goes directly toward building a home for someone who truly needs one."

Judging the Conway Country entries in Hanover were Conway CEO Carol Bulman, Conway Relocation Manager Dawn Stevens, and South Shore Habitat for Humanity Executive Director Jerry McDermott. "Jack Conway Co. has been helping us with our cause for as long as I can remember," said McDermott. "Conway sales agents and managers volunteer on our home building projects, and the company invites us to its convention every year to give out our birdhouses. We are very grateful for this support."

Ribbons and prizes were awarded to winners in age-specific categories. Taking top honors for the adults were: "Robinson Caruso Tree House" by Carmen Randolph (Conway-Canton), "Fairie Birdhouse;" by Cyndi Teixeira (Conway-Hyannis), and "Crayons and Watercolors" by Kristen Morse (Conway-Norwell).

In the children's category, the winners were: Caitlin, Liam and Caroline Canavan; Cecilia and Ellie Lindo; Robert Clauss; Ann Marie Baker; Jack and Haley Dupre; Nicole and Christopher McGovern; Mackenzie Manning; Jack Prefontaine, and Allison, Chris and Julianne Rando.

"The kids get so excited to decorate the birdhouses," said Cahill. "My own grandchildren participate every year, and now many other entries come in from children of Conway agents throughout our company. It's a great family event for a worthy cause."

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, May 11, at approximately 7:30 p.m., Officer Matt Tobin was dispatched to the Police Lobby for a past family trouble that occurred on East Squantum Street.

The officer met with the victim, a 28-year-old male, who said that he came home on this date and found his girlfriend's name carved into his headboard and the television remote crushed. The victim added that he had been dating this girlfriend, a female co-worker for the past five months. He said that she was in his home on May 9th when he returned from work around 11:30 p.m. He said that his girlfriend had permission to be there and has keys to his apartment. He went on to say that his girlfriend discovered that he is actually married, telling the officer that he hasn't been with his wife for some time.

LT. DAN MINTON

The victim said that they argued initially on May 9th but his girlfriend escalated the situation by physically assaulting him, scratching his face and neck, followed up by a bite to his forearm. The victim said that he was able to pin her down and hold her until she calmed down. The victim told her that she would have to leave, but she refused. A truce was established and she was allowed to stay as long as she remained calm.

The victim stated that the two argued off and on throughout Monday and that at some point around 7 p.m., his girlfriend retrieved three steak knives from the kitchen and threatened to kill him. He said that she came after him on two occasions, cutting his hands as he tried to defend himself. Officer Tobin observed several incised wounds to the victim's hands that were consistent with defensive wounds as well as scratches to his neck, face, and a laceration wound to his forearm. He stated that he again was able to pin her down and disarm her.

At this point, the victim left the apartment. The victim then realized that his car keys and cell phone were gone. He stated that he initially didn't report this to the Police because she threatened to "kill him" and to "@$% me up anyway she can." He also stated that she threatened to return to his apartment while he was at work and destroy his property and vehicle. The victim said he was afraid to go to work on both Monday and Tuesday and had to call in sick.

A friend convinced him to report the incidents to the Police. He said that when they left his apartment he observed his 2009 Mercedes Benz S550 had been keyed around the entire car and that the leather seats had been slashed. Officer Tobin went to the apartment and took photographs of "KEL" carved in to the headboard, the smashed remote control as well as the damage to the motor vehicle.

The victim told the officer where the suspect/girlfriend lived in Boston, so along with the Boston Police Officers, the suspect was placed under arrest and given her Miranda Rights. The suspect offered to give her side of the story: she said that she learned that her boyfriend/victim was married, which led to an argument, followed by her boyfriend grabbing her by the throat and forcing her up against a wall. She said he threw her to the ground and held her down. She went on to say that "he got cut when he grabbed the knife" and then quickly moved away from that portion of the story, stating simply that she got beat up.

Officer Tobin directed her back to the part about the knife and she now admitted that she had the knife but it was for self defense. She stated that he reached out and grabbed the bladed portion of the knife and somehow took it from her. Throughout her story she pointed to her neck, arms, and legs claiming that there were visible injuries. The officer pointed out that he could not see even the slightest blemish in the areas to which he was directed to. Officer Tobin reasoned that the victim was significantly larger in size to the suspect, finding it implausible that she would be without visible injury if she was attacked in the manner she claimed.

When asked why she only mentioned holding the knife after the Officer directed her back to that part of the story, the suspect did not respond. When asked if she called the Police to report being beat up, the suspect said she did not and provided no reason. Throughout the suspect's story, the Officer noted that she would hesitate and jump from point to point without fully explaining certain points she brought up, such as the knife. She would look away from the Officer when he questioned the validity of her story. Through the Officer's training and experience, he believed that this behavior was consistent with someone trying to deceive him.

The suspect, a 26 year old Dorchester resident, was placed under arrest and charged with "Assault and Battery, two counts, (scratching and biting) Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon, to wit a kitchen knife, Malicious Destruction to a Motor Vehicle, Vandalizing Personal Property, (remote control and headboard) Intimidation of a Witness, (by putting him in fear of going to work or leaving his residence) Larceny of Personal Property (phone and keys) and Threatening to Commit a Crime, (to Kill)." Bail was set at $25,000. The victim was advised to change locks to his car and his home. Nice Work!

THE LATEST SCAM: I received a phone call from Kathleen Cryan, Quincy resident and Teacher at the Quincy Teen Mother's program. She said that she received a call at home from a woman who sounded very professional, stating that she won a sizeable check worth over $30,000, which would be delivered to her by UPS. The caller said that she was associated with Publisher's Clearinghouse. In order to send the check however, the caller said that Kathleen would have to pay taxes first. Kathleen said that she recognized this as a scam because the caller never called her by name, never heard of a group "associated" with Publisher's Clearinghouse, and most importantly, knew that taxes are not paid prior to getting your award. She hung up and notified me to prevent others from being victimized. Nice Work Kathleen!

QHS Softball In Tournament, NQ Baseball Is Out

Crunch Time Is Now For QHS Baseball, NQHS Softball

By SEAN BRENNAN

The playoff clock is ticking down to zero for Quincy baseball and North Quincy softball. These two teams, as of May 18, had a legitimate shot of advancing into postseason play, but the road to the tournament is still racked with detours.

North Quincy helped its postseason push with a huge 3-1 victory over Duxbury High School on Monday. The victory over the Dragons placed the Red Raiders' record at 7-8 overall. North Quincy needs to finish the season with at least a .500 record to qualify (that means winning two-out-of-three remaining games). The program still has games remaining against Whitman-Hanson, Scituate, and Quincy.

The Raiders have already defeated W-H earlier this year and Scituate is a beatable team. The real test is going to come against Quincy. Quincy (along with Keenan Division champion Silver Lake HS and undefeated Middleboro HS) is among the top-3 programs in the entire Patriot League. The Presidents (14-2 overall) and Middleboro (15-0) are still in contention for the Fisher Division crown.

North Quincy, which dropped a divisional game to Silver Lake, 4-0, last week, defeated Duxbury behind four solid innings from sophomore pitcher Jackie Hughes (four strikeouts) and an RBI double from fellow sophomore Emma Ainsley.

"We have really started to turn it on the last two weeks," said NQHS head coach Kerry Ginty on Tuesday. "The team has started to gain some confidence and we have come out and won four-out-of-the-last five games we have played including two huge wins over Whitman-Hanson and Duxbury.

"The girls are just putting it all together. We are playing solid defense and we are getting timely hits. But it has been the defense and the error-free ball that we have been playing that has really gotten us some wins. We are not satisfied yet. We still need to win at least two of the last three games and that starts with the game against Scituate on Wednesday.

"That team (Scituate) always seems to give us trouble. They play us competitively all the time so that win over Duxbury was huge. It is now one game at a time."

For North Quincy, it is a complete team effort that has given them, at least, a shot at advancing to the postseason.

Seniors Jess Ainsley, Katie Sheridan and Sammi Bonanni have been solid all season for North Quincy and their leadership has been evident during this late-season surge.

"(They) know what to do and they know what it takes to win games," said Ginty. "Jess is hitting the ball so well right now and Katie is hitting over .320. Sammi is also hitting over .300 and just gets the job done."

Underclassmen Emma Ainsley and Jackie Hughes have also provided an additional spark for the Red Raiders.

"Emma is hitting .414 and has a RBI in everyone of our recent wins," said Ginty. "Jackie has been great for us on the mound. She has learned to control her pitches and even though she doesn't get many strikeouts, she keeps the ball in the infield and with out defense playing so well that combination is really working."

North Quincy may be close to qualifying... but they are not guaranteed anything unless they keep winning. This is something that Ginty is reminding her team of everyday.

"We are happy that we have won games after starting the season slowly, but, we will not be satisfied until we make the tournament," she said. "The playoffs were a goal of ours at the beginning of the year and that is what we are playing for right now. It is going to be a challenge. We need to focus on one game at a time and hopefully at the season's end we will be getting ready to play a tournament game.

"I am excited about how this team is coming together. These last three games are must wins. We had a tough season last year. The goal is to try and turn some heads and establish the program as a team that is tough to play against moving forward."

Down Hancock Street at Quincy High School, the Presidents baseball team is facing a similar battle with regards to qualifying for the postseason. Following a 13-10 win over Rockland HS on Monday at Adams Field, Quincy's record is now 8-9 overall.

Quincy was set to play at Middleboro HS yesterday (May 19) and have games remaining versus Brighton HS (non-league) and Silver Lake HS (May 26). The Presidents will need to be close to perfect the rest of the way to punch that ticket to the South Sectionals.

Against Rockland, senior hurler Kevin Keith improved to 6-1 on the year. Keith received plenty of offensive help from Chris Connolly (three hits) and Leroy Wallace (three hits).

"We need to win two-out-of-three games to make the tournament," said QHS head coach Tim Daley on Tuesday. "We are starting to feel good about ourselves and right now we are playing good baseball. We are getting timely hits, playing solid defense and that is because these kids have been getting more practice and are more comfortable in what they need to do to be successful.

"Even in some of the losses we had earlier this year we were competitive with some of the top teams in the Patriot League. We now know that we can play with any team, but we are going to have to take it one game at a time. You need to get that first win before worrying about the second."

Leading the postseason charge for Quincy has been senior pitcher Kevin Keith. Keith has six of Quincy's eight wins and his leadership and composure on the mound has proven vital to the Presidents late-season success.

"No matter what happens on the mound Kevin doesn't get bothered," said Daley. "He leads by example and if something bad happens behind him in the field he just forgets about it and moves on to the next batter. He has been great for us."

Colin McCarthy highlights the offense. McCarthy is batting .460 on the spring and along with junior Bobby Kozlowski and senior Leroy Wallace the Presidents suddenly have serious offensive depth.

"The way that Colin has been hitting and with Bob and Leroy hitting above .300 we have depth that we didn't have before," said Daley. "It is making a difference."

Already In

The Quincy Presidents softball team is in the playoffs - and ready to make a serious run at a sectional championship. With an impressive 14-2 mark (12-2 in Patriot League), the Presidents have a shot at capturing the Patriot League's Fisher Division title, but that will require the team to knock off Middleboro HS (undefeated in league play) twice over the next week and a half.

Regardless of how the final few games go, Quincy looks like one of a handful of local teams that should be in contention for a long tournament run. Behind the pitching of junior Kori Sorensen and the clutch hitting of seniors Olivia Berry and Julia Yee, Quincy should be a top-5 seed when the South Sectionals tournament pairing are announced at the end of May.

On Monday, Quincy knocked around Rockland, 9-1. Sophomore Nicole Parry and Sorensen combined for a four-hitter while Kyle Kozlowski (two RBI) and Erin Curran (two hits, run) provided the offense.

Quincy was set to play Middleboro yesterday (May 19). A non-league game against Stoughton HS will be played on Friday and the team will close out the spring with games against North Quincy (May 25) and Middleboro (May 26).

Season Over

When the season started North Quincy was pegged to be a team to beat in the Patriot League, and rightfully so.

The team was coming off a Patriot League Fisher Division title in 2009 and finished with a 16-7 regular season record earning the program's first tournament appearance since 2002. Add in the return of the starting middle infield (John Ainsley and Colin Ryan), starting third baseman (Ryan Louis), and an entire returning varsity outfield, and the Red Raiders seemed prime to get back to the postseason.

But, as is the case sometimes, expectations fell short. North Quincy, following a 6-1 loss to Duxbury HS on Monday was officially shut-out of the tournament.

At 7-12 overall, North Quincy will look to end the spring on a high note. The team played Scituate HS yesterday and will close out the 2010 campaign with a non-league contest against Catholic Memorial on May 25.

SUN SPORTS

THE QUINCY PRESIDENTS still have a shot at sliding into the MIAA South Sectional baseball tournament. The team earned a huge 13-10 victory over Rockland High School on Monday. A Patriot League game against Middleboro HS (yesterday) will go a long way in deciding if Quincy will have a shot at making some noise in the playoffs in early June.

ACE PITCHER Kori Sorensen and the Quincy Presidents are steaming into the Division I South Sectionals. At 14-2 overall, Quincy should be considered a serious player for a sectional crown. Two games remaining against Middleboro HS will determine if the 2010 Presidents will enter the playoffs as the Patriot League's Fisher Division champion.

"These girls are all part of a big freshmen nucleus for us at Q/NQ," said Q/NQ head coach Geoff Hennessy. "They keep getting better because the come to practice every day and work hard and they are multiple sport athletes. Bennett is a varsity volleyball player, the Mullaney's play soccer and Sam is a soccer goalie and basketball player."

On May 4, rain and bad weather interrupted a varsity meet at Pembroke High School. Junior Erica Brady continued her dominance winning the mile but the reigning Division IV champs (Pembroke) took the measure of Q/NQ, 79-49. Freshman Rose Bennett won the high jump for Q/NQ, Si Han Huang and Emily Nguyen went 1-2 in the discuss event, and Sam McNally and Danielle Denien went 1-2 in the javelin.

"The weather conditions prevented any real improvements but the young squad was tough against a seasoned state championship team," said Hennessy.

Medicine Cabinet Makeover: Stocking Up On What You Need

(NAPSA)-This year, Americans will suffer from approximately 1 billion colds. In order to be prepared and avoid last-minute trips to the pharmacy, it is important to have a well-stocked medicine cabinet.

Every cabinet should have:

- Pain relievers
- Fever reducers
- Expectorants
- Decongestants
- Antihistamines
- Stomach remedies
- A thermometer.

According to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), families should clean out their cabinets once a year and replace medications before they expire. It is important to check labels regularly to avoid taking a medication that has expired.

Safe Storage

For your family's safety, leave medications in their original packaging, separate over-the-counter (OTC) products from prescriptions and store kids' medications away from adult products. Furthermore, all medications should be kept out of the reach of children and securely sealed. It is also important to keep medicines in a cool, dry place when stated on the label. Medicines should not be kept in places where heat and moisture can alter their effectiveness.

Family Records

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), every household should keep a list of all prescription and OTC medications including how much you take and when. Include vitamins and supplements and share this list with your doctors, as necessary.

CLEAN YOUR medicine cabinet once a year to help keep your family safe and healthy.

Cold Symptom Relief

With a well-stocked medicine cabinet, you can be prepared to provide symptom relief at home. For example, over-the-counter medications such as Mucinex(r) D (expectorant and nasal decongestant) may help provide temporary relief of chest/nasal congestion and sinus pressure. Mucinex(r) DM (expectorant and cough suppressant) may help control cough and provide temporary relief of chest congestion. Both last for 12 hours. Don't self-diagnose or take medications prescribed for someone else. Talk to your doctor or pharmacist about the best symptom relief options at the onset of your illness.

Follow Directions

When you do take medicine, be sure to follow the directions. Take your medicines exactly as prescribed or as stated on the label. Read the label every time to ensure proper dosing.

QMC NURSES celebrate the hospital's designation as a NICHE (Nurses Improving Care for Healthsystem Elders) site, offering evidence-based, interdisciplinary approaches to promote positive experiences and outcomes for older patients and their families. The NICHE program is a key element in Quincy Medical Center's Center for Healthy Aging.

Nurses Improving Care For Healthsystem Elders

Quincy Medical Center Receives NICHE Designation

Quincy Medical Center announces it has received designation as a NICHE site.

NICHE (Nurses Improving Care for Healthsystem Elders) is the only national geriatric initiative to improve the care of older hospitalized adults, and is a program of the Hartford Institute for Geriatric Nursing at New York University College of Nursing. Joining NICHE helps hospitals create an environment where older adult patients are cared for in ways that foster better outcomes while also meeting the patients' unique needs.

"The NICHE designation signals our resolve to provide patient-centered care for older adults," says Karen Conley, RN, MS, AOCN, NEA-BC, Senior Vice President for Patient Care Services and Chief Nursing Officer.

"Through our participation in the NICHE program - the largest geriatric nursing program available - we are able to offer evidence-based, interdisciplinary approaches that promote positive experiences for the older adults in our care. This leads to greater satisfaction rates for our patients and their families."

As part of the NICHE certification process, QMC's nursing clinical leadership completed a six-week intensive course in NICHE training and 12 registered nurses have become QMC's "NICHE Nursing Team," who, along with the Geriatric Clinical Nurse Specialist and interdisciplinary team members, are responsible for implementing best practice changes regarding the care of hospitalized older adults throughout the hospital. Additionally, 35 QMC nurses completed a two-day symposium on "Geriatric Syndrome: 14 Modules of the NICHE Curriculum," which is part of an ongoing training program at the hospital.

The NICHE program is a keystone to QMC's Center for Healthy Aging, which provides a continuum of programs and services geared specifically to best meet the specialized needs of patients over the age of 65.

Treatments Abound for Migraines

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please say something about migraine headaches. I think that's what I have. They come on fast, and the pain feels like something is pulsating in my head. I throw up with every headache. Bright lights make things worse. Does all this sound like a migraine to you? Someone told me there's always a warning before a migraine starts. I have no warning. I've used Tylenol, but it doesn't do much for me. What is the treatment? Can they be prevented? - L.G.

ANSWER: Your headaches have many of the characteristics of a migraine headache. The warning mentioned to you is an aura. The aura usually precedes a migraine. It can be flashing zigzag lines, peculiar sensations - often in the hands - trouble finding the right words to speak or weakness of a group of muscles. Only 20 percent of migraine patients have an aura, so it's not an indispensable migraine sign.

Nausea and vomiting are common migraine symptoms. Seventy percent of migraine patients have a one-sided headache that they describe as throbbing or a dull ache. It lasts from four hours to three days. People with migraines are very sensitive to light and sound, so they seek a dark, quiet room to lie down.

Stress, overexertion, sleep deprivation and hunger can provoke a migraine. Some foods and drinks can do the same. Alcohol (especially red wine); caffeine; pickles; bananas; yogurt; avocados; aged cheeses; pickled or marinated chicken, beef or fish; salami; pastrami; bacon; pepperoni; hot dogs; and the taste enhancer monosodium glutamate are on the list of possible migraine inducers.

Medicines for treating a migraine abound. Tylenol, aspirin and drugs like ibuprofen take care of mild migraines. For more severe ones, triptans are the standard treatment. They include Imitrex, Axert, Frova, Zomig, Amerge and Maxalt. An older medicine, ergotamine, still has a place in treatment.

For migraine prevention, propranolol, verapamil and amitriptyline are prescribed if the headaches occur often and disrupt life.

The headache booklet discusses the causes and treatment of the more common kinds of headaches. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue - No. 901W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Tonight my wife choked on a piece of corn. She jumped up gasping, and looked at me as if I should have done something. Her gasping stopped, and she could breathe. She asked me why I didn't jump up and hit her back. I heard if you hit somebody choking on the back, it could force the food farther down. Did I do the right thing? - R.M.

ANSWER: The Red Cross has changed its instructions on how to handle a choking adult. It now recommends leaning the person forward and giving five blows to the back between the shoulder blades with the heel of the hand. If that doesn't dislodge the food, then start the Heimlich maneuver.

Dr. Heimlich was never in favor of back thumps. He believed it could cause the food to drop farther down the windpipe - the trachea.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DENTURE-ADHESIVE ADVISORY

Denture-wearing patients should know that GlaxoSmithKline has ceased manufacture of their denture adhesives Super Poligrin Original, Ultra Fresh, and Extra Care over concerns of "potential health problems associated with the long-term excessive use of our zinc-containing denture adhesive products." While the manufacturer states that their products are safe when used as directed, use of excessive amounts of the product over a period of years may pose a threat of neurological symptoms and blood problems (such as anemia) linked with ingestion of the adhesive. It should be noted that zinc is not absorbed through the mouth, but only when swallowed. As a precaution against unwanted effects arising from misuse of the product, GlaxoSmithKline plans to reformulate their products without zinc.

Do you use denture-adhesive? As is the case in many products, there are a number of options consumers have regarding denture adhesives. Complete denture treatment needs to be customized for each patient's particular needs. We are currently accepting new patients. If you know of anyone in need of quality dental care we would appreciate your referrals. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Any questions that denture wearers might have concerning the continued use of or replacement for Super Poligrin Original, Ultra Fresh, and Extra Care should be posed to their dentist.

OF CONSUMING INTEREST

In an effort to find out what treatments work best to alleviate back pain, a popular consumer organization recently surveyed more than 14,000 subscribers to its magazine who suffered from lower-back pain (in the year immediately preceding the survey) but did not undergo back surgery. More than 50 percent of the respondents to the survey indicated that the pain severely limited their ability to conduct daily routines for a week or longer, and 88 percent said their back pain was of a recurring nature. When asked to rate the efficacy of a variety of treatments, hands-on therapies rated best, with chiropractic receiving the highest satisfaction score of all. Fifty-nine percent said they were "completely" or "very" satisfied with their chiropractors.

May is Arthritis Awareness Month. Arthritis is a musculoskeletal disorder that affects millions. As a Chiropractor, I can help with the limited joint mobility, pain management and release nerve pressure. Techniques are individually modified and x-rays may be necessary. Specific advice will be given on exercise, nutrition and relaxation. Although there is not a cure yet arthritis can be managed successfully. Call the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617-472-4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you take control of your health. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional chiropractic service.

P.S. Once a primary care physician rules out disease (such as infection or cancer) as the cause of back pain, he or she can make a recommendation for hands-on treatment such as chiropractic, which is covered by most health insurances and most insurances do not need a referral.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It involves equal consideration for all people alike, regardless of status or importance . . . or area or location. And this certainly holds true on streets and highways. Quite often, good manners are shelved and ignored in the driving habits of people who otherwise are fairly well-mannered. . . You see this in drivers squealing cars past slower motorists. . . You see this in the blasting of horns the second the light turns green. . . You see it in gestures and words of retaliation when bad manners of one induces bad manners in another. Bad manners probably cause as many accidents in driving as any other cause.

On holiday week-ends, especially when traffic is heavy, good driving manners are really needed. . . Giving the other fellow a break by means of common courtesy can definitely reduce traffic accidents which cause so much human misery - and property damage. Courtesy on the road has NEVER - nor will it ever - degrade a driver.

How courteous a driver are you?

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be a bit shaken by a friend's request. But before the Lamb leaps to conclusions, insist on a full explanation. You still might say no, but at least you'll know what you're saying no to.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Seeing red over those nasty remarks by someone with an ax to grind? Of course you are. So get out there and give your supporters the facts they need to get the truth out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A changing situation should get you to reassess your vacation plans and make any adjustments as soon as possible. And don't fret -- the change most likely will turn out for the better.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't put off dealing with any negative feelings that might be left over from a recent confrontation. The sooner all is resolved, the sooner you can move forward with fewer complications.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Leos and Leonas might feel the urge to redecorate their dens, and that can turn into a good opportunity to strengthen family ties by putting the whole pride to work to make it happen.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Look for the most efficient way to get a job done quickly and well. Taking more time than you need to make it look more challenging is a short-sighted move you might regret later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Travel remains strong in your aspect. And this time, it could involve someone traveling a great distance to come to see you. Meanwhile, an important matter suddenly could need your attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A workplace situation becomes a lot more bothersome than you'd expected. Be careful not to be pulled into all that anger. Look for support among others who also want to avoid trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Cheer up, lonely lovers, wherever you are. Just when you thought you'd been deleted from Cupid's database, the chubby cherub proves that's just not so. Congratulations.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A casual relationship could take a more serious turn. Are you ready for it? Your stars say you are. Paired Sea Goats also will find a renewed richness in their relationships.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Meeting a collaborator with new ideas seems to be a dream come true. But for both your sakes, be sure all your legal i's are dotted and t's are crossed before you start working together.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) A romantic overture flatters the usually unflappable Fish. But since it's a sincere from-the-heart gesture, go ahead and enjoy it. A minor health problem responds well to treatment.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the warm heart of a Taurean and the sensitivity of a Gemini. You would make a wonderful leader. So go ahead: Run for office.

To our employees who created Spring Fling, and to our community who supported it, we simply want to say, "Thank you all."

In an effort to help with recent revitalization efforts at Quincy Medical Center, several QMC employees formed their own fundraising committee and organized a number of events to help raise money for the hospital. Spring Fling – the first such event – took place Friday, May 7 at the Tirrell Room in Quincy. The event received an outpouring of support from throughout the community, with people buying over 250 tickets. It raised nearly $20,000 for the cause.

Event organizers emphasized how important Quincy Medical Center is to the community, and how committed its employees and staff are to keeping QMC here into the future for area patients. QMC Chairman of the Board Grace Murphy-McAuliffe thanked the employees for their efforts, as well as the donors and attendees. "We were overwhelmed with the coordination and effort expended by the fundraising committee and by the QMC community at large."

Please join us in thanking all the local businesses, organizations, and employees who contributed:

A Special Supplement

Thursday, May 20, 2010

City of Quincy, Massachusetts Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

It is my pleasure to introduce The Quincy Sun's special "Historic Quincy" supplement celebrating the proud history of our City of Presidents.

I know you will find "Historic Quincy" a helpful guide as you discover all of our City's rich history - The Adams National Historic Park and presidential homestead; the First Parish Church, home to the crypts of John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams, the Hancock Cemetery; the Adams Academy and the Quincy Historical Society; our granite and shipbuilding heritage and so much more.

Our heritage continually comes alive, as it did this Spring with the discovery of an original letter authored by President John Quincy Adams just two months after the death of his father, one of our country's most important founders, John Adams.

In the letter, John Quincy poignantly requests a "plain and modest monument, divested of all ostentation," to be built as his mother and father's final resting place. That monument and the presidential tombs are now a national historic landmark in the First Parish Church.

We plan to have the original letter fully restored and preserved, and expect to have it on full public display some time this summer. It is truly a treasure and incredibly important to our history as a community.

We are all proud of our great City, and I wholeheartedly encourage you to discover all that Quincy has to offer.

The Wife Of John Quincy Adams Only First Lady Born On Foreign Soil

Louisa Catherine Adams: More Than 'A Nobody'

By TOM HENSHAW

When she was 65 years old and a member of the famous and not always sensitive Adams family for 43 years, Louisa Catherine Adams penned a brief, unpublished memoir.

She called it "Adventures of a Nobody."

Louisa Catherine, the wife of John Quincy Adams and the only first lady born outside what became the United States, never quite fit in with her in-laws until late in life when Abigail finally acknowledged she was worthy to be an Adams wife and John grew to enjoy her letters and his conversations with her.

She was born Louisa Catherine Johnson on Feb. 12, 1775 in London to Joshua Johnson, an American merchant from Maryland, and his wife, Catherine, an Englishwoman. The family fled to Nantes, France, when the American Revolution made life untenable for Johnson in England.

In Nantes, Louisa attended a convent school run by nuns and thought of herself as Catholic and French in culture. She spoke French fluently and had to learn English all over when the family returned to London after the war in the colonies ended. Becoming an Anglican confused her so much that she fainted in her first visit to the altar.

Louisa first met her future husband in Nantes when she was 4 and he was 12. They met again at a party in the Johnson home in London and this time John Quincy was old enough to take notice of her literary, musical and conversational skills. They became engaged, much to the consternation of John Quincy's folks back home.

John the elder, now the president, was concerned that his son was about to marry "a foreigner," and Abigail felt called in to remind her son that the choices he made now might interfere with his political future. She even sent letters to Louisa pointing out the importance of economy and lack of frivolity required of an Adams wife.

Nevertheless, John Quincy and his Louisa were married July 26, 1797, in London. The ceremony called for little more than a paragraph in John Quincy's voluminous diary.

"At nine this morning, I went, accompanied by my brother, to Mr. Johnson's, and thence to the church of the parish of All Hallows Barking where I was married to Louisa Catherine Johnson, second daughter of Joshua Johnson and Catherine Johnson, by Mr. Hewlett.

"We were married before eleven in the morning."

They barely had time to set up house-keeping in London before John Quincy was off to the continent as minister to Prussia. Louisa was in her element in Europe. She made friends with the Prussian royal family. But she miscarried their first child and was subject to fainting spells and fevers. Her husband, engrossed in diplomacy, ignored her needs.

LOUISA CATHERINE ADAMS

She came to the United States for the first time in 1801, landing in Quincy, the very heart of Adams country. John, now an ex-president, found that he rather liked her but Abigail still doubted her qualifications to be an Adams wife.

"To a woman like Mrs. Adams, equal to every occasion in life, I appeared like a maudlin, hysterical fine lady," wrote Louisa.

A year later, John Quincy was elected to the U.S. Senate as a Federalist and the family was on the move again, this time to Washington. Out from under Abigail's thumb, Louisa blossomed, turning her home into a social salon for politicians and diplomats. But all that ended when her husband broke with the Federalist party and resigned his Senate seat.

John Quincy was immediately offered the post of minister to Russia by President James Madison and, without consulting his wife, he accepted. The family included three children by now and it was decided by John Quincy and Abigail that the oldest, George and John II, would remain in the States for their education while the youngest, year-old Charles Francis, would go to St. Petersburg with his mother.

She found the winters in the Russian royal capital cold and dark but there was social life and she became a favorite dance partner of Tsar Alexander I.

A daughter was born in St. Petersburg but died before her first birthday. In all, Louisa was pregnant 14 times with nine miscarriages and one still born. Her oldest, George, drowned at 28 when he fell or jumped from a boat in New York Harbor; John II died of alcoholism at 31; only Charles Francis survived to become a diplomat and author.

For once, John Quincy heeded his wife and asked to come home. Instead, President Madison assigned him to Ghent, Belgium, to help negotiate the treaty ending the War of 1812. When his duty to his country was concluded, he sent for Louisa to join him in Paris, touching off one of the great adventures of her life, even impressing her mother-in-law, Abigail.

For 40 days and nights in the dead of the fierce Russian winter she and Charles Francis, age 7, accompanied by a small escort, were driven by a carriage on a sled, thawing their frozen food over candles, crossing frozen rivers on quaking ice, hurrying past old battle fields still littered with dead soldiers. It was in relief that they arrived in friendly Berlin. But there were still perils ahead.

Napoleon had escaped from exile on the isle of Elba and was in Paris collecting his Grande Armee to confront the Duke of Wellington and the Prussian General von Blucher at Waterloo. There were French troops everywhere. A group of them spotted Louisa's obviously Russian carriage and surrounded her, shouting: "Kill her! Kill her!"

Louisa's escort convinced them she was Napoleon's sister. She addressed them in fluent French and they allowed her to proceed, cheering her as she went.

John Quincy was next assigned as minister to London and Louisa spent two happy years in her old hometown. Better yet, her oldest boys, George and John II, were permitted to join her. She hadn't seen them in more than six years. Neither parent recognized their sons, now 14 and 12 respectively.

The peripatetic Adams clan was on the move again when President James Monroe named John Quincy his secretary of state. Back in the states, Abigail greeted her daughter-in-law with new respect. Louisa enjoyed life in Washington, too, turning her home into a social center for diplomats and others with an open house every Tuesday night.

When it was apparent that her husband would be a candidate for the presidency in 1824, Louisa threw a ball honoring Andrew Jackson on the 10th anniversary of his victory over the British at New Orleans. She tried and failed to get the popular Jackson to support John Quincy. Instead, the war hero ran against him.

Jackson actually won the election with 99 electoral votes to 84 for Adams. 41 for William Crawford of Georgia and 37 for Henry Clay of Kentucky. But he failed to get a majority, throwing the election into the House of Representatives. After some wheeling and dealing, Clay threw his support to Adams and John Quincy became president. Clay became his secretary of state.

Louisa was depressed by the bitterness of the election and disappointed in her husband's backroom maneuvers to win election. Son George fathered an illegitimate child by a chambermaid. Son John II was thrown out of Harvard. Son Charles became "addicted to depraved habits." She spent much of her White House years in seclusion, eating chocolates and writing poetry.

But when John Quincy asked Congress to appropriate funds for a billiard table in the White House and pro-Jackson newspapers suggested it was for Louisa because "gambling furniture is common in the castles of the European rich and great," it was Louisa herself who answered back in the pro-Adams press.

She was relieved when John Quincy's single term ended in defeat by his old nemesis Jackson and they could retire to a quiet life in Quincy. But it was not to be. It took a year for her husband to catch his breath, then once again duty called and he ran and was elected to the House of Representatives, first as a candidate of the National Republican Party and then as a Whig.

John Quincy's great cause was anti-slavery and Louisa worked closely with her husband for the cause, even branching out to women's rights, equating the status of American women with that of American slaves and keeping up a lively correspondence with advocates of women's rights.

John Quincy served in the House for 17 years before he was stricken on the floor of Congress and died Feb. 23, 1848. Louisa remained in Washington, suffering a stroke a year later. She died May 15, 1852 at the age of 77 and was buried along side of John Quincy, John and Abigail in the United First Parish Church in Quincy.

Congress adjourned in mourning, a first time tribute for the First Lady who thought of herself as a nobody.

'Like Magnet And Steel'

John And Abigail A Unique Historic Team

By TOM HENSHAW

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could.

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

JOHN ADAMS

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage, after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic-Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic-Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield," in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081), named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents were reconciled in their later years.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years marriage and it was as if John himself had departed with her.

"The bitterness of death is past," he wrote. "The grim spoiler so terrible to human nature has no sting left for me."

Both John and Thomas Jefferson, his fellow Founding Father and rival, died on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail, along with their son, John Quincy, and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail at about the age of 32 and John Quincy at 10 stand beside the church, looking at the statue of John Adams across Hancock Street in front of City Hall.

The story of Abigail and John was recounted by HBO television in a seven-part mini-series in the spring of 2008. The mini-series, based on the book John Adams by David McCullough, starred Paul Giamatti (John Adams) and Laura Linney (Abigail). It won 13 Emmys and 4 Golden Globes.

The Quincy City Council Become In-Quincy-tive

Whether you were born and raised here, adopted it as your home or are a sojourner to our shores there is much to discover and much to delight in, in Quincy, the Birthplace of the American Dream.

Ranked by BusinessWeek magazine as the Best Place in Massachusetts and one of the top cities in the nation to raise children and rated sixth in the nation by U.S. News and World Report in its top ten places in the nation for seniors to retire, Quincy has something for people of all ages. No child left behind has true meaning in Quincy with educational opportunities available from all-day kindergarten in our highly rated low student-teacher ratio public school system with students speaking 32 dialects through to the graduate level at Eastern Nazarene College. Our city is welcoming and our neighborhoods are safe with many public amenities and services for families, young adults and seniors.

Whether it's our 27 miles of coastline or 27 ball fields, Quincy abounds with natural resources and opportunities for healthy outdoor recreational opportunities. Take a boat out into the harbor, a stroll along the beach or the Boardwalk at Marina Bay or hit a round of golf at any of three golf courses, Presidents, Furnace Brook or Granite Links. The exercise is good and the scenery is better.

As the City of Presidents we know it took more than a tea party to bring about the birth to a nation. Quincy is rich in history as the birthplace of two presidents including the "Atlas of Independence" John Adams the driving force to our independence, his son John Quincy Adams and John Hancock the first Governor of the Commonwealth. With a history of granite quarrying and shipbuilding, Quincy's foundation is a people rooted in hard work and initiative and with ongoing and forthcoming commercial economic investment and a planned revitalization of our downtown and neighborhood business districts we have a proud past and a promising future.

As President of the Quincy City Council and on behalf of all my colleagues with whom I am honored to serve, I invite you to become in-quincy-tive and truly discover all Quincy has to offer. See where we've been, where we are and where we're going. Stay in an excellent hotel and eat in some of the finest restaurants. Make yourself at home in Quincy. You'll be glad you did.

First Father And Son Presidents Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St. was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St. as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the Second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the Sixth President of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133 Franklin St.

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the Second and Sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two Presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the Sixth President of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that of fice. George H. W. Bush was the 41st The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottage: after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U. S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white in color and what Abigail wanted Abigail got.

In the summer of 1980, during a six year $175,000 reconstruction project the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The houses are furnished with precise reproductions of those that were in them when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House the Adams National Historical Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams old law office, in which the elder Adams James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

'The Old House' At Peace Field Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamsses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct if Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith. "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peace-field," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historical Site.

The Old House at Peace Field, 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour is at 4 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Y Heritage

The Clark Family has served at the YMCA for generations spanning more than 100 years. Representing the family, longtime Board member and President of Vulcan Tools, Alex Clark states, "For those of us who really know the Y, we know that what's important is its people — people who share one common goal — to help others... To help single mothers, to help families in need, to help kids attend programs, to partner with disabled. That's what inspired the three generations before me, and that's what inspires Davis and me now, and what inspires the generation after me — my son Alex, daughter Liz and their cousins, Sarah and Meghan."

Many other Y members have had a strong intergenerational involvement as well. You may recognize the following folks, and there are certainly numerous others. Father and son representations include the Briggs family, the Ashers, the DiNardos and the Hurleys. Daughters, too, joined in the tradition of serving the Y, as represented by the Papani family (daughters, Phyllis Godwin and Dorothy Palmer) and the Crofts family (daughter, Cynthia Crofts-Wisch).

We call it the heritage of the Y — families passing on cherished memories and experiences to their children. Positive character values, leadership training, developmental assets — this is what we're instilling in the young ones that enter our halls, and we continue to pass this on from generation to generation.

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And A Lot More

By TOM HENSHAW

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1825-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great grandfather.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the US Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace Field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onís Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, the speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secre

Letter Written By John Quincy Adams Found

Written In 1826 Requests Tomb Be Built For His Father's 'Mortal Remains'

By JOE REARDON

An assistant city solicitor, rummaging through old documents in the basement of City Hall, came across a letter that gives insight into one of the city's favorite son's love for his father.

Dated September 8, 1826 and addressed to Thomas Greenleaf, Josiah Quincy, Thomas Boylston Adams, Edward Miller and George W. Beale, the supervisors of the Temple and School fund given by John Adams late deceased to the Town of Quincy, the letter from President John Quincy Adams requested that a vault or tomb be constructed under United First Parish Church to hold the mortal remains of his late father, John Adams, and his late wife, Abigail. John Adams, the country's second president, passed away two months before.

"Upon the decease of my late honored Father I have considered it a duty devolving upon me to erect a plain and modest monument to his memory; and my wish is that divested all ostentation it may yet be as durable as the walls of the Temple to the erection of which he has contributed, as the Rocks of his native Town which are to supply the materials for it," John Quincy Adams wrote in the opening paragraph.

The letter was found by Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines earlier this spring in the Town of Quincy Archives Vol. 1, which is dated 1792-1827.

"We are steeped in history in this great city and the Adams family comes alive frequently," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Ed Fitzgerald, the executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, said the letter was particularly unique because it deals on a personal level at a time when Quincy Adams was mourning his father's death. It also comes from a time period where Quincy Adams makes a connection with the city as his home.

"It's very early on that John Quincy Adams is determined to build a monument for his father," said Fitzgerald. "We knew he was a pretty prolific writer. He's very busy at the time. He's writing like the Dickens. It provides an insight into the mind of John Quincy Adams. You sense the emotional depth behind his words. You see his love for his father."

Both Adams and his wife Abigail Adams were originally laid to rest in the Old Town Burial Ground, which is now the site of the Hancock Cemetery. Their remains were later transferred to the tombs in the crypt of the United First Parish Church.

In 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

... And among the things that I have in my mind is to erect a vault or tomb for my father's mortal remains. I am without a stone to tell where they lie. Should the Town, and the Parish be averse to my present proposal, I shall be anxious to know when the latter will propose to commence the building. Should they approve my designs, I shall no measures for erecting a monument elsewhere which I purpose to do. I shall for any inconvenience in the acceptance of my offer. It will be said that the agreement should be on writing, perhaps by indenture to fix property of the vault or tomb, and of the tablets.

I am, very Respectfully your friend John Quincy Adams.

SIGNATURE OF John Quincy Adams is legible at the bottom right of the letter written in 1826 when Adams was serving as the sixth President of the United States.

The "Church of Presidents" is the only church in the United States in which two U.S. Presidents are buried.

The several dozen books filled with documents have been moved out of the city hall basement since. Koch said they were previously kept in the old town hall. The current city hall was built in 1844.

"You could spend weeks and weeks going through the boxes, probably months," Koch said.

One of the books was recently sent to the Browns River Marotti Company in Vermont, which specializes in preserving old documents. The volume that contains the John Quincy Adams letter is in extremely good shape according to City Clerk Joe Shea. The cost to preserve a book runs from $7,000-$8,000 which is paid through the Community Preservation Act.

"It's quite a difficult book to be preserved," said Shea. "This one is in very good shape."

Only Church Where Two Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56—which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. mid-April to mid-November. Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there.

So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath.

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death.

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die.

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names. O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Square, next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have it if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001 with money from the Crane endowment used to purchase the property and the rest paid for with a city bond issue.

The new wing was dedicated in 2005 as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Quincy Historical Society At Adams Academy

Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S.

ADAMS ACADEMY is at John Hancock Square, and now home of the Quincy Historical Society. Quincy Sun Photo Robert Noble congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The library is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144 for more information.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

His folks were certain he would be a minister, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy.)

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the Rev. John Hancock.

When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle,

JOHN HANCOCK

Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

was signed and that created the United States and there was no other president at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong, suffered a humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R. I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January, 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U. S. Constitution, a process that was stalled in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington green and Concord bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president, a role he filled when he signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 57, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 9.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Welcome To Quincy

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite in Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once one of the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill Monument is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years the ball was half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary but was returned to its original site in 2007. Adjacent to the Gazing Ball is a bronze statue (right) of John Adams. The statue was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and is the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lilie. Located across the street from the Adams Statue is another bronze statue of Adams' wife, Abigail and their son, John Quincy (depicted as a 10-year-old boy).

UNITED FIRST PARISH Church is also known as "The Church of the Presidents" because two American Presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, attended the church along with their wives, Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams. Above is the pew which they sat marked with a plaque and ribbon on the side. All four are interred beneath the church in a family crypt.

Ancestry Traced To Magna Carta

The first member of the Quincy family, for whom the city is named, came to Boston from England in 1633, claiming descent from Baron de Quincy, one of the noblemen who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta at Runnymede in 1215.

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 166 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 166 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth

President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquilla" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a con-

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded rela-

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Hancock's Other Declaration: 'I Love You And You Alone'

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third.

(There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy Homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

They're just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their dooms, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just grew."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around

GRANITE WORKERS, many of them immigrants who learned their craft in Italy and the Scandinavian countries, are memorialized with a statue of Quincy granite in the Granite Workers Park on Copeland St., West Quincy. it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light," "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

Adams' Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the U.S., where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the Supreme Court can invalidate an act of Congress.

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regrettably, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannon roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The Sixth President of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

Hancock's Father A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The Rev. Hancock was in the forefront when the North Precinct successfully revolted against the taxes levied by Cambridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend ruled his little community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

John Hancock Richest Man?

At the start of the Revolution, Quincymen John Hancock may have been the richest man in the Massachusetts Bay colony, having built his fortune on a 400,000-pound estate left to him by his uncle, Thomas, when he died in 1764.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

The Granite Railway First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 150,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-

White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she

HARRIET QUIMBY

AMELIA EARHART

gained a real title, the Duchess of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Well-Known Businesses Began Here, Too Quincy's Celebrity Claims Are Famous

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson-franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum major with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, 'Jose

RUTH GORDON

BILLY DeWOLFE

JOHN CHEEVER

LEE REMICK

Jimenez.'

He grew up on Winthrop Street in Wollaston and, when his father, Frederick, lost his shoe business in the Depression, his mother, Mary, opened a gift shop on Hancock Street in downtown Quincy to keep the family afloat.

When he was kicked out of Thayer Academy for smoking and poor grades, John Cheever turned the experience into his first short story, "Expelled," and sold it to New Republic magazine. It was the debut of a writer who became known as "the Chekhov of the suburbs."

Cheever went on to win the National Book Award in 1958 for his novel, "The Wapshot Chronicle," and the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction for his collection of short stories in 1979. They called him the preeminent short story writer of the 20th century.

John Cheever died June 18, 1982 at the age of 70 at his home in Ossining, N.Y.

tary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi.

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the electoral college 178 to 83.

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams, like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration, the only two presidents to do so.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrat and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston March 17, 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a

Quincy company of 300 men put out in whale-boats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whale-boats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas.

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.

Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia; then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

The USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is located at 739 Washington St., at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. WWII Famed Figure

'Kilroy Was Here' At Quincy Shipyard

"Kilroy was here!"

It seemed like the words were everywhere 62 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the last chalk mark. Another checker would count the rivet a second time and the riveter would get paid twice for the same work.

One day, Kilroy overheard his boss ask a riveter if Kilroy had checked a certain rivet. No, said the riveter. That made Kilroy mad because he knew he had checked that particular rivet.

He grabbed a piece of chalk, went over to where the two men were standing and scribbled "Kilroy was here!" in large, bold letters right next to the check mark. It soon became his standard practice.

Ordinarily, the chalk mark would be covered up by paint. But this was wartime and some ships left the Yard too fast to be fully painted.

The enigmatic "Kilroy was here!" began appearing all over the world, joined by a drawing of a long-nosed character peering over a wall.

The mysterious message fascinated GIs. Soon they began writing it themselves on walls in the most unlikely places, like the Imperial Palace in Tokyo and the men's room at Yalta.

"Who is Kilroy?" asked Stalin as he came out wiping his hands.

Eventually, as "Remember Pearl Harbor" stood for America's fighting men in World War II and the men and women who built the war machines for them, so did "Kilroy was here!" come to stand for them too.

Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

Today, Squantum's pioneer flying days of Harriet Quimby, Amelia Earhart, Commander John J. Shea and Captain Harry Sartoris live on in the Aviation History Information Center at the Beechwood Community Life Center where the old Dennison Airport once held sway.

Quincy Historic Briefs

Wake Up Call

Two of the most important town officials in Quincy (then Old Braintree) in the last days of the 17th century were the constable and the tithingman.

The tithingman was appointed and paid by the town selectmen to keep order in church on Sunday morning and see to it that pewholders stayed awake during the sometimes three or four hour sermons.

He was provided with a two-foot long staff with a brass tip on one end to rouse sleeping male parishioners and a feather on the other end to do the same for female.

Among the duties of the constable was to apprehend Quakers and "attend funerals of any that died with the small pox, and walk before the corpse to give notice to any, who may be in danger of infection."

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780.

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy.

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture in order to give their sons the right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

Final Toast

On July 1, 1825, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the chairman of the Committee of Arrangements in Quincy, called on John Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regrettably, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, he was dead.

Adams Last Survivor

John Adams, who died only a few hours after Thomas Jefferson on July 4, 1825, outlived all but one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Maryland, who died in 1832 at the age of 95. Adams died at 90.

Hotbed Of Revoution

The meeting place of the Sons of Liberty in Quincy during the revolution was Brackett's Tavern, where the Liberty Tree was planted at the corner of Hancock and Elm Streets. It is commemorated by a granite marker.

74% Vote In Favor; $2.3M In Savings Wage Deferral May Spare 45 Teacher Jobs

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy's teachers voted overwhelmingly to defer next year's wage hike at Monday's meeting of the Quincy Education Association (QEA) in Dorchester.

QEA president Paul Phillips said the motion from the floor was approved by 74% of those present, more than meeting the required 2/3rds vote.

"They voted to defer 4% in income," said Phillips adding, "The city says it's $2.3 million (in savings)."

"We're told that $2.3 million adds up to 45 jobs and we're asking that they use the money we're providing for that," said Phillips.

The deferral will help reduce the 2011 school budget currently running an estimated $9 million shortfall due to required increases in such areas as salaries, transportation, special needs'

Faxon Park, Turning Mill, 6 Others Top Projects For 2010 Preservation

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) recently voted to allocate over a half a million dollars to fund eight historic preservation projects across the city.

CPC Chairman Steve Perdios said Mayor Thomas Koch and the City Council must now approve the choices.

Topping the list is a $200,000 allotment to repair the 72-year-old stonewall that encircles Faxon Park and a $100,000 award for the stabilization of Lyons Turning Mill. Both projects have active friends' groups.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, a member of the CPC, said he was thrilled with the choice of the Faxon Park project, calling it a major success for the Friends of Faxon Park who have been working so hard to spotlight the beauty of Faxon Park and to develop a master plan for the largest open space in the city.

Built in 1938, the wall encircles the original parkland with just over one mile or 6500 feet of a neatly raised rock wall topped by the pointer rocks of that era. Some 1800 Quincy workers employed through the depression's WPA (Works Projects Administration) built the wall.

"That's part of the history of the park," said Raymondi who said that people will be able to see the improvements while passing by.

The CPC previously approved $50,000 for the purchase of a 2.9-acre landlocked lot that will link the 57-acre Faxon Park to the 13-acre Avalon Estates parcel and adjoining open space of some 15-acres.

Raymondi said plans for the purchase are underway.

Flagging Veterans' Graves In Quincy's Cemeteries

By HENRY BRADLEY

Many calls are usually received after Memorial Day to inquire as to why a Veteran's grave was not flagged for Memorial Day.

As the former director of Quincy Veterans Services, I would like to remind the families of Veterans who have recently been buried in Quincy's cemeteries to make sure that Quincy Veterans Services is aware of your deceased Veteran's name, grave and location (Pine Hill Cemetery, Mount Wollaston Cemetery, etc.)

Due to changes in the city's Veterans Services Department Office over the past year, there is not a specific person assigned to the graves registration position. It would be easy to by-pass the grave of a recently deceased Veteran.

I suggest you call Quincy Veterans Services at (617) 376-1192 and

A TOXIC MIX!

At the beginning of the year, federal and state regulators warned the public about imported children's jewelry from China that has levels of lead and cadmium that pose a threat to health. Both metals are neurotoxins, which can cause brain damage in children who are exposed to them in cheap children's jewelry. Some Chinese manufacturers switched to cadmium from lead in children's charm bracelets and pendants. After that warning was issued, further alert was made necessary by the discovery of the heavy metal cadmium in some adult necklaces and bracelets sold in leading retail chains. These warnings point out the value of dealing with an established jeweler who deals only in high-quality pieces made of precious metals and safe alloys.

It has been said that if you don't know jewelry, know your jeweler! And never has that adage been more relevant than with the toxic jewelry that has been flooding today's market. You can always count on us to offer jewelry that reflects our commitment to using only the finest quality materials. We know it's easy to manufacture something that looks nice, but our pieces are designed to please as well as be safe. Visit soon at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636.

398-Foot Structure Seen For Moon Island

Proposed Wind Turbine Gathers Support

By JOE REARDON

With the potential for more open talks between the cities of Quincy and Boston in the future, plans were outlined for a wind turbine on Moon Island Monday night in the Squantum School gymnasium.

More than 100 residents, the majority from Squantum neighborhoods, gathered to hear the proposal for a 398-foot, $4.5 million turbine to be constructed on the Boston-owned land.

Jim Hunt, the chief for environmental and energy services for the city of Boston, told those in attendance that the wind turbine was both economically and environmentally the right thing to do moving forward. Hunt said that several sites in Quincy were looked at as potential locations, but Moon Island was proven to be the best area because of the strong, sufficient wind speeds on a peninsula like Squantum.

Erecting the turbine would require minimal traffic to Moon Island. The structure pieces would be transported on 8-10 trucks in one day. During the construction, there would be an average of 4-5 vehicles daily. Concrete for the project ranges from 100-400 cubic yards, a small amount.

Spokesman for the Quincy Environmental Network, Steve Perdios, said the organization has been having meetings on the topic of wind turbine power for years. He supports wind turbine energy and is pleased to see that the wheels are turning for a structure in Quincy.

"This is a nice location where it's not on top of people," Perdios said. "Hopefully this is Quincy's first wind turbine and not its last."

Senator Mike Morrissey, a huge proponent of turbine energy, said the coast and locations in the Berkshires were the only areas in the state that offered the best conditions for the turbine windmills.

"You need a consistent wind area," Morrissey said. "That's in the Berkshires and the coast. I tend to be a proponent of windmills. They don't offend me."

Boston Mayor Thomas Menino approached Mayor Thomas Koch about the plan, and, while Koch agreed that the project was feasible sound, he wanted the undertaking to be beneficial to Quincy.

Mass Energy Executive Director Larry Chretien explained the benefits of a wind turbine and how it was far more cost effective than burning fossil fuels for energy. Wind power, he said,

McGrath Highway Completed This Week

Final paving on the newly reconstructed portion of McGrath Highway is expected to be completed this week, marking a major milestone for the broader Quincy Center Concourse project.

The paving will mark the completion of the McGrath Highway portion of the project, which in addition to the new roadway includes new medians, traffic signals, sidewalks, street-lights and other amenities. The project is part of the larger Quincy Center Concourse project, the final phase of which is scheduled to begin this season.

"We are making progress every day to move our Quincy Center plan forward, and this beautiful new roadway is a critical element to those efforts," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

There will be no detours because of the paving, but drivers are advised to use caution and expect delays this week as the work wraps up. Paving is scheduled to be completed this week, and the final lane markings are scheduled to be added early next week, officials said.

The McGrath Highway portion of the Concourse is funded through a state Public Works and Economic Development Grant and an earlier downtown financing plan. The final phase of the project slated to begin this season is funded by an $8 million federal stimulus allocation through the state Department of Transportation.

Mayor Koch's Office, the state DOT and other project coordinators held a community meeting on the final phase of the project last week which drew more than 60 people. Officials outlined plans that include the critical Hancock Street crossing of the Concourse, which when completed will provide a east-west connector between Burgin Parkway and Route 3A.

Koch To Speak Tonight At Citywide Parents Meeting

Mayor Tom Koch will be the guest speaker at the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Broad Meadows Middle School.

Parents will have an opportunity to ask the mayor questions regarding the city budget.

All Quincy Citywide Parents' Council meetings are open to the public.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On May 31, 1859, the famous tower clock known as Big Ben, located atop the 320-foot-high St. Stephen's Tower, rings out over the Houses of Parliament in Westminster, London, for the first time. Its famously accurate timekeeping is regulated by a stack of coins placed on the clock's huge pendulum.
- On June 2, 1924, President Calvin Coolidge signs the Indian Citizen Act, granting automatic American citizenship to Native Americans born in the United States. The law attempted to finalize Indian assimilation into white culture while permitting Indians to retain some of their tribal traditions.
- On June 6, 1933, eager motorists park their automobiles on the grounds of Park-In Theaters in Camden, N.J., the first-ever drive-in movie theater. Advertising it as entertainment for the whole family, Richard Hollingshead charged 25 cents per car and 25 cents per person, with no group paying more than one dollar.
- On June 4, 1942, the Battle of Midway begins. During the four-day sea-and-air battle, the outnumbered U.S. Pacific Fleet succeeded in destroying four Japanese aircraft carriers while losing only one of its own, the Yorktown.
- On June 3, 1956, in Santa Cruz, Calif., city authorities announced a total ban on rock and roll at public gatherings, calling the music "Detrimental to both the health and morals of our youth and community." Two weeks later, Time magazine reported on similar bans enacted in Asbury Park, N.J., and San Antonio, Texas.

Flood Disaster Registration Deadline Extended To June 28

Registration deadline for homeowners, renters and business owners to apply for disaster assistance from this spring's record-setting floods has been extended until the close of business, Monday, June 28.

The extension was agreed upon by Commonwealth and Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) officials after reviewing the steady and consistent flow of new registrations throughout the last month. Since May 1, nearly 5,000 applications have been received by FEMA.

To date, more than 33,000 residents or people doing business in Bristol, Essex, Middlesex, Norfolk, Plymouth, Suffolk or Worcester counties have registered for some form of assistance.

Residents and business owners in Quincy who sustained losses may apply for assistance by registering online 24-hours a day, 7 days a week, at www.DisasterAssistance.gov or by calling 800-621-FEMA (3362) or 800-462-7585 (TTY) for people with speech or hearing disabilities.

Democracy And A Second Chance

They're out.

No stickers, no write-in campaigns.

The race for the open state representative seat in the 2nd Norfolk District is down to four candidates: Democrats Tackey Chan and Joseph Keegan, Independent Karl Roos and Republican John Iredale.

The two other announced contenders – School Committee-woman Elaine Dwyer and former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly – have abandoned their campaigns because their names are ineligible for the Democratic primary ballot. Both names were rejected recently by the state Election Division because Dwyer and Kelly failed to write the word "Quincy" on several of their nomination papers. Those papers were invalidated and as a result, neither had the minimum 150-signatures required for the primary ballot.

It's unfortunate voters in the 2nd Norfolk District will not have a chance to vote for Kelly or Dwyer. Both have extensive experience in municipal government and have served their constituencies well over the years. Kelly has been a champion of environmental causes while Dwyer has been a key voice on educational concerns.

But a rule is a rule in the eyes of the state Election Division that oversees the nomination process in state elections. In rejecting Dwyer and Kelly's bids to appear on the primary ballot, the Election Division cited a state law which mandates that every nomination paper shall state in addition to the name of the candidate (1) his/her residence, with street and number; (2) the office for which he/she is nominated, and (3) the political party whose nomination he or she seeks. Nomination papers without 1, 2 or 3 are tossed and so are the signatures on those sheets.

In Kelly's case, four of his 13 papers were rejected; he missed the ballot by 2 signatures. Dwyer had two papers rejected, falling 13 signatures short.

Neither is interested in running sticker campaigns so their candidacies are over. Kelly said he was very disappointed in the ruling but won't challenge the decision in court. Dwyer, who is expected to retire from the school committee after her current term is up next year, is taking the decision in stride. In what could be perceived as an omen, she didn't cash any campaign checks before her name was eliminated from the ballot. She's mailing those checks back to her supporters.

Those who support Dwyer and Kelly find the reasoning to reject their papers trivial. One word? You're out.

Sure, rules are rules but exceptions should – and can – be made.

And the state should be willing to make exceptions within certain circumstances when reviewing nomination papers.

Why?

There is such a thing as "voter intent." Shouldn't there also be "candidate intent?"

When someone votes in an election, they are asked to follow the instructions on the ballot. In Quincy, that means drawing a line to connect a candidate's name with the proper arrow on the ballot. If you don't, the opti-scan machine won't read the vote.

But during a recount, a voter's intent – or preference for a candidate – is counted even if the ballot wasn't cast properly.

In a recount, a ballot that was not counted originally is counted if marks on the ballot fairly indicate a voter's intent according to state election law. Such marks include underlining or circling a candidate's name or putting a check mark next to the name.

In the most recent city-wide recount between School Committee-woman Barbara Isola and fourth-place finisher Karl Roos last November, another 251 votes were tallied (amongst the six candidates) after a hand-count of all ballots cast on Election Day. That's a lot of votes – votes that would have gone undetected – and uncounted – without a recount.

Which brings us to "candidate intent."

Dwyer and Kelly each filed nine nomination papers correctly. Those valid papers make clear their intentions to run for state representative in the 2nd Norfolk District which is comprised solely in the City of Quincy. The office was filled out on the sheets, their names were filled out on the sheets. It's just that the word "Quincy" was omitted on some of those sheets.

Those who believe in a strict interpretation of the law say filling out nomination papers is like applying for a job. If you don't jot down the correct information, the employer will move on to the next applicant.

Maybe so.

But that same employer could be missing out on a potentially well-qualified worker just because one little word was left off that application.

One interesting note is that Dwyer or Kelly decided to run a sticker or write-in campaign – and won the Democratic primary – their name would have qualified for the ballot in the final election. Sticker campaigns consist of the candidate having their name printed on "stickers" and then distributing them to supporters. The supporters then place those "stickers" on the line for a write-in candidate.

In an era when people are shunning public office because of the negative connotation that comes with politics and public service, it's too bad the powers-to-be wouldn't make an exception because a vast majority of Dwyer and Kelly's nomination papers were filled out correctly.

There were 206 registered voters who signed Kelly's papers; 165 for Dwyer. It's probably safe to say they feel a little disenfranchised with the whole matter, too.

In our democratic process, voters aren't penalized for incorrectly casting ballots if there's a recount. They're afforded a second chance to have their voices heard.

Dwyer and Kelly shouldn't be penalized, either.

"GIVE IT BACK to Jack" – a retirement roast for former Quincy High School head football Jack Raymer – will be held Wednesday, June 16 from 6 to 11 p.m. at the Tirrell Room of the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., West Quincy.

RAYMER

Raymer is retiring after 33 years with the Quincy Public School system, including the last 12 as the Dean of Students at Quincy High.

Proceeds from the retirement roast will benefit the Quincy Elks Scholarship Fund that assists students in Quincy's Public Schools.

Donation is $20. For ticket information, call Donna Raimondi, 617-984-8813.

The evening will feature hours d'oeuvres and a cash bar. At 8:30 p.m., the roast will "kick off" for those who "dare" to offer a few words about Raymer who's probably best known for leading the Quincy High School Presidents on the football gridiron from 1984 to 1994. He began his football coaching career in 1970.

The roast should be a terrific time for a worthy cause. The affable Raymer along with classmate Louise DuArt were voted class entertainers of their 1968 QHS graduation class. DuArt, today, is a well-known impressionist and comedian.

Raymer is expected to have the microphone last at the roast.

But how about Raymer and former North Quincy football coach and friendly rival Ken McPhee tossing a coin at the end of the roast. Winner gets to speak last?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1931 real photo postcard showing the first Eastern Nazarene College Gymnasium on Wendell Avenue in Wollaston. Built in 1927 it was known as the "Gymnorum" because it served as both a gymnasium and an auditorium. In the 1940s it was renovated so it could also support chapel and church services from Sunday to Wednesday. It was converted back to a gym on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. When the present Eastern Nazarene Church was built in 1950 on East Elm Avenue, this again became a full-time gymnasium until it was demolished in 1973. The present Lahue Physical Education Center was built next to this site that is now a parking lot. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Senior Olympics Brings Out Quincy's Best

During the week of May 10-May 17, I had the privilege of competing in the Senior Olympics.

What a tremendous event, made successful by the hard work of many people. Number one on this list is our number one citizen, Mayor Thomas Koch, always smiling and offering encouragement. Secondly, Thomas Clasby, Jr., Director of Elder Services at the Kennedy Center. The personnel at the Recreation Department, especially Mr. Welch, Michelle, Bridgit, Katherine and Paul and many others whose names I was unable to obtain.

Thank you all.

At the swimming event in Lincoln Hancock School the kids who were lifeguards were wonderful. When Allen Cameron drank eight gallons of the pool water, they were right there. Thank you kids for saving a friend.

To the people at O'Lindy's Lanes on Quincy Avenue, who hosted the bowling, darts and billiards, thank you. They were great events.

On Thursday, May 12, I was introduced to bocce at the Torre Dei Passeri Club, 252 Washington St., Quincy. Originally, I had not signed up for this event, until the three young women (Michelle, Bridgit, and Katherine) of the Recreation Department urged me to register saying that it was a great event. Little wonder I kissed them every day after that. They were so right. In addition I added other events. Thank you Torre Dei Passeri members.

On the three-mile walk, thanks to my friend Lt.

Tobin, and his fellow police officers for escorting us across the intersections. They should all get hazardous duty awards. A group of senior citizens can be tougher to escort across busy intersections than the little newborn ducks born at the Kennedy Center at 2:15 p.m. on May 13. They and the seniors all made it safely across.

On my first event, I stumbled, cutting my hand clutching at a bush on the way down. A lady competitor helped me up, insisted on staying with me until help arrived in the form of Tom Clasby (who else?). This act cost Barbara Thomas a medal. Again, thank you Barbara. Your act epitomizes what is wonderful about the Senior Olympics.

I would be remiss if I did not mention the terrific encouragement of all at the Kennedy Center. Cleta's Soup, donated to me by Nancy with advice to go home, rest, and eat the soup.

To Nick, my trainer, who put me to practice a mile on the treadmill at high speed, while he dozed in the armchair, thanks. Nick spent countless hours teaching me javelin, shot put and horseshoes.

If I missed anyone, my apologizes, and thank you.

For phone calls of encouragement and support before the events, visits during the events, you know how much that meant to me, so thanks.

I could ramble for 100 more pages, but that would fill The Quincy Sun, and make a lot of people mad by denying them the best little paper in Quincy.

Lastly, on Friday May 14 the River Bay Club hosted the Sportsmanship Luncheon. What a wonderful group of people come from there, work hard catering to hundreds, leave the place spotlessly clean, then disappear. Thank you River Bay management and employees.

Tim's Been A Pretty Good Treasurer

Turned on my TV yesterday, I saw attack ads on Tim Cahill. Turned on my radio driving to work, and I heard negative ads on Tim Cahill. Seems to me like Cahill's done a pretty good job as Treasurer and he must be doing a pretty good job running for Governor because Charlie Baker and the Republicans want to take him out in April and May by using negativity.

Pretty sure most people I know are not into these types of attacks or dirty politics. At any rate, I am sure Tim will keep to his values and continue to debate the issues and not engage these people in this type of slander.

Good luck Tim!

Expect $308,000 In Hurricane Relief Aid

By FRANK McCAULEY

The city expects to receive $308,053 during the first half of June as part of the federal and state reimbursement for damage caused by Hurricane Gloria last fall. But it will be very likely beyond the September 27 anniversary of the storm before all of the money is reimbursed.

Principal Planner Richard Meade said there was $645,000 in total damage from the storm.

"We anticipate all of the work to be completed by September or earlier," said Meade.

FUNDS MAY HELP RENEW KINCAIDE SITE

A portion of the more than $2 million the city received after the sale of 200 Newport Ave could be used to revitalize the site of the former Kincaide Furniture company destroyed by a recent five-alarm fire.

The money has to be used for community development purposes said Arthur Foley, administrative assistant to Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

Future plans for the site were discussed at a meeting attended by Foley, some Quincy Square merchants, Planning Director James Lydon and Principal Planner Kevin Shea.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wing" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard.

Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

Historic New England is the oldest, largest, and most comprehensive regional heritage organization in the nation. The organization shares the region's history through vast collections, publications, public programs, museum properties, archives, and family stories that document more than 400 years of life in New England.

Respect All-Day Kindergarten 'Contract'

In March I registered my child for Full-Day Kindergarten that was offered to Quincy residents at no charge as it has been offered the past three years. Notices were published and letters were sent out from the City of Quincy in regard to Full-Day Kindergarten registration for the fall of 2010. This offer was made by the City of Quincy to the residents of Quincy with children that would be age 5 on or before 8/31/2010. Parents registered their children accepting this offer from the City of Quincy. A contract between the City of Quincy and each parent who registered their child was created.

The City made the offer if you want your child to attend Full-Day Kindergarten you must be a Quincy resident and register your child. There was no mentioning of paying a fee when we all registered and accepted the City of Quincy's offer to us as residents.

We fulfilled our part of the contract, now we want the City of Quincy to fulfill its part of the contract. We want the education we were promised for our children at no charge. You cannot add a price to this contract once we have accepted it at no cost. Similar to all the union contracts that can't be changed until it is renegotiated. We may not be a union but we are stronger than a union because we care about what is at stake here (our child's future). You cannot change our contract this year. You will have to wait until next year's contract with the parents and give them notice of this fee well in advance.

Do not break our contract we have with the City of Quincy.

You cannot make an offer to so many people and after it has been accepted change it.

We all have tried to plan for the future. Now there are so many unknowns that one can plan.

It is too late in the school year for us to make alternate plans without being put on a wait list. The City knew and should have advised us before the March registration. Even now, no effort has been made to contact the kindergarten parents who have already registered for Full-Day to inform them that the half-day kindergarten may be implemented in September. There are many parents in Quincy who are unaware that full-day is being taken away. When are you planning to notify them, August? According to Paul Phillips, President of the Quincy Teachers Union, "we are definitely implementing half-day kindergarten, no matter what." Yes, this is what he said to a parent several days ago over a heated phone conversation in which he proceeded to hang up on her. Instead the City went forward and created a contract with us to provide our children Full-Day Kindergarten at no cost.

We want the City to keep the contract with us. We have met the City's terms (we registered our children) and conditions (we are residents of the City of Quincy).

The City is in chaos! What is your kindergarten going to attend Full-Day...part-day...home school...private school...no school?

There are no current answers as to how Full-Day or Part-Day kindergarten is going to function. While the City is figuring this out, please put into the equation, transitions that were supposed to be made in kindergarten will not have been met. How are these students going to merge into First Grade in 2011? The diversity of children with various levels of education entering into First Grade will be a challenge for these children and teachers. I have no doubt that this will increase the number of First Graders retained. Increased retention will cost the city more money. Who will we blame for this?

My feelings are I'm not ready to decide on my children's education, as there are too many unknowns such as expenses and class sizes and "added programs" being cut. How can Literacy be an "Added Program"... My definition of added is an extra and to me an extra is a luxury and this program is not a luxury. What child who has difficulty reading would consider it a luxury? Do I take my child out of 2nd Grade at Squantum School and send him to a private school in fear of this Literacy Program being cut? I don't know! Children and parents are dependent on the Literacy Program for their child to succeed!

I am not going to decide on my child's future with so many unknowns and why should I? My child may go Part-Day or Full-Day and regrettably may not stay in the Quincy School system. But that cannot be decided until the City decides what they are going to do about this contract with the parents. Why should the parents' contract be treated any different from the union contracts?

Find the money and think outside the box. There are other programs that can be merged, there are monies owed to the City that they should be collecting on... Money that was loaned out in special programs in previous years... Use other funding such as CDBG... Allocate the money that is coming from Tim Cahill's office to education!

It is time for the City to step outside the box.

I could go on with so many other issues but first let's settle this issue of the parents' contract. Then we need to tackle other issues such as the unnecessary cutting of programs that our children need to help them in school academically and then the programs that will keep them off the streets and help them in the future.

We the parents want you to listen to us as you listen to the Unions.

Don't lose focus, we are talking about OUR children of the future here, no cuts will give them a direction in life.

Mass. State Lottery A Success, Political Attack Ads Disappointing

The negative ads against the Massachusetts State Lottery currently sully the air waves are gross misstatements of facts and affronts to reality that demand to be corrected. The propaganda campaign by the out-of-state Republican Governors Association twists and distorts our record in a fraudulent attempt to discredit the Massachusetts State Lottery's accomplishments under the leadership of Treasurer Timothy P. Cahill.

The Massachusetts State Lottery is the most cost-effective and profitable Lottery in the nation. The Lottery's administrative costs are just 2 percent of sales while our per capita profits rank the highest in the nation and second highest in the world, trailing only the island nation of Singapore.

Put another way, for every $1 in ticket sales, we spend about 2 cents on expenses. That's two cents on every dollar to cover everything from printing tickets to salaries to maintain our network of 7,500 computer terminals statewide. The next closest Lotteries in terms of cost efficiency are Florida at 3.7 percent; New York at 4 percent and Georgia at 4.1 percent.

Meanwhile under the leadership of Treasurer Cahill, the Lottery will have raised $7.2 billion for taxpayers by the end of this fiscal year. This year the Lottery will produce a net profit of $897 million for taxpayers while adjusting to a 14 percent budget cut.

In fact, the Lottery will spend less in administrative costs in fiscal 2010 than every year dating back to fiscal 2006. During prior fiscal years, some expenditures of the Lottery have increased as the business has grown, adapted to changes in technology and coped with rising fixed costs such as energy prices. Still, the Lottery will have reverted $7 million back to the General Fund from our operating budget over Treasurer Cahill's tenure.

The Lottery invested in a communications and data network that replaced an undependable, 15-year-old system that placed millions in revenue at risk. The new system, which can handle 150,000 bets per minute, safeguards our sales while paving the way for future expansion and growth.

The number of employees and state-owned cars has also decreased in recent years. Our employee count has dropped from 431 in 2001 to 412 today – and there have been no union raises in more than two years and management salaries have been frozen since 2007.

While the Lottery owns and maintains a fleet of cars to serve our 7,500 agents statewide, the number of vehicles has dropped eight percent from 128 to 118. The only funds spent on vehicles were to replace high-mileage vehicles that were no longer cost efficient. Without state cars, the cost to taxpayers would have been $4.7 million in mileage reimbursements for private vehicles used for Lottery business.

The most preposterous claim in the RGA ads concerns the Lottery's Braintree headquarters. Lottery headquarters were relocated to their current location in 1994 by GOP Treasurer Joe Malone. When the original 10-year lease was set to expire, the landlord agreed to $1.3 million in negotiated improvements as an incentive to re-sign the Lottery as a long-term tenant. All of the costs were paid by the landlord and not the Lottery.

As part of the lease evaluation process, DCAM (Division of Capital Asset Management, which negotiates all state building leases) compared the current location against similar buildings on the South Shore. The square-footage cost was competitive and the Lottery received additional space for its growing instant ticket portfolio.

DCAM concluded the Lottery would be "well-suited" to re-sign the lease and recommended that the Lottery stay on Columbian Street. Research also showed that moving to another location would have been cost prohibitive.

The lease was approved unanimously on Dec. 17, 2004 by the five-member Lottery Commission, including four members who were appointed by Republican governors. One of the commissioners was Beth Lindstrom, who later served as campaign manager for U.S. Sen. Scott Brown. Lindstrom also served as Lottery Executive Director from July 7, 1998 to Jan. 29, 1999.

As part of the landlord-funded renovations, less than $200,000 was spent on the headquarters' lobby to bring the area up to code including compliance with the American with Disabilities Act. The improvements were neither opulent nor out-of-line for a facility worn from 10 years of heavy traffic from the thousands of winners cashing tickets.

In conclusion, numerous state Lotteries under the direction of Republican governors have consulted with the Massachusetts Lottery during the last eight years to emulate our business practices. Furthermore, Lotteries from around the world including France, Japan, Spain, Switzerland, South Korea, Poland and Mexico have all made the trip to the Massachusetts Lottery headquarters in Braintree, Mass. to learn from our success – and not to look at the lobby.

We were eager to assist our colleagues and help them raise revenue for their citizens by implementing our policies and procedures. To now be attacked by their umbrella political action committee is offensive and disappointing. The citizens of their states and Massachusetts deserve better.

Catherine Cameron To Lead New Quincy Catholic Academy New School Principal Eager For Challenge

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Catherine Cameron said Tuesday she's eager to begin her tenure in Quincy as principal of the new Quincy Catholic Academy which will open for the first time in September.

"I've done it at John Paul School," said Cameron of the challenge of joining varied parish schools to one successful Catholic school campus.

Cameron said she understands the questions that parents and students have in preparing for the change.

Quincy Catholic Academy will be operated at Sacred Heart School, 370 Hancock St., North Quincy and will include students from Sacred Heart, St. Ann's and St. Mary's parishes. The school will serve pre-kindergarten through grade 8.

Cameron believes that the benefits of the larger school outweigh any disadvantages, but understands that parents and teachers have questions so she's already meeting with both and instituting an open door policy.

"I have a lot of help," said Cameron, praising the teachers and staff of all three schools, noting they have put out the welcome mat.

As of Tuesday, the enrollment for Quincy Catholic Academy topped 400 and Cameron said the goal is 500 by opening day. With a larger enrollment, the new school will be able to rehire some of the 20 teachers who will lose their jobs due to the consolidation of Quincy's Catholic elementary schools.

The hardest job so far was hiring 18 of the nearly 40 teachers currently staffing the parish schools but Cameron said, "If we can get our enrollment up, we can rehire more."

Cameron is no stranger to Quincy's Catholic schools as she spent three years as principal of St. Mary's School from 2005 through 2008. Prior to the top post at St. Mary's in Quincy, she served as principal of St. Mary's School in Winchester for six years.

She has also served on the Executive Committee of the National Catholic Education Association, representing the New England States and president of the Archdiocesan Elementary School Principals' Association.

"We are thrilled that she has accepted the Board's offer to serve and we welcome her leadership as we launch the new school this fall," said Dr. Mary Grassa O'Neill, Secretary for Education and Superintendent for Catholic Schools of the Archdiocese of Boston.

In a joint statement, Rev. David Callahan, Rev. John O'Brien and Rev. John Ronaghan, the pastors of the three churches said, "We are thrilled to welcome Ms. Cameron to Quincy Catholic Academy.... She brings a superb track record of accomplishment."

Cameron, a 1978 graduate of Boston College, earned her Masters in education from Curry College and a Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study from Emmanuel College, 2004.

Catholic school administrators explained earlier this year that Sacred Heart School offered an ideal site for the new academy.

The Sacred Heart School building has renovated heat and electrical systems, a state of the art science lab, a large library and renovated classrooms.

In addition, the building offers a fully equipped kitchen, new ventilation systems, a new Apple computer lab, and wireless computer capability throughout the school.

Other buildings may have required an investment of over $4 million.

ACADEMY AWARD winning actress Olympia Dukakis appeared at the Quincy Council on Aging Kennedy Center Tuesday for an informative and entertaining discussion on diabetes. She was joined by her husband, actor Louis Zorich. They were joined by a local medical expert to discuss the importance of early diagnosis and diabetes disease management. The program was presented by the River Bay Club of Quincy.

Quincy Man Indicted In Shooting

A Norfolk County Grand Jury Monday indicted Robert O'Connell of Quincy for armed assault with intent to murder and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon causing serious bodily injury.

The armed assault to murder charge carries a potential penalty of 20 years in State Prison upon conviction. The ABDW indictment carries a potential 15-year penalty.

O'Connell, 40, of Marina Drive in Quincy, was arrested at the Quincy Police Station in December 2009 following a Dec. 12, 2009, roadside shooting near the intersection of Hancock Street and Commander Shea Blvd.

The incident was investigated by the Quincy Police Department with assistance from State Police Crime Scene Services Section, State Police Ballistics and the State Police Detective Unit assigned to the Norfolk District Attorney's Office.

That shooting left a 30-year-old Milton firefighter hospitalized with life threatening injuries; he has since recovered.

Assistant District Attorney Brian Wilson has been assigned to try the case.

The District Attorney's Office attempted to have O'Connell held without bail under the dangerous person statute after he pled not guilty at his Quincy District Court arraignment. Instead the defendant has been free on the $500,000 cash bail established by the court at that arraignment.

The indictments transfer the case to the Norfolk Superior Court. Mr. O'Connell was scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday at Norfolk Superior Court.

Quincy Planners To Receive National Award

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and Planning Director Dennis E. Harrington announce the City of Quincy will be presented with the John A. Sasso National Community Development Week Award during the National Community Development Association's annual conference next month.

This recognition represents the fifth national award the City's Department of Planning and Community Development has won over the past six months.

The award recognizes communities that exemplify the spirit of the Community Development Block Grant program by showcasing its good works through the activities and events during National Community Development Week, which was observed across the country from April 5-10. Quincy has received this prestigious national award three additional times since 2004.

"Once again, we had a very strong application, due to the fact that our Community Development Week events included the involvement of Congressman William Delahunt, as well as our local program representative from the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development," Harrington said.

"Eleven separate events were held during Community Development Week to celebrate the positive impact that Federal grant programs have had in every neighborhood of Quincy," said Nancy A. Callanan, Community Development Director.

"I am very pleased with the National Community Development Association's continued recognition of our Community Development Week activities," Koch said. "This award recognizes our continued efforts to provide a better quality of life for all Quincy residents."

Chief Keenan opened the hearing to discuss the incident of May 1, a shooting in the parking lot related to Club 58 and what Pansulo's business intentions are relative to entertainment. He added he has received calls from other departments about the DJ and the crowds he attracts.

Pansulo stated the shootings happened in the parking lot, not in his club. Attorney Cassis noted the DJ that night may have attracted the younger crowd and a different DJ will be hired in the future. Chief Keenan stated the entertainment is drawing the "gang bangers" to his club. Matthews stated the crowd following that DJ has now moved to Boston and he will no longer advertise in the neighborhood directly, he added there have been no problems the last two Friday nights.

Pansulo agreed to soften the music and try to attract an older crowd, enforce a dress code and change the DJ. Chief Keenan thanked Pansulo for coming to the meeting and stated he will monitor the situation, he will work with him but any future problems will force him to bring Pansulo back. produces zero emissions into the atmosphere. He noted that the city of Quincy spends $4 million per year on fossil fuels.

"We're 100% on fossil fuels," said Chretien. "We may want to look at something that's more affordable."

The beauty of the project is that the huge turbine shouldn't be an eyesore with the closest home nearly a mile away. There is also no issue with sound pollution. "There's just no way you're going to hear them a mile away," Chretien said.

$1.2 million towards the cost of the project will be covered by a $400,000 grant from the state and another $800,000 from Mass Energy.

There is a loose timetable for the $800,000 going towards the project. Permits for the plan must be obtained by Oct. 31 and procurement must be finalized by Dec. 31. The goal date for the turbine to be operational is April 22, 2011, Earth Day.

The majority of the residents were in favor of the turbine, but others said there isn't a need for the massive structure. "Enough of treating Moon Island as a toilet," said Steve Kolander of 25 Bayside Road. "I say if money makes sense to you this is a dumb thing to do."

A portion of the presentation dealt with the views of the turbine from various streets in Squantum. Using a computer rendering of the windmill, it was barely distinguishable from any of the neighborhoods.

Bruce Berman, a member of Save the Harbor Save the Bay, liked the idea of both mayors sitting down and working together and was optimistic about the project succeeding.

"It's new and a little bit scary for people who aren't familiar with it," said Berman.

Several residents believed that the city should bring up issues it has had with Boston over the years when it comes time to hammering out the final agreement. The Boston Police firing range and the deplorable condition of the Long Island Bridge stood out front and foremost.

Jim Stamos of Squantum applauded Mayor Koch's office for being progressive about having the wind turbine in the city. He went on to say he would like to see Moon Island accessible again to the public. "So many of us grew up fishing and riding our bikes out there," said Stamos. "This is the wave of the future and Quincy is out there in the forefront."

Morrissey blasted the city of Boston for its past dealings with the city and lack of communication. "They treated us like a doormat," he said. "I was hoping the (Long Island) bridge would fall down, with no one on it. We're hoping that this dialogue opens more dialogue and they stop dropping their crap on us."

"This has the potential to bring the two cities together."

Ward 6 Councilor Brian McNamee said after the presentation that Quincy residents' voices and concerns would be heard through the process before the turbine is built. McNamee added that the discussions between the two mayors were historic.

"This is the first time that the city has spoken to Quincy since the conveyance of Squaw Rock (in the 60s)," McNamee said. "This is still a fluid negotiation. There are a lot of items that have been raised. The mayor has assured me that he's going to hear the residents out and incorporate as many of their concerns with the city of Boston."

Lyons Turning Mill where granite columns were once cut and polished. Those columns adorn municipal buildings and courthouses through the country.

Al Bina, President of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum, said the funds will be a major aid in protecting and restoring the mill.

"They're going to put a special (substance) on the top of the walls that will stop the water from percolating (down the walls)," said Bina, adding that capping the top will protect the balance of the structures.

The substance will also be used on the walls and base to "secure the rocks that have been loosened by water damage," said Bina who has been working toward the mill's restoration for years.

Bina invited persons interested in the history of the granite workers and the mill to visit the foyer of City Hall where photos of the original structure and workers are currently on display.

Souther Tide Mill

Carolyn Marks, President of the Friends of Souther Tide Mill, and Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest both welcomed the CPC's $30,000 grant for 2010 which will be used exterior improvements of the historic structure.

"I'm glad to see it's getting the attention it deserves," Laforest said of the CPC recommendation.

"They should be able to complete the structural work at the North End and replace the roof," said Marks, noting that, approximately $115,000 in previous grants are also available for the project.

"The windows have to be replaced," said Marks, adding that the Friends hope to access the talents at North Bennett Industrial School in replacing and restoring the windows.

"We've been at it for 15 years," Marks said of the Friends members who hope to be involved in seeking new grant money as well as the planning and restoration currently underway at the mill.

"It looks like they're making progress," Marks said noting the pile of new wood near the site. "The floods didn't affect it."

Butler Pond

Under their Open Space initiative, the CPC recommended a grant of $15,000 which will be used to study Butler Pond, according to Ward 5 Councilor Doug Gutro.

Gutro also credited the Friends of Butler Pond for actively seeking preservation funds for the pond.

When the funds are approved, Gutro said the researcher will evaluate the ecological health of the pond, determine how to improve the waters, eliminate invasive plants and locate the sources of periodic odors.

Also on the list is a $40,000 grant for the belfry at United First Parish Church and $25,000 for various repairs at Adams Academy and $42,000 for the restoration of grave markers at Hancock Cemetery.

Municipal Buildings

The CPC, also, recommended the expenditure of nearly $200,000 for repairs and improvements to municipal buildings with two large grants for Thomas Crane Public Library and Old City Hall.

A $77,500 grant would be used to restore the basement of the Richardson Building at the library while $75,000 would be assigned to repairs needed in the basement of Old City Hall.

In addition, the CPC is recommending $2300 for bicycle racks and $13,000 for the design and permitting of the Neponset River Walk.

According to Perdios, approximately $168,531 will be set aside for future use through the CPA Affordable Housing Fund. This is approximately 10% of available 2010 funds.

The lion's share of the CPA funds must be allocated to pay off bonds used to purchase open space in past years.

Perdios said that after this year's payment of $905,450, there are two years left on the bonds.

Committee members include the following: Perdios, Raymondi, Maureen Mazrimas, Connie Driscoll, Tony Ricci, Donald Powers, John Brennan, John (Jack) Menz, and Coleman Barry.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

As we climb out of the recession, small businesses may continue to trim costs and may be reluctant to add costs. A liability lawsuit can wipe out a small business owner, so it's important to maintain insurance. At JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY, we can create a comprehensive and cost-effective insurance plan for your business. Most importantly, we can periodically review your coverage to keep up with your changing insurance needs. Please call us at 617-328-8600 to schedule a consultation. Our office is located at 151 Hancock Street.

Some companies may have their employees traveling less these days, but that doesn't mean the corporate travel insurance market has been standing still. Typical travel insurance, which can cover side trips to visit friends and family as well as employees' business trips, covers accidental death and dismemberment. Standard policies also cover medical evacuation, repatriation of remains, delayed or lost baggage, and trip delay/interruption. Popular additions include out-of-country medical insurance; security evacuation; and security services, which include identity theft, political evacuation, natural disaster services, and trip information services. Terrorism is not excluded under most policies, but war risk is excluded. However, specific war risk coverage may be added if a company knows that it has an exposure in a high-risk area.

NOTE: Some travel insurance policies offer kidnapping and ransom coverage.

Wage Deferral May Spare 45 Teacher Jobs

programs and a reduction of nearly $1 million in state aid.

Mayor Thomas Koch, also Chairman of the School Committee, welcomed news of the teachers' vote, "I am grateful for the decision by the teachers. It shows clearly to our community that we are all in this together and that we all understand the scope of the challenges we face as a city. I'm elated and grateful," said School Committee Vice Chair Anne Mahoney who also serves as chair of the committee's Budget Committee.

However, Mahoney cautioned, "We're still looking at a $6.8 million (shortfall). We still have a big gap. This helps."

Mahoney said that fees and changes are still on the table and encouraged parents and all residents to attend Thursday's budget discussion.

Furloughs vs. Cuts

While the teachers' vote will aid the school budget next year, the details of an agreement must still be ironed out.

"We prefer that it be accomplished by a furlough," said Phillips, describing the preference of the majority of his membership.

"A straight deferral hurts the most senior people," Phillips said Tuesday. "It hurts the rest of their lives."

Phillips explained that the teachers near retirement would lose the added income due them in their contract and their final pensions would be considerably lower. For the new teachers, a deferral "saves the jobs."

"A furlough is not taking the pay," said Phillips. "They will be working for free."

Phillips said that all union members would work for seven days at no pay under a furlough provision. This would be the equivalent of a pay freeze.

"Furloughs are something to be considered," said Mahoney, who noted that other city departments were offered furloughs during discussions of deferred raises.

Koch will hold an open hearing Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Broad Meadow School on budget issues. Parents and residents will be invited to ask questions of school and city officials at that meeting.

Park Department: Core Mission Is Goal Amid Cuts

A 17 percent cut over two years in the Park Department has meant the elimination of all summer help, the City's tree-planting program and reductions in labor and administrative staff.

As a result, Park Commissioner Kristen Powers asks residents to be patient with care-taking of the City's more than 50 public parks and school grounds, she said today.

"These are extraordinary times, and we will be working to ensure we protect our core mission of maintaining our parks and public spaces," Powers said. "Mayor Koch has made it clear we simply cannot afford to sustain the cost of government and rely on property tax increases every year, so we must continue to find ways to deliver the core services that are important to our residents in the most cost-effective way."

Under Mayor Koch's budget proposal for the fiscal year beginning in July, the Park Department is cut by 9 percent to $1.7 million, which followed a similar cut for the current year. Powers said spending cuts will be noticeable by residents, but she said the Department is prioritizing the core services of maintaining playing fields, school grounds, and passive parks and public spaces across the City as well care-taking for the City's thousands of public trees.

"Every department in the City is being asked to do its job with less, and in the Park Department's case, it's doing more with less," Koch said. "Our families in this City are struggling through this economy and we are not raising property taxes this year. That means real and substantial for the second straight year in many departments."

The City's annual tree-planting program, once budgeted for $200,000, will be completely eliminated in the new budget after several years of gradual cuts, officials said. But Koch pointed out that the other beautification programs will not be entirely abandoned. He said the City spends about $12,000 total for Spring and Fall plantings in areas across the City, and will continue that program in the new budget.

"I've been asked a few times about spending money on plantings during these difficult times, but are not going to just give up one of the basic missions of the Parks Department for what would be largely symbolic reasons," he said. "It's very small amount of money that goes a long way for keeping our public spaces looking good. That's an important quality of life issue. It's important for tourists to feel welcome here. And it's important as we move forward on our economic development plans."

Powers said that the Department had 28 employees in 2001, the year after the Parks Department took charge of maintaining the school property across the City. That number has dropped to 22 over the last several years, and this year will mean the loss of the Department's Program Manager, who has been responsible for coordinating permit applications, city events, tree requests and other administrative functions.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Cold Water Exposure

As I write this, the water temperature along our waterways is around 58 degrees Fahrenheit. I mention this where I get concerned during this time of year especially where individuals can look upon our spring weather as summerlike on those occasions, while water temperatures significantly lag behind atmospheric temperatures. A 70 degree spring day does not mean that water temperatures are comfortable, or can be tolerated safely for long periods of time.

Having grown up in Quincy, so close to the water, while much of my recreation during my earlier years took place upon the water, I was often reminded how much lower the water temperature is in the spring, and how dangerous a prolonged exposure within that water can be.

Unfortunately, it seems that there are those every year that disregard this fact, and succumb to drowning. In fact, news reports this year in particular, seem too frequently to hilt these incidents.

Once in cold water, personal flotation devices might keep you afloat, but will not protect you from heat loss. If exposed to cold water, the internal physiological mechanisms that enable us to replenish heat can then be overwhelmed, causing a drop in core temperature. As body temperature decreases, characteristic symptoms occur such as shivering and mental confusion. Eventually, our compensatory mechanisms cannot keep up with the heat loss resulting in death.

In 2005 there were 74 drowning deaths and a combined total of 187 inpatient hospitalizations for nonfatal submersion-related injuries among Massachusetts residents. Drowning is the leading cause of unintentional injury death among children 1-4 years of age, while alcohol use is involved in about 25% to 50% of adolescent and adult deaths associated with water recreation.

The water can be enjoyed safely, but must be respected. It is no more important to do so than during the springtime when even a brief exposure can be extremely hazardous. Be cautious while we recommend postponing any endeavor on the water unless you are properly prepared or until water temperatures increase substantially. As enticing as the water can be; it demands respect. As enjoyable as it can be; it is equally unforgiving. Think safety first! Thank you for doing so.

QHS Students Participate In Harvard Program For International Education

Students of Meg McMillen's Modern World/Early American History class were recently treated to a full day visit to Harvard University as participants in the Harvard Program for International Education (HPiE).

Undergraduates from Harvard taught four classes at Quincy High about the global topic of religion. Students discussed the historical and contemporary issues of the major religions.

The full-day field trip included a class lecture from Professor Diana Eck who teaches Comparative Religion and Indian Studies at Harvard. She also heads-up the Pluralism Program out of Harvard which encourages engagement with diversity. She shared how her experience as a college student during the Vietnam War led her on the path to religious exploration. She encouraged students to visit the many places of religious worship here in Quincy including the Thousand Buddha Temple and the Islamic Center of New England.

Participants were treated to Jewish music and song from the Harvard Klezmer Band before engaging in a mock crisis with students attending from Boston. The mock crisis asked students to consider the complications of creating modern nation-states while trying to meet the needs of citizens from many different faiths.

Quincy High students participated in an HPiE Essay and Creative Works Contests in which they took top honors.

Saira Chaudhry won first place for her personal, descriptive and colorful poster board on the importance of freedom of choice for Muslim women to cover their heads as part of their Islamic faith. Thays Duarte and Jakki Levasseur shared second place prizes for their poem and essay, respectively. Runners-up for their thoughtful and spirit essays were Kameron Kaplan, Greg Lowe and Kiana Truong.

Cahill Endorsed By Quincy Patrolmen, Superior Officers

By JOE REARDON

Citing the importance of putting qualified police officers on the street in today's advanced society, Independent gubernatorial candidate Tim Cahill was endorsed Monday by the Quincy Patrolman's Union and Quincy Police Superior Officers' Association at City Hall Plaza.

"Tim Cahill is a longtime friend of law enforcement and is committed to making sure that our men and women wearing the uniform have the resources and support that they need," said Lieutenant Timothy Sorgi, president of the Quincy Police Superior Officers' Association. "He is exactly the leader that Massachusetts needs right now, and we are proud to endorse his candidacy for Governor.

"Tim Cahill has been an advocate of the Quincy Police Department since day one."

Cahill stressed the importance that police candidates have the proper, extensive training to do a job that has become more complex over the years. He pointed out that we're now living in dangerous times with the threat of terrorism always looming.

"There's no more important time to make sure public safety is at the forefront," Cahill said.

"We need a governor who will stand with police, not against police. We should not go back to the old days when you take a kid out of high school and put him on the streets to patrol the neighborhood."

The state treasurer, who is a former Quincy city councillor, said he wasn't always on the same side of the Quincy Police Department when he was on the City Council, but he felt he was doing what was best for the city. Cahill went on to say he doesn't condone people being bumped over more qualified individuals for a job.

"I've always supported people with the best qualifications," he said.

Nearly 1,000 Attend Community Finance Meetings With Mayor

Nearly 1,000 residents attended a series of community meetings hosted by Mayor Thomas Koch on City finances and the administration's plans to confront the historic economic crisis faced by communities across Massachusetts.

"We had a great dialogue with our residents, and that is absolutely vital as we move forward through this difficult period," Mayor Koch said. "Our community is clearly engaged - and to me that's another sign that we will emerge from this crisis a stronger community and poised for our future."

At the meetings, Koch distributed the City's inaugural financial report and gave a presentation on the City's fiscal position and its challenges. The goal, Koch said, was to provide a transparent airing of issues facing the City and allow for a free-flowing exchange of questions and ideas between residents and City Hall.

Koch hosted nine meetings in neighborhoods across Quincy; most of the meetings drew at least 100 people.

"We are committed to keeping the dialogue going, and anyone who has any questions or concerns regarding the budget or any issues should feel free to contact our office anytime," Koch said.

At the meetings, the Mayor detailed revenue sources, City spending, historic and future obligations and how the administration approached the Fiscal Year 2011 budget, which will see substantial spending cuts in almost every department but will not raise the property tax levy beyond new tax growth for the second consecutive year.

"I believe people came away from the meetings with a clearer understanding of our challenges and that we cannot afford to sustain the cost of growth in government any longer," Koch said. "There were plenty of tough questions about specific spending cuts, and while I'm sure not everyone was pleased with some of the answers, it is important to me that we did our best to answer all of them as openly and honestly as possible."

Questions at the meetings

did not all relate directly to City finances, with queries ranging from economic development plans, long-term capital needs, to potholes, street-lights and sidewalks.

The Mayor's Office is putting together a Frequently Asked Questions document with answers that will be posted to the City's website, www.quincy.ma.gov.

Atherton Hough School 'Green Team' Beautifies WWII Veterans' Memorial Park

The World War II Veterans' Memorial Park adjacent to the Atherton Hough School was recently beautified thanks to the hard work of the school's "Green Team" and hard-working parents.

Children weeded, dug, planted flowers and spread mulch. The parents helped plant a flowering dogwood tree and beautiful rose bushes within the park.

The project was funded through a grant from the Home Depot.

"The project was an excellent example of a community coming together for a very good cause. We honor and celebrate our veterans," said Nancy Brennan, Atherton Hough School kindergarten teacher and "Green Team" coordinator.

Beloved Teacher Will 'Live Forever In Our Hearts'

Joanne Daley Memorial Bench Dedicated At Wollaston School

By JOE REARDON

Yinyu Ji remembers very clearly when Joanne Daley asked her to come up to her desk after Yinyu received an uncharacteristic, less-than-stellar grade on a math test.

The Wollaston Elementary School fourth-grader was nervous as she approached Daley's desk, but her butterfly wings were quickly quelled by the popular teacher's trademark smile and offsetting manner that made students feel as though everything would be ok if they put forth their best effort.

"She looked me straight in the eye and said, 'You're a good student. You just have to be more careful,'" Yinyu said.

"Mrs. Daley will live forever in our hearts."

Now a fifth-grader, Yinyu was one of several former students, city dignitaries, parents and colleagues who gathered in the drizzle, last Wednesday afternoon, on the Wollaston School front lawn to honor the beloved

BRIGHAM AND TIANETIE McKee, both members of the Wollaston Elementary class of 2010, read a poem of their fourth-grade teacher Joanne Daley at the recent dedication of a granite bench in memory of the popular teacher.

Daley's battle against cancer came to an end when she passed away in April of 2009.

A handsome, granite bench on the front lawn was unveiled in her memory, under the classroom where she taught hundreds of young minds from 1987-2009.

The words "Mother - Teacher - Artist - Friend"

DR. ELIZABETH BOSTROM, principal of the Wollaston Elementary School from 1987-2003, remembers her colleague and friend, Joanne Daley.

were inscribed on the bench of a teacher whose passion for molding young minds was unparalleled.

The bench will serve as a permanent reminder of Daley's love of teaching to all those people who knew her. "She lived, she loved, she learned and left each one of us her legacy," said Wollaston School Principal James Hennessy. "We are all part of Joanne's work. She molded us."

Hennessy said the crowd grew even more when people learned of the dedication ceremony. "It kept growing and growing," she said. "The more people found out, the more who wanted to be a part of it."

Ward 3 City Councilor Kevin Coughlin pointed out Daley's uniqueness as an educator, whose belief that learning wasn't limited to time spent inside the school. "She understood education was more than in a classroom setting," Coughlin said.

Central Middle School teacher Paul Griffith, one of Daley's former students, said one of her most endearing qualities was the fact that she treated all her students equally. Griffith learned to teach through a variety of sources and Daley's talent for getting information across to her students was one of them. She also was skilled in making students feel important and special.

"That's something that resonates with so many students," Griffith said. "Mrs. Daley would always have a smile on her face. She made students feel equal and important."

The poem "The Perfect Teacher" was read by students Clare Doherty, Mia Healy and Morgan Murphy, and Brigham and Tianetie McKee also contributed a poetry reading.

Susan Troy, the school's principal from 2004-2009, admired Daley's "grace and courage" as she continued to teach while fighting the cancer. "She used every ounce of strength to come to school," Troy said.

Daley's non-sense approach to teaching and her love for her students were reiterated by Dr. Elizabeth Bostrom, the principal from 1987-2003. "She impressed upon her students that school was important and they were there to learn."

Daley always tried to instill a love of reading in her students and would use the time after lunch to read to the students a book of their choice.

"Her influence will continue to be felt always in our lives," said Bostrom.

Daley was always ready to give students a hand outside the classroom as well. Bostrom told a story of a family who moved to

Navigating Through The Choices In Composite Decking

(NAPSA)-When many consumers decide to add a new deck or replace an existing one with a low-maintenance composite version, they typically discover an overwhelming amount of information available. Homeowners might find themselves faced with many options and have questions about how to choose the right product. What type of composite decking is right for me? How do I choose from the different types of deck boards? What color combinations are right for my home?

There are quite a few different decking options available, based on individual needs and budgets. Composite decking is available in several different types of boards with varying looks, colors and qualities; therefore, it is important to understand all the alternatives.

Based on all these options, how can consumers decide which is best for their lifestyle? TimberTech, one of the leading manufacturers of composite decking, railing and fencing products, offers a number of tools that help sort through the details of choosing a deck and assist consumers in make educated decisions about their new deck.

At the beginning of the decision-making process, consumers first need to choose the type of board that best fits their lifestyle and tastes. Tools such as the Product Selector guide consumers through a series of step-by-step questions that are used to uncover their needs, habits and deck usage. The results give consumers options of board type and style that are best suited to their needs.

Another tool that is helpful during the planning process is the Deck Designer. By using the Deck Designer, consumers can enter the desired size, shape and color of their dream deck so that they can envision the deck before it is built. When the deck design is complete, users can print a 3-D model of the deck, build a materials list and get installation guidelines and helpful construction tips for their deck.

The newest tool, designed to help consumers decide between the varieties of color combinations available, is TimberTech's Color Visualizer. The Color Visualizer lets consumers choose different home colors and decking color combinations. The colors of the primary decking, accent decking, rails, balusters and posts can all be changed to build a customized look. If consumers are looking for more direction, the Color Visualizer also offers suggestions of the most popular color combinations.

No matter what type of composite decking consumers choose, it is important to understand the different offerings available by taking advantage of these free interactive tools available online at www.timbertech.com.

Selling Your Home In Tough Times

(ARA) - Today's tough economic times mean that home sellers need to do their homework, take a more assertive role in marketing their home and, at times, get creative to help their home stand out from others that are on the market.

Regardless of how tough the times are, the fact remains that a nice home, well maintained, in a desirable neighborhood, and priced right will sell more quickly than a home that hasn't been kept up or hasn't been priced according to what other homes in the neighborhood would sell for. Whether you're selling your home as part of downsizing your lifestyle or you're seeking a larger home for a growing family, the following steps offered by FindLaw.com, one of the nation's leading online sources for real estate law, can pay dividends in helping you achieve a quick sale and a price that reaches your desired goal.

Assemble your team. Most sellers prefer to work with a real estate agent or a lawyer at some point in the process. In fact, in a handful of U.S. states, a lawyer must help finalize the sale.

Real estate agents typically charge a commission, about 6 percent, to be split between your agent and the buyer's agent, if any. Lawyers normally charge by the hour. Despite the costs, experienced, responsible professionals can ultimately save you time, money and aggravation.

Conduct a pre-inspection. Many states require a home inspection report as part of a disclosure form before placing a home on the market. To make sure your home passes the test, hire a third-party home inspector to conduct a pre-inspection of your home to help you make necessary repairs and updates before an official inspection.

Conduct a comp. A "comp" is shorthand among real estate agents for comparing your home to similar types of homes in your area with similar features, such as square footage, number of bedrooms, number of bathrooms, etc. This process will help you determine a price range for your home. To get comps, visit open houses, read classified ads (in print and online), and check out Web sites such as www.realtor.com, by the National Association of Realtors (NAR).

Review actual selling prices. Of course, list prices don't tell you how much houses ultimately sell for - that's the comparable data you really need. In a hot market, houses might go for well over list price, and vice versa. A number of Web sites offer such information, and you may want to carefully watch county Web sites that publish this information for tax purposes.

Price aggressively, but not too aggressively. As the seller, of course you would like to get every nickel out of selling your home. The balancing act is finding the right price where you don't have to cut it multiple times to trigger an offer, or a price that is so low that a potential buyer might think there's something wrong with it.

Go to open houses. Sellers need to understand what other sellers are doing and offering to sell their homes. The best way to do that is to go to as many open houses in your area and take note of who the potential buyers are, their feedback on nearby homes, and what other sellers are offering potential buyers in terms of price and incentives.

Make your home as attractive as possible. Buyers will pay thousands of dollars more for a home that is tastefully decorated and appears in ready-to-move-in condition. The first place to start is to declutter your home. Put away any personal items or items of expression that would detract from a buyer feeling at home. A fresh coat of paint doesn't hurt either.

Fill out the disclosure forms. Some states require sellers to fill out a long form that explicitly asks about the seller's knowledge of various significant or material defects that might be present in the home, according to FindLaw.com. States vary in their requirements. Some states require sellers to disclose water in the basement, leaks in the roof, the use of lead-based paint, or unsafe concentrations of radon gas. Regardless of what your state requires, it's really in the seller's interest to disclose any previous problems to reduce the risk of a lawsuit in the future by a disgruntled buyer.

Advertise on the MLS. If you're working with a real estate agent, the agent should help put the property into the online Multiple Listing Service, and maybe in the classifieds too. If you don't have an agent, you can take the same steps yourself (one Web site, www.iggyhouse.com, allows you to put your house on the MLS for free). Interested buyers can then make an appointment to see the house in person.

Hold an open house. Many home sellers find open houses a useful tool. They're certainly good for bringing in the crowds. In deciding when to hold an open house, look for opportunities when your area attracts a large number of people from surrounding areas, such as a neighborhood or citywide festival or sporting event.

Be prepared to negotiate. Because there are more sellers than buyers in most markets, buyers currently have more leverage in negotiating. Be prepared to respond to a range of concessions, from lower-than-expected offers and requests for the seller to cover the closing costs to decorating allowances and mechanical repairs. On the other hand, as the home seller, you should be prepared to counter by demanding that all serious offers have their financing in place to ensure a smooth sale.

Gas Meter Change Legit?

Q: My elderly neighbor called yesterday and told me a man was at her door saying that he was there to change her gas meter. I've never heard of such a thing, and so I told her to not let him in. Is it normal for the gas company to just show up and change a meter? — Eleanor in Braintree, Mass.

A: Meter maintenance is generally part of a local utility's responsibility, so it's not unheard of for the utility to send employees to read, maintain or replace meters. In fact, the state of Massachusetts mandates that gas meters must be replaced every seven years, so your neighbor's meter may indeed be scheduled for replacement.

However, your neighbor was right to be cautious. If she couldn't see a repair truck or any identifying information from the maintenance person, certainly she should verify that the person really is from the utility company or a contractor in their employment.

Probably the best way to verify this is to call the utility's customer-service line directly. She could do that while the person waited outside, or she could tell the person to come back another day -- which a legitimate utility employee will do politely and without question -- and then call the utility to verify that they are maintaining or replacing meters. The utility may schedule a new time for its maintenance person to return and replace the meter, or it can give her a range of dates when its crew will be in the area. The upside of this is that she can have another person, like yourself or a relative, at the house when the utility employee returns, so she'll be more at ease.

The meter replacement itself is a fast process -- less than 30 minutes, usually -- and the utility also will check to make sure there is no damage or leaks in the lines feeding into the house. It's a valuable service provided as part of your utility bill.

HOME TIP: Know where your gas shutoff is in case of an emergency -- locate the shutoff switch, usually near the meter. If a wrench is needed to turn the switch, tape one right next to the switch so you have instant access.

Send your home-repair and maintenance questions to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Remember, when in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

Simplicity A Must For First-Time Homebuyers

(NAPSA)—Between low interest rates and lower housing costs, this may be a good time to be a first-time homebuyer. In fact, first-time homebuyers now account for 47 percent of all U.S. homes purchased, according to the National Association of Realtors, the highest rate since 1981.

The opportunity for first-time homebuyers, however, is tempered by another side of ownership: making sense of the mortgage paperwork required to buy a home. Just how well homebuyers navigate the paperwork goes a long way to help them understand the financial ramifications before getting the key to the front door.

Bank of America says successful homebuyers are those who know exactly what they're getting into, especially when it comes to their responsibilities in the transaction.

To help homebuyers understand key loan terms, the bank now provides a single-page loan summary in addition to standard mortgage paperwork. The Clarity Commitment(tm) loan summary shows homebuyers in simple language what they will pay each month, tells them their interest rate and explains closing costs. If it is an adjustable rate mortgage (ARM), they will see when the rate will change, the percent the rate could go up and how that could affect the monthly payment. Such transparency seems to strike a chord with would-be homeowners: More than four in five homebuyers surveyed said they want a plain summary of mortgage terms.

Understanding mortgage options and loan choices is a continuous process for homebuyers. The paperwork is just one link in the decision-making chain. Here are suggestions for first-time homebuyers:

- Educate yourself. Free home-buyer education classes may be available. Visit www.bankofamerica.com/neighborhoodlending to find classes convenient for you.
- Review your credit. Lenders want solid credit scores. Review your credit score prior to moving forward with a home purchase.
- Don't buy more home than you can afford. Do the math: Subtract the projected monthly payment, property taxes, insurance and estimated upkeep costs from your monthly income.

THE DREAM of home ownership starts with proper planning and information.

A good target: Spend about one-third of your income on housing.

- Look into down payment assistance. Many housing authorities may contribute toward your home purchase.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday May 13, 2010 at approximately 3:50 a.m., Officers Matthew Hockney A.J. Carthas, were dispatched to the East Squantum street area address on a report of loud music.

Upon arrival, the officers observed that the building had six apartments that share a common foyer and stairwell. They were also aware of the high rate of calls to this building in recent history regarding neighbor problems, loud music, and loud parties.

The officers saw the building's front door open briefly, then saw a male suspect known to them from prior calls there, slam it shut. The suspect then re-opened the door, emitting loud music from within the building.

Officer Hockney asked the male suspect what was going on and why he was playing the music so unreasonably loud this early hour of the morning. The male suspect stated that "those two homos will not leave us alone", referring to the occupants of apartment #3. The officer then asked the male suspect if his girlfriend was home and he said that she was.

Officer Hockney knew there were past incidents of domestic violence and wanted to ensure that she was alright. The male suspect welcomed the officers into his apartment, which was in complete disarray, with trash all over the place, ashtrays overturned and broken glass all over the floor. The officers did not find the girlfriend in the apartment, but as they approached the rear door, they located her in the back yard screaming, "Where's the @$$%^&* chain?" She was immediately warned to lower her voice and come inside to talk.

After numerous advisements, the female came inside and they were told that their music was too loud. The female responded by saying that "They started it - we're going to play our music." When told to keep the music down, the female said that she was going to get a book and go to bed. Once the male suspect and female were calmed, the Officers left the building and walked to their cruisers.

The Officers then saw a different man at the same doorway. All of a sudden, the male suspect came running out of his apartment screaming, "Someone's going to get hurt if the cops get called again you @$$%^&* faggot @$$%^&* @$$%^&*", as he pointed at the man in the doorway. The male suspect continued this verbal tirade, jumping up and down, removing his shirt before he was restrained and escorted back to his apartment by his girlfriend and the officers.

Officer Hockney then interviewed the male at the doorway, asking if in fact he was gay. The male confirmed that he is gay, adding that he was not ashamed to say so. At this point, the officers went to the 30 year old male suspect's apartment and placed him under arrest for a civil rights violation for his threat of bodily harm and intimidation.

Officer Hockney then questioned the victim and his roommate about what occurred prior to the Officer's arrival. Before the victim could respond, the music was turned up so loud downstairs in the male suspect's apartment that the officers could not hear the victim's responses.

Officer Hockney advised the female to lower the music and keep it down. The victim stated that there were numerous disturbances throughout the evening in the suspect's apartment. At one point, the victim said that he thought the male suspect might be hurting his girlfriend, so he opened his door to see what was going on outside. The male suspect then told the victim to "get back in your apartment you @$$%^&* homo."

The victim said that the occupants left the building for a while and it quieted down. At this point, the music in the same apartment was again turned up to the point that no one could hear each other.

Officer Hockney excused himself once again, went downstairs and placed the 35 year old female under arrest for "Disorderly conduct."

Nice Work!

As a side note, Community Police Officers are working with the landlord to start eviction processes.

BRAD CROALL, President of the Ward 2 Civic Association, will be swimming in the annual 1.5-mile "Swim from Alcatraz" on June 6. The fundraising event, held in San Francisco Bay, will help raise monies for a number of the Ward 2 Civic Association/Fore River Clubhouse's annual events, including the Fourth of July Celebration. Croall is pictured here on Wollaston Beach after a cold swim in the waters of Quincy Bay.

Quincy's Brad Croall Swimming For Ward 2 Civic Association/Fore River Clubhouse Escape From Alcatraz

Ward 2 Civic Association President Brad Croall will be looking to escape from the one prison that legend has it no one had ever successfully escaped from. His attempt at what has been called "the impossible" is for a good cause — to raise money for the Ward 2 Civic Association/Fore River Clubhouse.

Croall, along with hundreds of other brave swimmers, will be participating in this year's 1.5-mile "Swim from Alcatraz" on June 6. His goal is to raise funds for upcoming events and activities at the Clubhouse including their annual July 4th Celebration during these trying economic times.

"It is my belief that when you attach a great cause to something like this it can act as a catalyst and make the impossible quickly become possible," said Croall. "I'm grateful for the support from my family and friends, but in the end this is not about me, this is about making sure that the seeds we have planted down at the Clubhouse continue to grow during trying times."

Croall trained for this grueling swim in San Francisco Bay two-fold. An average swimmer, he spent time with staff members from the Quincy Recreation Department at the Lincoln-Hancock Community Pool perfecting his technique; to get ready for the frigid waters of San Francisco Bay, Croall swam off of Wollaston Beach in March and April.

"The venue (SF Bay) offers a challenge and I am up for the uniqueness of that challenge," said Croall speaking about his pre-event routine. "When you go out into the bay in March and April and there is no one there to help you morally through the low-points of a training swim, you quickly come to the conclusion that you have to be a self-motivator to get through this. Quite honestly, it can get lonely out there.

"I do want to thank the Quincy Recreation staff members at the Lincoln-Hancock Community Pool who coached me through technique and helped get me ready for this challenging swim."

Croall is no stranger to endurance events. In 2008, he ran the Boston Marathon, although running a marathon, and swimming, according to Croall is "a totally different animal."

If you would like to contribute to Brad Croall's "Support the Community Center" fundraising goal, make checks payable to the Ward 2 Civic Association, 18 Moore St., Quincy, MA 02169.

SUN SPORTS

Qualified for D1 South Sectional Following 12-4 Win Over Middleboro HS

Presidents Hitting Their Stride At The Right Time

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents are riding a huge wave of momentum as their regular season comes to an end, but just over a month ago, Quincy was faced with the difficult task of turning around its 2010 season. At 4-6 overall on April 30, the Presidents needed to regroup and start winning games or any chance they had for a postseason appearance would have had to wait until next spring.

Fast forward to this week.

The Presidents (10-9 overall, 8-8 in Patriot League), following a 10-4 victory over Middleboro High School (May 19), qualified for the MIAA Division 1 South Sectional tournament. Quincy has caught fire at the right time. The team has gone 5-3 over its last eight games and earned an automatic postseason bid for finishing in second-place in the Patriot League's Fisher Division.

"We are feeling good about how we are playing right now," said QHS head coach Tim Daley on Monday. "The last eight games we have gone 5-3 overall. But what I have really liked about the way we have been playing is that even in those games that we lost, we have been competitive."

"By finishing in second place in our division we earned a spot in the playoffs (teams that play in a division that has six or more teams and finishes in second-place qualify for postseason play). We still have two games left before the pairings are announced early next week so we need to stay focused and try and continue playing good baseball."

So what has changed?

For one, Quincy has continued to receive solid starting pitching from Patriot League All-Star senior Kevin Keith. Keith is 7-1 and has struck out 54 batters in 55 2/3 innings of work; his earned run average (ERA) is 1.87. Keith's consistent pitching allowed the team's offense and defense to find its footing and the results have been solid - winning breeds confidence.

"These kids are excited about how they are playing," added Daley. "Baseball is a team sport but it is also important for a team to have some individual success. We have really started to hit the ball and that makes everyone feel better about what they bring personally to the table."

Leading the way at the plate has been a pair of seniors. Colin McCarthy and Leroy Wallace, team captains along with Keith, are carrying the Presidents offense. McCarthy leads the team with a .446 batting average (26 hits in 56 at-bats) and has 16 RBI. He is also widely considered to be one of the top defensive outfielders in the Patriot League. Wallace is second on the team with a .389 batting average and leads the team with 15 walks. He also has a 2-0 record as the team's primary relief pitcher.

McCarthy and Wallace were named to the Patriot League's All-Star team along with Keith.

Junior hurler Lukas McDonough, a rising pitching star, earned Quincy's ninth win of the spring against Middleboro. McDonough went six innings and allowed two earned runs as the Presidents closed out its Fisher Division schedule with a postseason clinching victory.

Wallace pitched a scoreless seventh inning for Quincy.

McDonough (three hits, four RBI), Wallace (two hits, two runs, two RBI), and junior right-fielder Chris Connolly (three hits) paced Quincy's offensive attack against Middleboro.

"We are guaranteed a spot in the tournament, but we still have two games remaining and the goal is to keep improving," said Daley.

Quincy played a non-league game against Brighton HS on Monday and was scheduled to play Silver Lake HS yesterday (May 26).

Note: Quincy knocked off Brighton HS, 5-2, on Monday evening. Kevin Keith pitched a complete-game five-hitter. Lukas McDonough, Dave Muollo, Chris Connolly (three hits) and Tom Lowry all had RBI doubles during a four-run fourth inning rally.

Charity Tournament Looking For More Golfers Interfaith Social Services Golf Tournament June 7

Interfaith Social Services will hold its Annual Golf Tournament on Monday, June 7 at South Shore Country Club in Hingham – the organization is still actively looking for golfers to participate.

"Traditionally the tournament has brought together golfers from all over New England," said Rick Doane, Interfaith's executive director. "But in this financial climate it has become harder and harder to recruit golfers for the tournament. We hope that this year we will see an outpouring of support from the community because frankly we are serving more people than ever before, and we need the community's support to maintain our programs."

Interfaith Social Services has pulled out all the stops in an effort to attract more golfers. Not only will participants enjoy a round of golf, after the tournament guests will be treated to a BBQ dinner catered by Raffael's, a silent auction and raffle. There will also be a number of giveaways, door prizes and various games including longest drive, closet to the pin and a putting contest.

There is still space for more players and all are welcome. For a registration form call 617-773-6203 or register online at www.interfaithsocialservices.org. The RSVP

America FC Tryouts/Summer Skills Program Information

America FC will begin holding tryouts, beginning next week, for all of their youth soccer teams for the fall and spring soccer seasons. Enrollment is also now open for the club's Summer Skills Clinic.

AFC fielded seven boys and girls "Revolution" teams this past spring ranging in ages from U10 and U14. In the fall, they will only field boys and girls teams from U10 through U14; those younger teams also play during the spring, so they basically play year-round, the high school-age teams are formed to play only during the spring season since those players usually play for their high school teams in the fall.

Any youth player wishing to tryout for an AFC team, whether it plays in spring and fall or just spring, must attend one of the upcoming tryouts/assessments at the Quarry Hills Field:

Under 9, 10, 11: June 2 and June 4 from 6-8 p.m.
Under 12: June 22 and June 24 from 6-8 p.m.

Under 13, 14: June 23 and June 25 from 6-8 p.m.

Under 15, 16, and 18: June 26 from 8:30-10:30 a.m.

The assessments are designed to properly place players on the appropriate age team and to assess their skills. Players wishing to play on an AFC Revolution team must make a minimum commitment to training; placement on some of the more competitive teams can be based primarily on the player's skills. Players that are still developing skills can be placed on a team as long as they are willing to make the commitment to training. AFC's training staff assesses and places players.

AFC Summer Skills Clinic

The AFC Summer Skills Clinic is a six-week soccer skills program. This program runs from July 12 to August 19 every Monday through Thursday from 8:30-10:30 a.m. It is tentatively scheduled to occur at Veterans Memorial Stadium and Varsity Field.

Participants can register for the six-week program on a weekly basis; the full program cost $125 and weekly sessions are $30 per session. Participants are given a free Summer Skills Clinic 2010 training tee with registration; there are also training fee discounts for siblings, groups, teams and registered AFC players.

James Abundis, Director of the AFC Academy; Charles Debaud and Shane Regan, two ex-local high school standouts currently playing at Eastern Nazarene College and Holy Cross, respectively; Brendan McAdams and Victoria Wallace from BC High and QHS, and Andrew Trice, a nationally ranked goalkeeper at ENC, will provide training this summer for AFC.

Junior Erica Brady A Contender In 2-Mile Race Girls Track 'Fine-tuning' For D1 Championship

By JOE REARDON

The defining moment of Erica Brady's season thus far came at a time where the strategy and master plan of the spring starts to take hold on the oval and in the pits.

The best female scholastic distance runner in the city, Brady banged heads with the Whitman-Hanson duo of Emily Regan and freshman phenom Rachel Baker in the 2 mile at Saturday's South Shore Principals Championships. The Quincy/North Quincy junior hung tenaciously with the two Panthers, establishing a wary alliance. Brady clung to the duo just past the mile mark on the hot Norwell High track before claiming the bronze medal.

Brady, who has been fed a steady diet of 40-mile weeks this season under the watchful eye of head coach Geoff Hennessy, clocked a personal best of 12 minutes, .3 seconds behind Regan (11:44.84) and Baker (11:46.09).

"The three of them all worked together pretty well," said Q/NQ coach Geoff Hennessy. "They're pretty similar in ability and stature. She hadn't run any fast races but she didn't have to."

Hennessy figures Brady

is just hitting her stride and she is primed and ready to dip under the 12-minute barrier in Friday's Div. 1 EMass Championships on Somerville's Dilboy Stadium track. The 2-mile field should be a good one with a slew of runners capable of running well below 12 minutes.

Hennessy believes Brady has an outside shot at qualifying for the all-state meet, slated for June 5 at Westfield State.

"There's a lot of factors in the distance races that don't affect the shorter races," said Hennessy.

Q/NQ will be well represented in the enormously competitive Div. 1 meet. Along with Brady, who is making her debut in the spring EMass Championships, they have eight other competitors looking to further improve on their personal best performances.

Si Han Huang could be the most intriguing entrant in Friday's meet. She's concentrating on her spin release in the discus circle after a breakthrough performance in last Saturday's Last Chance Invitational at Notre Dame in Hingham.

Huang entered the meet with a personal best heave of 73 feet. That fell by the wayside quickly as Huang got off a throw of 90-8 to qualify for the Div. 1 meet and take first place.

Amber Jones has been the team's best and most reliable sprinter with a number of standout performances. Jones, who has been running in the mid 26s consistently this season, finished third in the 200-meter dash in the Patriot League Meet and the Last Chance Invitational.

"She's done a couple of hard workouts recently," said Hennessy. "All we're doing this week is fine tuning."

Jones is also a formidable long jumper and will be going up against indoor national triple jump champion Carla Forbes of Newton North. She'll team up with Leslie Campbell, Talia Hampton and Sam McNally for the 4x100 relay.

Briana Mullaney isn't competing Friday but finished her season in style. After finishing a strong sixth at the Patriot League meet she recorded a personal best of 5:56.2 in the Last Chance Qualifier. Danielle Mullaney ripped a 2:34.5 in the 800 and Jessica Elisio also clocked a personal best, sprinting to a 1:11.83 finish in the 400.

Scholarship and Nursing Excellence Award Presented

Presentation of the fourth annual QMC Nurses Memorial Scholarship and the 2010 Excellence in Nursing Award served as the culmination of a weeklong celebration of National Nurses Week (May 6-12) at Quincy Medical Center.

"I have spoken to many patients and family members, as well as your multidisciplinary colleagues, and universally, they talk about the wonderful care you all provide," said Karen Conley, RN, MS, AOCN, NEA-BC, Senior Vice President for Patient Care Services and Chief Nursing Officer, welcoming nurses to the award celebration.

"We all know that patients come to hospitals for expert nursing care and when they come to our organization, they are fortunate to be cared for by such an amazing group of professionals."

Stroke, Osteoporosis Screening Here June 15

The River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., Quincy, will host a Life Line Screening for stroke and osteoporosis Tuesday, June 15 beginning at 9 a.m.

Screenings identify potential cardiovascular conditions such as blocked arteries and irregular heart rhythm, abdominal aortic aneurysms, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which is a strong predictor of heart disease. A bone density screening to assess osteoporosis risk is also offered and is appropriate for both men and women.

Stroke is the third leading cause of death and is a leading cause of permanent disability; 80 percent of stroke victims had no apparent warning signs prior to their stroke.

Preventive ultrasound screenings can help you avoid a stroke.

Screenings are fast, non-invasive, painless, affordable and convenient.

Screening packages start at $139. All five screenings take 60-90 minutes to complete. For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 1-877-237-1287 or visit www.lifelinescreening.com.

Pre-registration is required.

LIGHTS OUT

If all the lights and electrical appliances in one part of your home were to flicker or fail, would you call a plumber? No. Chances are that you would call an electrician, who could check the wiring in an attempt to figure out why the electrical power is not reaching its intended endpoint. An analogous situation exists in the body when nerve energy from the brain, which travels down through the spinal cord and out through various nerve trunks, fails to reach any of the systems and organs that are under its control. Weakened muscles, sluggish gastrointestinal systems, and pain are but a few of the symptoms of restricted nerve flow that falls under the purview of a chiropractor.

Improper motion or position of spinal bones can irritate or choke delicate nerves, interfering with the function of the tissues they control and affecting your health. Chiropractic may very well be the answer. Our experience and expertise in safe and gentle chiropractic care will help you enjoy life to the fullest. Call the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC at 617-472-4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you and your family. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. Our safe and gentle adjusting methods offer you relief from pain as well as restored function and mobility of affected joints. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional chiropractic service.

P.S. When a bundle of nerve fibers exiting between spaces in the vertebrae becomes squeezed by misaligned bones or bulging discs, nerve energy becomes impeded, and the systems and organs the nerve fibers serve function poorly.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

This Memorial Day our American Flag will be flying in memory of all who served in their country's time of need...
"I AM OLD GLORY... For over 200 years I have been the banner of hope and freedom for generation after generation of Americans. Born amid the first flames of America's fight for freedom. I am the symbol of a country that has grown from a little group of thirteen colonies to a nation of fifty sovereign states. Planted firmly on the high pinnacle of American faith. My gently fluttering folds have proved an inspiration to untold millions. They have looked upon me as a symbol of national unity. They have prayed that they and their fellow citizens might continue to enjoy life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, which have been granted to every American as the heritage of free men. So long as men love liberty more than life itself; so long as they treasure the priceless privileges brought with the blood of our forefathers; so long as the principles of truth, justice, and charity for all remain deeply rooted in human hearts, I shall continue to be the enduring banner of the United States of America." ... * Author Unknown

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries self-esteem level is high, as is your impatience to see more action come your way in the workplace. Good news, Lamb: It could start to happen sooner than you think.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Changing things now could upset a lot of people. But if you feel you're acting because you believe it's the right thing to do, others will understand and even come to support you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A change of mind might not necessarily be a change of heart. You still want to go ahead with your plans, but you might see a better way to make them happen. So go for it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An old business dispute could re-emerge and possibly affect upcoming negotiations. Consider opening up the situation to include suggestions from others on both sides of the issue.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some Leos and Leonas might find it somewhat difficult to get their ideas accepted or even considered. But that's only for a while. Things will soon return to the way you like them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The pace seems to be slowing down from the hectic on-the-job run you recently enjoyed. But be assured that you're still in the race to pick up new workplace-related goodies.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Seasonal changes create opportunities for busy Librans. However, be sure to balance your workload with your personal life so that you don't overdo it on one end or the other.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A former critic could make a surprise turnaround and become a supporter. But if your Scorpion sense suspects a questionable motive, who are the rest of us to doubt it?

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Data on a new project seems less than dependable. But it might turn out to be just the opposite. Consult with someone who knows how you might best be able to check it out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Capricorns face many decisions this week, with the Sea Goat's kids rating high on the consideration scale, especially regarding vacations and upcoming school matters.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Showing that you care is what Aquarians do so well. It's your very special skill. And this week, you'll have several chances to show off that gift for a very special person. Good luck.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) That streak of Piscean wariness should serve you well this week should you be among those who come up against a slippery character offering a fishy deal with nothing to back it up.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an artist's sense of how to help others see, as you do, the beautiful things about the world.

Harvest Helpers Launched In Quincy

Keohane Donates Free Plants To Volunteers Who Grow Produce For Local Food Pantry

Interfaith Social Services and Keohane Funeral Home have partnered to launch the first program of its kind in Massachusetts to help feed the hungry.

"Harvest Helpers" appeals to backyard gardeners to plant an extra row of produce which, when harvested, will be donated to the Interfaith Food Pantry in Quincy.

"Last year over 16,000 hungry people came to our food pantry looking for assistance," said Interfaith's Executive Director, Rick Doane. "We distributed over 350,000 pounds of food to impoverished families throughout the South Shore and we rely on support from the community to meet their needs."

"This year, Keohane Funeral Home has stepped up to support our efforts by offering to donate vegetable plants to anyone who agrees to participate in "Harvest Helpers" by setting aside a bit of their garden for this purpose. We hope that this will motivate more people to start a backyard garden for themselves and their needy neighbors."

"This program will allow us to help Interfaith Social Services to not only feed people, but to nourish them with healthy, home-grown produce," added funeral home Co-President John Keohane.

"We will have a vegetable garden at our 785 Hancock St., Quincy location which will be planted and tended by our staff. The produce grown will all be donated to the Interfaith Food Pantry. Some vegetables under consideration include tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, beans, and bush cucumbers."

"To show that people can grow produce almost anywhere we are also planting a garden here at our office near Quincy Center," said Doane "The garden will be tended by volunteers and pantry clients. Clearly, this is an example of helping people help themselves."

"Anyone can take part. All that is necessary is a willingness to take care of the plants all summer and then bring the produce to the Interfaith Food Pantry for distribution," said funeral home Co-President Dennis Keohane.

All in the community are encouraged to become "Harvest Helpers" by planting, harvesting, and donating produce from their backyard gardens. They are asked to register their intent by contacting Rick Doane at 617-773-6203 or emailing rdoane@interfaithsocial-services.org or the funeral home at (617) 773-3551 or info@keohane.com.

Free plants will be available at Interfaith Social Services, 105 Adams St., Quincy, today (Thursday) and Friday, May 28 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. while supplies last.

Keohane Funeral Home will also distribute free plants to "Harvest Helpers" participants from their location at 785 Hancock St. Saturday, May 29th from 1 to 3 p.m.

Interfaith Social Services' mission is to strengthen family life and offer assistance to anyone in need. ISS is a private, non-profit, non-sectarian agency that has been serving the residents of Massachusetts's South Shore since 1947.

Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service is committed to providing the compassionate, comfortable and creative service necessary to provide an environment where healing begins. A family owned firm, it operates locations in Quincy, North Quincy and Hingham.

Joanne Daley Memorial Bench Dedicated At Wollaston School

Quincy from another country and their first visit to the school with their son. Daley realized the boy's first name would more than likely result in teasing from the students. She had a quick remedy for the situation.

"She said, 'We'll call you Tony for now on,' and Tony it was," said Bostrom.

Paul Griffith, a sixth-grade world geography teacher at Central Middle School, remembers Daley's positive attitude and genuine love of teaching.

"She was great," said Griffith. "She was always positive. Joanne always had a smile on her face and that always made you feel so welcomed in her class."

Griffith saw Daley when he was older, substitute teaching at Wollaston Elementary as a college student. Daley was thrilled that Griffith was studying to become a teacher. "She was ecstatic and obviously very proud," he said.

It was her fairness to all the students that Griffith admired the most about Daley. "I found out her husband was a firefighter with my father," he said. "But she treated me just like everyone else."

The large turnout and number of former students didn't surprise Daley's colleague of 16 years, Linda Billikas.

"Joanne touched so many lives," Billikas said. "She loved kids and loved teaching science. She cared about the whole child, not just the subject she was teaching."

"We miss her smiling face. Joanne was always here early and she stayed late."

Billikas, a fifth-grade teacher, said Daley's courage touched the entire faculty. "Even when she was sick, Joanne still worked," Billikas said. "She came to work all the time until she absolutely couldn't."

The final speaker, Paul Daley, Joanne's husband, said he was struck by her beauty the first time he saw her, but that there was so much more to her. "Joanne was not only beautiful on the outside, it went right through," he said.

And Paul was able to relate to his wife's young students. "I felt many times in my life that I was in the fourth grade too," he said with a laugh.

Noise, Quarry Hills, Recycling Bins On Agenda Council Plans June Meetings

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Councillors have scheduled committee meetings on several issues of unfinished business before summer recess.

First up, councillors plan to revisit the noise control amendment filed last year by Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee. This is scheduled for discussion at an Ordinance Committee meeting June 7.

McNamee's constituency includes Marina Bay where the owners of upscale townhouses and condominiums have sought relief from the loud music and merry-making of adjacent nightclubs.

On June 8, the Ordinance Committee will consider establishing regulations and requiring permits for recycling bins, which have multiplied across the city in the past year.

"It's a blight issue," City Council President Kevin Coughlin said of the numerous bins popping up in parking lots and, in some cases, blocking vehicle and pedestrian access.

In a recent discussion, McNamee and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest both charged that some of the bins are painted pink in a deceptive effort aimed at supporters of breast cancer research.

"They are appearing in high traffic sites," said McNamee who urged the council to require permits.

McNamee has also sought an

Memorial Day Message From Keynote Speaker Henry Bradley; 200 Attend Ceremonies Remember Those Who Are 'Called Home From This Life'

By JOE REARDON

Dennis Smith stood motionless, staring down at the decorated plot at the Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The plot, where Smith's uncle John E. Smith was laid to rest, was one of hundreds that had a small American flag waving in the warm, Monday morning breeze.

John Smith, who served in the U.S. Marine Corp during the Korean War and was also a member of the Quincy Police Department, passed away a little less than a year ago on Sept. 15. Dennis' father, Paul, was John's partner on the Quincy Police force.

"My father and him were very close," said Dennis. "We used to go over there as kids."

Earlier in the morning at the Cedar Grove Cemetery in Dorchester, Dennis and his wife Julia, paid their respects to her uncles and cousins who served.

For the Smiths, Memorial Day wasn't about cook-outs and good times in the sunshine; it was about remembering those who gave the ultimate sacrifice to their country.

"All of these people

HENRY 'HANK' BRADLEY, former director of Quincy Veterans' Services and active member of The American Legion, was the keynote speaker at Monday's Memorial Day observance at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

should be remembered every day, not just on Memorial Day," said Julia.

Keynote speaker Henry "Hank" Bradley delivered a powerful speech to the nearly 200 people who gathered for the parade and Memorial Day services.

Bradley, who served in the military for 36 years, gave a brief history of Memorial Day, with its origins in Waterloo, NY, on May 5, 1866, and proclamation by General John A. Logan that "Decoration Day" be observed throughout the country. Interestingly enough, it was observed for the first time on May 30 that year because it was not the anniversary of a battle.

The name "Memorial Day" was first used in 1882 and became common after World War II. Not until 1967 did it become the official name by federal law.

Bradley, speaking from the podium at the World War II memorial, told the crowd that for veterans, Memorial Day is not only the last Monday in May.

"Many Veterans mark Memorial Day several times a year as they remember those they left behind on the field of battle or they try to cope with life long injuries that impair their way of life," Bradley said. "They physically came home to their families after serving many days, weeks, months or years in the front lines and had the misfortune of being with various brothers or sisters in arms and see the horror of them being killed by various means and then to live with those thoughts until they themselves are 'called home' from this life."

The crowd was silent when Bradley told the story of a senior citizen from Quincy who was contacted and told the remains of her cousin, Army PFC Richard H. Loring of the 2d Ft. Sq 52nd Ft. Group had been found. Loring was killed when his airplane slammed into the Corsican mountains on May 10, 1944.

"A man who had led search teams to the site twice in 1944 was again questioned and told the French authorities that he heard the crash as he was farming, sometime between 10 and 11 o'clock," said Bradley. "After the crash he remembered leading a Major and a Captain to the crash site and found four bodies burnt amongst the remains of the plane. These bodies were placed into rock crevices and remnants of unburned mail collected that survived the crash was collected."

DNA was used to identify Loring years later. Finally, on May 10, 2010, "66 years to the day of death,"

Richard H. Loring, who was promoted to Corporal posthumously, was laid to rest in Central Cemetery, in Carver, next to his mother.

Quincy Veteran Council Chaplain John Raeke acknowledged the 100th anniversary of the Boy Scouts during his invocation and pointed out that veterans, who fought to provide the freedoms we have today, are passing away every day.

"We march on with our ranks growing thinner," Raeke said.

Quincy Veterans Council Commander and Parade Marshall Heikki Pakkala said that ceremonies, much like the one held in Mount Wollaston, were being celebrated all over the country.

"Memorial Day means ceremonies in cemeteries all over the country," Pakkala said. "Let us help reconnect the American people with the American soldiers."

Mayor Thomas Koch emphasized how important the holiday is because it celebrates what brings people together, not what divides them. "Today we honor them and pray for their good souls," said Koch.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin said that the gifts of freedom and the right we have as citizens of this country to pursue happiness was achieved by soldiers of valor making the ultimate sacrifice.

"These gifts were earned for us at a terrible price," Coughlin said.

THE TWILIGHT GEMSTONE

Alexandrite, one birthstone for June, is a member of the chrysoberyl family, which contains a range of gem-quality minerals. These gemstones are known for their durability, exceeded in hardness by only diamonds, rubies, and sapphires. Because chrysoberyl is commonly yellow, the prefix "chryso" (the Greek word for "golden") was added to its name to distinguish it from beryl (the mineral family that includes emerald and aquamarine). As far as alexandrite is concerned, this rare form of chrysoberyl displays remarkable optical properties that lead it to change color. In the shorter wavelengths of daylight, it looks green, but in the warmer, longer wavelength of candlelight, it appears brownish-red. Alexandrite has come to be known as "emerald by day, ruby by night."

Are you one of the lucky ones to have a June birthday, the month for the birthstone alexandrite? Then you'll love seeing our beautiful creations showcasing this unusual, changeable gemstone. Quality gemstones of all colors and kinds abound here at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center, a fine place to begin and end your fine jewelry shopping. Professional Building Planned Next To Sons Of Italy

Lodge To Continue Operating At Same Location

By JOE REARDON

The Sons of Italy will remain open when Galvin Development constructs a small professional building for a medical practice after purchasing the iconic building and its adjacent property.

Quincy developer Sean Galvin will be going before the Zoning Board of Appeals June 8 to secure permits for construction on the 2-1/2 acres. The property was purchased for $825,000 on March 18 according to developer Galvin.

"It's going to look excellent," said Dan Grant, chairman of the Sons of Italy board. "It's a really beautiful building they're putting up there. It's (Sons of Italy) going to be there for years, years and years."

Grant said there had been a number of calls from Quincy residents questioning whether or not the building was going to be torn down, and, if so, if it would remain open.

The proposal calls for a 14,000-square-foot, two-story building with 140 parking spaces.

Sons of Italy had been interviewing developers to provide proposals to develop the club land. Galvin is scheduled to go before the zoning board of appeals on June 8 to secure the land.

"We believe our proposal was chosen because it worked best with their desire to stay in their building," Galvin said. "Also, we were able to provide parking for our new office building and overflow parking for the hall which would peak at different times."

If the permits are granted Sons of Italy will buy back the building for a lower price. The ultimate goal of the transaction is for Sons of Italy to get out from under a

Household HazMat, Prescription Drug Drop-Off Day Saturday

The City of Quincy Department of Public Works will combine its bi-annual Household Hazardous Waste Drop-off Day event with its Prescription Drug Drop-off Day Saturday, June 5 at the DPW yard, 55 Sea St.

The event will begin at 8 a.m. and residents are encouraged to arrive early as the line often wraps around Sea St. onto Southern Artery.

Household hazardous waste will be accepted until 10 a.m. and proof of residency is required. Prescription drugs will be accepted until noon and is open to anybody.

The city provides this free service to protect the environment and assist residents in the proper disposal of hazardous waste and prescription drugs. The next drop-off event will be on Oct. 2.

Studies show that children can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the medicine cabinet at home. Drugs such as OxyContin, oxycodone, hydrocodone, morphine, codeine, Percocet, Darvocet, Vicodin and Lortab have all been linked to opiate addiction. Also there is concern about medications in the water supply not being adequately cleared by water treatment plants. Never flush medicine of any type down the toilet or drain.

All pharmaceuticals (prescription and over-the-counter) will be accepted including pills, liquids, capsules, inhalers, patches, sharps (needles) and pet meds. Also drop-off all expired prescription medicines and any non-prescription medicines more than two years old.

Black-out personal information from all prescription bottles. Preserve the part of the label that identifies the type of medication if at all possible. Antibiotics should be disposed of regardless of expiration date.

A police officer and pharmacist will be onsite to answer any questions and accept your unused medication.

Some of the hazardous items eligible for disposal are oil based paints, thinners, strippers, oils and varnishes, household cleaners, including drain and plumb-ing cleaners, automotive fluids, including oil and gasoline, chemical fertilizers and insecticides, polishes, ni-cad and lithium batteries, roofing tar and driveway sealants.

"Of the utmost importance are all mercury containing products such as thermostats, thermometers, fluorescent tubes, CFL (swirly) light bulbs, button batteries and mer-curochrome," said DPW Program Manager John Sullivan.

When gathering products for the drop-off event leave materials in original containers and tighten all caps and lids. Sort and pack items separately in sturdy upright boxes.

Sullivan reminds residents to never mix chemicals. "Pack your car the morning of the event and drive directly to the DPW. Do not smoke while handling hazardous material and do not bring children in the car with you."

Items not accepted at the hazardous materials drop-off day are latex paint, tires, ammunition, fireworks and explosives, commercial/industrial/biological waste, prescription medicine, radioactive waste and smoke detectors.

Memorial Day 2010 – Remembering Our Veterans

State law mandates municipalities place an American flag at the grave of every military veteran for Memorial Day.

But in Quincy, one gets the sense volunteers who take part in this time-honored tradition of flagging the final resting spots of those who served this country in the armed services do it not because they want to, not because they have to.

People from all walks of life – students, veterans, families, city workers and many more – exhibit pride, patriotism and honor flagging the graves which serves as a remembrance and a thank you to those who fought for this country and defended freedom around the world.

Just walk through the veterans section at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The rolling grass hill is the final resting area of some 1,000 veterans. Stop and read the granite markers engraved with names, armed service branch, conflict and years of birth and death. Some of the deceased lived a long life after their military service had ended. Other lives were cut short, paying the supreme sacrifice.

Each life has a story, and loved likely ones left behind.

And each grave has an American-made, 12-18-inch American Flag for Memorial Day.

While Mount Wollaston's Veterans' Section is the most visible in the city at the corner of Sea Street and Southern Artery, the city maintains seven other cemeteries, including two small private burial grounds. In all, there are some 7,000 veterans buried within 100 total acres of cemetery space. And each spring, every single of one of those graves is flagged.

Besides the veterans section, there are another 1,000 veterans buried at Mount Wollaston. In Pine Hill Cemetery, there are 1,000 veterans buried. There are also veterans buried at Hancock Cemetery (adjacent to City Hall), National Sailors' Home Cemetery on Fenno Street, Snug Harbor Sailors' Cemetery on Palmer Street, Hall Cemetery as well as St. Mary's Cemetery in West Quincy and Christ Church on School Street next to St. John's Church.

The wars these veterans served in span the conflicts from the Revolutionary War to the Persian Gulf (which began in 1990 and includes service in Iraq and Afghanistan.)

Besides the veterans' graves, the city also flags 75 memorial squares throughout the city as well as several monuments each and every Memorial Day. Also playing a key role in caring for the cemeteries is the Quincy Cemetery Department that works diligently maintaining the hallowed grounds.

We recently sat down with Tom Stansbury, the director of Quincy Veterans' Services, to get his thoughts on Memorial Day. As red, white and blue American flags fluttered gently at Mount Wollaston Cemetery against a deep blue sky, Stansbury explained the flagging effort while offering his thoughts on what Memorial Day is all about.

Question: Give us an overview of the effort that goes into flagging all the veterans' graves in Quincy.

Answer: We're in the Veterans Section at Mount Wollaston Cemetery and this section alone has 1,000 graves. It's a lot of effort from a lot of people. We have veterans and members of my family out doing this. We have approximately 100 acres cemetery area that has to be flagged.

TOM STANSBURY, director of Quincy Veterans' Services, flags the grave of George F. Bryan at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Bryan was the first Quincy soldier killed in World War I. He was killed in action Dec 6, 1917 when the USS Jacob Jones was torpedoed at sea.

We put out 7,000 flags. I've been doing this for the past 15 years. I first started out doing this myself when I took over for the former graves registration officer. Then I started to work with some of the different groups, in particular the R.O.T.C. from Quincy High School. One of their projects is to flag the Mount Wollaston Cemetery. We put 7,000 flags out and we have to take 7,000 flags in so they're there to help with the 1,000 flags here in Mount Wollaston.

Question: How long does it take you to put a flag next to each grave?

Answer: When I first did it, when I started doing Mount Wollaston, it probably took overall about a month of walking around because this is an old cemetery and you have walk around each (head) stone. You just can't walk up and down rows because some of these graves have more than one family in it and by law in Massachusetts, every veterans' grave will be marked with an American flag for Memorial Day. That means that every veteran who's buried in that grave has their own flag. Some people say 'why does that person have three or four flags?' It's because there's three or four different veterans in that grave.

When I have the ROTC (students) come out, it takes us about a half a day for them to do it. Which is great because instead of a month of time spent it gets done in a couple of hours.

Q: How many total volunteers help flag the graves?

A: This year we had about 20 ROTC students, along with my eight or nine members of my family and veterans.

Q: How long will the flags stay up?

A: I like to leave them up as long as I possibly can. But because of the weather and we're right near the water and salt air we try for at least September. Sometimes we'll try to stretch it out to October but I will not leave a flag if it becomes tattered or torn. I will remove the flag. What we have been doing – we can't do the whole cemetery – but for Veterans Day we will replace all of the flags in the Veterans section both in Pine Hill Cemetery and Mount Wollaston. Those flags will remain just for the weekend following Veterans Day. It's the winter weather – the flags when they get wet they start to wear.

Q: Is there a law requiring the veterans' graves be flagged for Veterans Day?

A: No. The law only states they have to be flagged for Memorial Day. About 12 years ago I asked my former boss – Henry Bradley – why don't you put flags out for Veterans' Day because it looks so nice so we did it. It's become a ritual – I do it every year and I will continue to do it myself and hopefully the next person will do the same.

Q: Is it getting more difficult to flag the graves every year?

A: Yes. There are more veterans dying. Nationally we're losing 1,000 World War II veterans a day. The Korean War veterans are now in their late 70s – early 80s and Vietnam veterans are in their 60s. In Quincy, I would guess that we've buried about 150 veterans since last Memorial Day.

Q: One of those Quincy veterans who is not with us this year is Olin Taylor who was a big part of the flagging graves effort and taking care of the holders that the flags are in.

A: Yes he was. If you look at a grave sometimes you can't recognize whether there is a veteran buried there or not. But if you see a flag holder, you know there's a veteran buried there. Olin Taylor, who was a World War II veteran,

BOB FLAHERTY, a Marine Corps veteran of the Vietnam War and a member of the Caddy Detachment in Quincy, places an American flag at the grave of a veteran in Mount Wollaston Cemetery. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth and worked for Polaroid he was a machinist. He repaired thousands and thousands – perhaps as many as 4,000 or 5,000 – markers over the years. That saved the city thousands of dollars in not having to replace them. Olin took pride in his repair work. He buffed, painted and bronzed them up just so that they looked good before they go back out again. Olin also collected donations so that he could get parts to repair them. He's also go to metal dealers and get metal. He'd cut the metal and thread it. He did all the work to make the holders look like they were new.

Q: Do you have a message for the public as far as what they can do to help your efforts?

A: We can always use volunteers. A lady from Weymouth came up today to help flag the Veterans section at Mount Wollaston. It is a tremendous task and it makes people feel good to know they're remembering. We're trying to take Veterans Day and Memorial Day back. They changed Veterans Day and Memorial Day from the holiday that it was and made it a three-day weekend. We were able to get Veterans Day back on Nov. 11 because of the importance of the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month when (World War I) ended.

Now we'd like to take Memorial Day back and put it back on May 30th and not make it a three-day weekend. Or at least give us the morning. We're only asking for half a day. Come out to the services. Say thanks to the veteran and thanks to the veterans now. We're at war now. We've got guys and ladies serving now that need to know their country is supporting them and to walk down the parade route and see more people along the parade route makes the veterans feel good. People hold the signs say thanks to the veterans. Just give us a couple of hours. We all want to have to have a cookout too. We're no different. But we're going to give up our morning to remember the veterans and we'll always have a parade forever and ever. Even if we have to march just a few of us down the street – that will never happen – I know it won't. We'd never not have a parade in some form.

Q: What thoughts run through your mind when you're flagging the graves?

A: My father was a veteran, my brother was a veteran. I grew up with veterans in the family. I'm in a veterans' organization. When people call up and say 'thank you for putting a flag at my grave.' Unfortunately, we do miss a grave occasionally and we've had flags stolen. If someone calls up to report a missing flag, we get up here as soon as we can and get a flag on it. Hopefully we get them all done by Memorial Day; if not, we get it done by the next day. It is important to have a flag next to a grave. People really appreciate what we do by putting the flags out. This is America and this is the American flag and this says 'Thank You, Veteran.'

POWER BOAT SHOW
BOSTON, 1908

"L'NOME" - BUILT AT BAKER YACHT BASIN, QUINCY POINT, MASS.

THIS 1908 postcard is an advertising card used by the Baker Yacht Basin, Inc. that was located at the end of Washington Court on the Town River in Quincy Point. Lorenzo Baker owned most of the waterfront along here with several piers and railways on the river south of the Mound Street beach. The company operated there for over 30 years until it was sold in the 1930's. The boat shown on this postcard was only one of many styles and sizes of boats that they built. The Unome and its sister the Unome II was 51 feet overall, 45 feet at the waterline with a 10-foot beam. The draught was 2 1/2 feet. These boats were planked with hard pine and finished inside and out with mahogany that was beautifully varnished. Note the open deck with chair and wheel for the captain. A 30-horsepower 4-cycle engine provided the power for this boat. Today, a cruiser yacht of this size would likely have two engines in the 4-500 horsepower range. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

2 Squantum Abutters Support Wind Turbine

We are twenty year residents of Squantum and write in support of the proposed wind turbine on Moon Island.

Both our previous Squantum home on Bayside Road and our current one on Bay Street look directly out to Moon Island. We awoke sadly one morning in the 1990s to see a huge part of the island clear cut to make way for the expanded Boston police firing range, and we certainly hear Moon Island gun-related noise regularly.

We suppose we would be considered "abutters" to this project. It is our understanding that the wind turbine would be about a mile from our home, a distance which we have been told is further than many turbines are from their abutters.

We moved to Squantum to be by the water, and near Boston. We have direct waterfront property and are proud to live here. We would support a wind turbine on Moon Island and the collaboration that it represents on the part of Boston and Quincy on the development of an affordable, zero-emission energy source.

We look forward to hearing more details about the proposed project and to making sure that Quincy gets a fair deal. Generating electricity from safe and renewable sources rather than from fossil fuels is so important for our future. Using Moon Island as a wind power location makes good sense.

To us, the benefits to Quincy (and to others seeking similar projects in their communities) definitely outweigh possible concerns about visual impact and noise.

Right now, we can see the two Hull turbines out our windows. While those are further away than one on Moon Island would be, we do not anticipate being bothered by one on Moon Island. Knowing that Quincy and Boston are developing a cleaner source of energy is far more important.

Wind Energy Is Clean, Affordable, Infinite

As a member of Quincy's Environmental Network ("QEN") and co-chair to its Climate Action Subcommittee, I am proud to support the cities of Boston and Quincy in their proposed wind turbine at Moon Island.

Mayors Koch and Menino should be commended for taking action in pursuing this clean, affordable, and infinite source of energy for the Commonwealth.

The team of presenters did not shy away from any of the concerns brought up at Monday's public meeting in Squantum, Quincy's closest neighborhood to the Island.

Larry Chretien from Mass Energy, Chris Walker from Mayor Koch's office, Jim Hunt - Boston's Chief of Environmental and Energy Services, and the Engineering firm of Sampson and Weston committed to further addressing all of these concerns in future public meetings.

During Monday's (May 24th) presentation:

- They helped us understand how the height of the turbines affect the economics of the project - smaller turbines just don't give us the payback to make them worthwhile.

- They acknowledged the concerns about FAA flight routes, and assured residents that Moon Island is not in any flight path. They explained that Quincy residents are further protected by our city Wind Ordinance, which requires a Special Permit and FAA studies. Even so, the team offered to engage the FAA with residents on this matter.

- They presented visual simulations of the turbine from Marina Bay, various Squantum neighborhood views, Wollaston Beach, and Adams Shore. Most of these communities are familiar with these views as many already have views of Hull's turbines.

- Since Moon Island is a mile away from any residence, "Flicker" effects at sunrise and concerns about Noise would certainly be minimal.

Equally important, with this project both cities will also enjoy a new found revenue stream from selling this clean energy to NStar. While negotiations continue, the QEN is hopeful that Quincy's share will be used to offset other municipal energy costs through energy efficiency or renewable energy projects. Re-investing this money into projects that lower our cities energy costs will directly benefit all Quincy taxpayers in the long run.

We have all heard enough about climate change.

We are aware of the explosions and lives lost in coal mines.

We continue to see the photos of the ongoing environmental disaster in the Gulf.

By now, we understand that clean energy is an essential component in helping to solve our energy and climate crisis.

Now is the time for us to take action!

Thank you, Mayor Menino and Mayor Koch, for helping us take our first steps to a Cleaner Energy future!

Council Expected To Act On School Loan

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council was expected to act on a five million dollar loan order submitted by Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa for the city's proposed vocational-technical high school.

Mayor Della Chiesa said that if the order were passed he would immediately apply to the State Emergency Finance Board to borrow up to five million dollars outside the city's debt limit to hasten construction.

The school, in effect, will cost the city only half of its final cost because state aid will be about two million dollars and federal aid, if forthcoming, will be nearly $400,000 the mayor said. The federal aid depends upon ultimate passage of a bill now in Congress, he said.

10,000 VIEW QUINCY'S MEMORIAL DAY PARADE

An estimated 10,000 persons including hundreds of children with the national colors witnessed the annual Memorial Day parade, Quincy's flag-bedecked parade.

The marchers, some 3,000 strong, paraded over the mile and one-half route, starting from the Mayor Charles A. Ross Parkingway at School Street and terminating at the site of the World War II Podium at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, under the auspices of the Quincy Veterans Council.

The Memorial Day orator was the Rt. Rev. Arthur J. Riley, pastor of Our Lady of Good Counsel Parish, Merrymount.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Lawrence S. Butler, Commander, Quincy Veterans Council, also spoke.

New Theatre School To Open At Eastern Nazarene College

The South Shore School of Theatre is set to open this July on the campus of Eastern Nazarene College for all children interested in learning theatrical skills and spending their summer in the spotlight.

Programs available for students ages 7-19 years.

Founded by Boston theatre professional and Eastern Nazarene College alumna ('02), Tara Brooke Watkins, The South Shore School of Theatre is built upon the belief that all kids should learn an array of theatre skills and all should have their moment in the spotlight. "It's about building character — on and off stage," said Watkins.

Watkins has taught students for over 15 years, run a Boston family theatre and school, and serves on the board of the Consortium for Boston Area Children's Theatres (CBACT).

Joining Watkins will be children's teacher Debra Mein and New York children's director Kevin P. Joyce.

The South Shore School of Theatre launches its summer program this July with classes and theatrical productions for various age groups.

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs and a musical medley of Disney showstoppers called Disney Extravaganza is set for 7-10 year olds to learn both straight acting and musical performance.

The fun 50s musical Grease invites middle school students ages 11-14 to participate and the edgy Sweeney Todd promises to be a challenging experience for teenagers.

Internships are available for students 12-18 to provide the opportunity to learn stage management, costumes design, prop construction, set construction, theatre education, and more.

In addition to performing full musical productions, The South Shore School of Theatre also offers classes in the evenings for students.

For more information on programming, call 617-773-3631.

Quincy Summer Singers Seek New Members

Members of the public are invited to explore the joy of choral singing by joining the Quincy Summer Singers, a multicultural, multi-generational community choir that will kick off its second season in June.

This summer, the group will perform a blend of gospel songs, spirituals, folk music, Broadway tunes, and choral classics, with a public concert planned for early August in Quincy. Last summer, the 55-member group's inaugural concert attracted an audience of hundreds, including Mayor Koch, and was featured on Quincy Access Television.

"The Quincy Summer Singers is a fun and relaxing way to learn about music, develop your voice and experience the fun of singing in a friendly environment," said Director Del Case, a Quincy conductor and music professor who also directs the Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union. "All adults and high school students are welcome to join the Quincy Summer Singers, regardless of experience or music-reading ability."

Auditions are not required. The group will rehearse on Thursday evenings, 7 to 9 p.m. in the Edith Cove Fine Arts Center at Eastern Nazarene College starting June 10.

Interested members are welcome to come to the first rehearsal to try it out with no obligation.

Ann Marie's Date, Pecan Bread

One of the old standbys through the years is date and nut bread. I think it is one of those desserts that most everyone loves. And with a dab of cream cheese, what could be better?

There are so many different ways to bake them, and one of them was made by my daughter Ann Marie at a dinner she had last week. She used delicious fresh dates and pecans instead of walnuts for a great consistency and taste.

DATE, PECAN NUT BREAD

1 cups fresh dates (chopped)
1 ½ boiling water
½ stick butter
1 ½ cups sugar

1 egg
2-¾ cup flour
1-teaspoon salt
1-teaspoon baking soda
1 cup coarsely chopped nuts

Pour the boiling water over the dates. Let stand until cooled. In a bowl, beat the egg and add the melted butter and sugar. Mix well and add the cooled date juice. Add the flour, baking soda and the salt. Now add the dates and the nuts and mix until well blended. Place in slightly greased baking dish.

Bake for 1-½ hours in a slow oven 275-300.

Serve with cream cheese of whipped cream (a favorite)

School Deficit And Beacon Hill

Once again we are facing the difficult task of closing a significant deficit in the school budget.

I would like to thank the teachers, voting to deferral their 4% raise. As a parent I appreciate what they did. I know my children benefit from the teachers they have in their classrooms.

I imagine it was not an easy task. It demonstrates a willingness to work with the city; it has saved many teachers' jobs and will make the classrooms better than they would have been. The deferral will save the school budget over 2 million dollars. That still leaves a large gap of 7 million dollars to make up.

The School Committee still faces the difficult choice-es of cuts and additional fees to impose. That burden will be borne by the parents, children, teachers and other school employees.

What is troubling is the deferral is only a temporary fix. The deferral has not completely solved the problems. It has bought us time to try to address and fix the problems.

We need to invest that time to address the cause of the problems. If we don't we will have to face the same problem again in 6 months or next year. I strongly feel much of the problem is with Beacon Hill. We are facing cuts in Local Aid and Chapter 70 funding. Taxes have been raised by Beacon Hill but funding to cities and education has been cut. That is not right. Beacon Hill does not have their priorities straight. Beacon Hill is not working for us. We need to let Beacon Hill know that they need to change their spending priorities and adequately fund local aid and education.

We need to send a message to Beacon Hill that local aid and educational funding should be their priority. This is something parents, teachers and all people should do. If we don't, we will be facing the same problems again in the future.

Happy Retirement, Fr. James McGowan

Recently we learned that Father James McGowan would not be returning to Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy after he fully recovers from his present illness. He has been granted senior priest status, essentially retiring from active ministry.

As directors of the Confirmation program, we have benefited from the generous support of our pastor, Father James O'Brien, and the unflinching enthusiasm of Father James McGowan. In addition to his other duties, Father McGowan taught the faith to high school students in the program, and was truly interested in each of them. Not just Confirmation, but every ministry at Sacred Heart enjoyed his complete support.

Unfortunately, because of the circumstances of his illness, he was not able to receive the proper send-off with the well wishes of parishioners. However, we're sure he knows from the many cards he has received, that his wisdom and humor were greatly appreciated.

Father McGowan, best wishes on your retirement, but your many friends in North Quincy will miss you.

Cheever Wasn't Expelled

In your article "Quincy Celebrity Claims are Famous," May 20, you state John Cheever was expelled from Thayer Academy. He was not expelled, but told that he must raise his grades if he were ever to graduate.

Instead, he took off. The first result was the beautifully written story "Expelled." The story includes unflattering caricatures of some teachers, and when the public believed it to be true, the smoking story evolved and the boy let that stand as true.

Headmaster Southworth did not make any statement to deny the story; recognized Cheever's gift as a writer and did not want to say anything that might interfere with his career. And Cheever had a hard time distinguishing fact and fiction, but in later years he admitted that the smoking story was fiction.

But the public continues to believe it!

59th Annual Parade Saturday, June 12

Quirk Sponsoring Flag Day Fireworks

Mayor Thomas P. Koch announces Daniel Quirk, owner of Quirk Auto Dealers, will sponsor the City of Quincy's Flag Day fireworks for the second year in a row.

Quirk is contributing $12,500.00 covering the entire 25-minute display that will be launched by Atlas Pyrotechnics of Jaffrey, New Hampshire at approximately 9:15 p.m. on Saturday, June 12th.

"We are very lucky in Quincy to have so many business partners willing to give back to the community, and there is no better example than Dan Quirk," said Mayor Koch. "We are truly grateful to him once again for such a substantial contribution that will allow us to continue this wonderful tradition."

In addition, Mayor Koch also announced that Keohane Funeral Home, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Eastern Bank, the Quincy Credit Union and the Quincy Partnership have committed a combined additional $12,500 to sponsor the bands and specialty units participating in the parade.

"Quincy is truly a community in every sense of the word, and the businesses that time and again step up to help us continue this wonderful event are a testament to that fact," Koch said.

This year marks the 59th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration, the longest-running Flag Day parade in the nation. The parade will step-off from Coddington Street onto Hancock Street at 7 p.m. and make its approximate 1.5 mile march through the city, turning onto Merrymount Parkway and disbanding at Pageant Field.

Parade participants include a variety of marching bands and drum & bugle corps such as the Boston Crusaders, The Defenders, The Spartans, the Waltham American Legion Band, St. Alfio's Marching Band, The Greater Boston Firefighters Pipes and Drums, Local 103 IBEW Pipes and Drums, St. Kevin's Senior Drum & Bugle Corps, and the Quincy/North Quincy combined High School Band.

The parade roster also boasts color and honor guards including the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, Morrisette American Legion Post 294, the American Belles, antique fire engines from Bare Cove Museum, the South Shore Corvette Club, members of the colonial Massachusetts 9th Regiment, Sons of the American Revolution, the National Park Service, patriotic floats, and the perennial highlight, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters, representing youth organizations throughout the city.

Chronicles The Journals Of The First Student Killed At Columbine High School

'Rachel's Challenge': A Sad Yet Inspiring Documentary

By JOE REARDON

By her own admission, Nicole Peterson isn't one to get overly emotional during sad movies or documentaries.

But the 17-year-old Quincy High junior had tears in her eyes watching a montage of Rachel Scott as a toddler and a young, wide-eyed girl in "Rachel's Challenge" presented recently in the school auditorium.

The sad, but inspiring documentary, chronicles the journals of Scott, the first person killed at Columbine High School on April 20, 1999 in the worst school shooting in U.S. history. She was shot while eating lunch outside as shooters Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold entered the school on their bloody rampage.

"They (teachers) gave us an overall idea of what to expect a couple of weeks ago," said Peterson. "It was very moving and you could tell it made an impact on a lot of people."

"I'm not one to cry, but I got teary."

The 17-year-old Scott was both a dreamer and poet whose writings spoke of making the world a better place one kind gesture at a time. She was adored by family, friends and teachers alike, and had kind words and a quick smile for those less fortunate than herself who were struggling to fit in.

"People will never know how far a little kindness will reach," she wrote in one of her six journals.

In her prose, Rachel spoke of five challenges for people to live by. Rachel's challenges included eliminating prejudice, daring to dream and dream big, choosing positive influences in life and that little acts of kindness make a huge difference in people's lives. Rachel believed everyone should approach four or five people they treasure and tell him or her how much love they have for them.

Derek Kilgore, a friend of Rachel's brother, Craig, hosted the presentation, one of 90 he does in the course of a year. He said there are 30 other hosts who go around the country to put Rachel's ideas and dreams into schools. More than 1,200 schools and countless students learn of Rachel during the school year.

RACHEL SCOTT, a beloved student at Columbine High School, was the first person killed in the worst school shooting in U.S. history.

"I go to sleep each night knowing I've helped change people's lives," said Kilgore. "It's very quiet and attentive. It's somber but very inspiring."

"I always understand that being compassionate is important. I have proof in my own eyes that being kind makes a difference. I am who I am too because of being connected with this story."

One tragic bit of irony came in the form of a bullet that went through Rachel and one of the journals she had with her when she was shot. The bullet passed through the notebook and resembled an exclamation mark at the end of Scott's notation "I won't be labeled as average!"

Kilgore said Rachel always made it a point to befriend the new kid at school, disabled students and those who were picked on or put down.

One story illustrating Rachel's kindness was when she introduced herself to a new girl at school, Amber, during lunch. She asked Amber to come sit with her and her friends. Amber, feeling shy, politely declined so Rachel and her friends moved to Amber's table, immediately making her feel welcome. The girl later said that Rachel's gesture turned what was one of the worst days in her life into one of her best.

And when two students on the football team bullied a special needs student, Pint-sized Rachel got between the hulking football players and other student telling them they would have to get through her if they were going to pick on the student. Flustered and confused, the bullies simply walked away.

All the while, though, as she was writing positive, inspirational thoughts in her journal, Rachel believed she wouldn't live a long life. Just weeks before her death, she wrote that it would be her last year alive. Rachel was confident, however, that she would leave a lasting impact on people after she was gone.

Her funeral, which was televised by CNN, drew the largest audience in the networks history. Celebrities from various fields were so touched by Rachel's amazing story that they began to speak on her behalf, spreading her message of love and friendship to the masses. Weightlifter Shane Hamman, NFL quarterbacks Cody Hodges and Tony Romo, actor Chuck Norris and music legend Elton John are just a few of the celebrities who spoke of Rachel's message.

The similarities between Rachel and Ann Frank, one of the people she most admired, have been well chronicled. Frank, who hid out from the Nazis in an attic with her family for two years during World War II, chronicled her experience in journals before being captured and ultimately killed in a concentration camp.

Both Frank and Rachel's killers were influenced by Adolf Hitler. The Columbine massacre took place on Hitler's birthday. Both Harris and Klebold had swastika tattoos.

The spirit, though, of Rachel and Frank's writings went on living after their deaths. Both were dreamers and believed in the power of kindness.

Granite City Pack & Ship is located inside the newly expanded Granite City Self-Storage on Old Colony Avenue. While originally founded as a convenience to storage customers, the Pack & Ship operation has grown to become Greater Quincy's one-stop shipping center. We specialize in shipping with UPS, FedEx and USPS.

Granite City Pack & Ship is a full service packaging, shipping and receiving center. Our friendly and knowledgeable staff is here to help you with all of your shipping needs, from small overnight packages to large multi-packaged ground shipments.

Manager David Streng notes that many of his regular customers operate at-home or neighborhood businesses. "It is so convenient for the small business person to have all of these services at one location," says Streng. "They can have their outgoing parcels packed and shipped. We also receive their deliveries, so they are not tied down waiting for a package to arrive."

Granite City offers a wide variety of boxes and other packing materials. You can purchase the materials and pack your items yourself, or just bring in the items to be shipped and let our friendly and courteous staff do the work for you. We can provide you with the most cost-effective way of getting your shipment delivered on the day you request.

Streng notes that an increasingly popular use of shipping services is the air traveler who doesn't want to be bogged down with luggage going through security lines at the airport. "We had many snowbirds shipping their suitcases down to Florida," says Streng. "And some ship them back to us, so we can hold them until they return." Our ample off-street parking makes it easy for customers to get their goods to us and we do the rest.

We also offer mailbox rentals for those who need a secure and convenient place to receive mail.

Lament New Library, Tree Policies

Councillors Question Police Plan For Harbormaster

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Councillors challenged Chief Paul Keenan's plan for the city's harbormaster during last week's Finance Committee meeting, suggesting the savings might just be penny-wise and pound-foolish.

In addition, councillors offered their regrets to the Library Director Anne McLaughlin whose department budget was cut nine percent.

Councillors, also, questioned the elimination of new tree planting by the Park Department.

During the meeting, Police Chief Paul Keenan described cuts to his department which include not only dropping traffic supervisors, but also, instituting as policy of no promotions and no new hires.

In addition, Chief Keenan outlined his plan for the Marine Unit which will take over the duties of the harbormaster.

Under Keenan's budget, the $31,405 allocation for the harbormaster and 12 harbor volunteers has been totally cut. Chief Keenan will take the role of Quincy harbormaster and the Marine Unit, according to the chief, will cover the duties of the department.

"These volunteers have played a critical role," said Councillor Joseph Finn. "I think it's a mistake."

Under the original plan, the harbormaster was paid $15,000 and the volunteers $500 each for expenses, such as gasoline. The balance of the account was designated for repairs and improvements.

Gutro questioned how four to five police officers could do the work of 13 people on 13 boats. That work includes collecting excise taxes and assigning moorings.

At the same meeting, councillors praised

McLaughlin and her staff for the city's outstanding library department which will operate with a nine percent budget cut next year and no Sunday hours.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee noted that the budget is going down while library use is increasing and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci decried the loss of Sunday hours, noting that working persons, such as he is, can only get to the library on weekends.

Several councillors also feared that city's plan to end tree planting would adversely impact the environment and property values.

Kristen Powers, Executive Director of the Park and Forestry Department, said the department is looking to businesses and grants for new trees in the future.

CITY COUNCIL UPDATES

Chief Keenan Sends BJs Review To District Attorney

Police Chief Paul Keenan told councillors last week that his officers have reviewed the records regarding the changes in the building and landscaping of the new BJ's Warehouse at Crown Colony and turned the information over to the district attorney's office.

Councillors sought a review of the project April 20 after determining that the developers had not adhered to plans discussed at council or Planning Board meetings.

The wholesale retailer currently has a temporary occupancy permit contingent on their improving the aesthetics of the exterior of the building and landscaping which lies at the entrance to Crown Colony Park.

However, councillors voted 5-4 to seek a criminal investigation by the police, the district attorney and the attorney general of changes in the building plans which were executed by Coastal Partners, developers based in Beverly Farms and headed by co-partner Michael DiGuiseppe.

BJ's currently holds a 20-year lease on the building and property owned and built by Coast Partners.

Prior to the April vote, opponents of the criminal inquiry said there were enough mistakes on the city's side while proponents suggested deliberate malfeasance.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi framed the motion which was supported by Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3; Councillors Joseph Finn, Margaret Laforest, Ward 1; and Brian Palmucci, Ward 4.

Palmucci Closes Inquiry In Food Stand Award

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said last week that he was satisfied that the Park Department followed all the necessary procedures in awarding the Quarry Hills Concession Stand bid.

The concession stand serves players and fans during athletic events at the Quarry Hills fields.

For the past three years, Quincy Youth Baseball (QYB) has operated the stand with proceeds supporting the group's athletes. However, the Park and Recreation Board voted in February to issue a Request for Proposals and, subsequently, awarded the Quarry Hills Concession Stands to Slap Shot Snack Bar which did not open the stand until April 24.

QYB officials and supporters protested the change, stating that the concession stand revenues were essential to the program.

However, Palmucci, an attorney, said May 25 that he reviewed all relevant items and does not plan any further investigation.

"I had some procedural questions about the process by which it was put out to bid," said Palmucci who sought information on 14 issues from Kristen powers, Executive Director of the Park Department.

Palmucci spoke at the May 25 Environmental and Public Health Committee meeting.

Observers included Jay Stearns, Connie Driscoll, Joe Brill, and Jack Nigren.

Mosquito Spraying Underway

Early morning application of the pesticide Anvil for the control of nuisance and/or disease-carrying adult mosquitoes began last week and will continue weather permitting throughout the summer months until Sept. 30, the Quincy Health Department announces.

Applications in Quincy will be made Thursday mornings, weather permitting.

Not all of areas of the city will be entirely targeted on a given date. Attempts will be made to treat as large an area as is deemed necessary and as weather permits.

The fogging applications will occur between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m., only if mosquito populations warrant an application, health officials said.

If inclement weather occurs (i.e. high winds, rain or low temperatures) or equipment fails, the application will be added to the next scheduled day.

Anvil is applied in ultra low volume sprayer at the rate of approximately one half ounce per acre of finished spray. Anvil is a combination of two ingredients, Sumithrin and Piperonyl Butoxide. Sumithrin is a synthetic pyrethroid which imitates the natural pesticides found in chrysanthemums. Sumithrin breaks down rapidly in the environment and is expected to pose little risk to humans when used in low concentrations for mosquito control, according to the EPA.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Boating And Water Safety

There have been too many losses on the water this year. I typically casually monitor their occurrence where I grew up so intimate with boating while realizing how unforgiving the water can be. It's too easy to take it for granted without fully embracing precaution.

Although somewhat out of the realm of fire prevention and fire safety, 27 miles of coastline along Quincy and our concern for public safety compel me to take this opportunity to encourage residents to boat responsibly and respect the water overall.

While I defer to the expertise of our the Quincy Police Department Marine Units, this column affords me the opportunity to pass along some written suggestions pertaining to water and boat safety for our residents.

The statistics below, compiled by the U. S. Coast Guard from 2006 accident reports indicate some of the shortfalls of human behavior contributing to boating and loss on the water, while they are opportunities for us to examine safety concerns and learn from them.

In one year alone, 90% of drowning victims were not wearing life jackets. Alcohol was the leading contributing factor in approximately one-fifth of all boating fatalities. About 70% of all boating fatalities occurred on boats where the operator had not received boating safety instruction. The most reported type of accident was a collision with another vessel. Capsizing and falls overboard are the most reported types of fatal accidents and account for 59% of all boating fatalities.

Make certain you carry appropriate Personal Flotation Devices for all aboard. Children under the age 12 are required to wear PFD's at all times while on deck. Coast Guard fire extinguishers are required on boats where a fire hazard can exist. All boats are required to have 3 flares. An emergency radio is preferred while boaters should monitor Channel 16 and familiarize themselves with distress call procedures. Sound producing devices are required to signal a boaters position during limited visibility along with a bailing device should a vessel take on water.

Never boat while under the influence of alcohol; impaired boating is extremely hazardous as the statistics indicate. Get a vessel safety check annually while in doing so; any unsafe condition may be proactively brought to your attention and addressed. And lastly, take the time and enroll in a boating safety class, they are offered by US Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Mass. Environmental Police, to mention only two. Education is power, and in this instance knowledge of boating, navigation and waterway safety can become the foundation for a lifetime of family boating fun. It has for me.

And lastly, should you witness an individual struggling in the water, common safety policy suggests, reach, throw or row. Often times would be rescuers become victims themselves, part of the problem. To avoid becoming part of that problem, extend a pole or rope to a drowning victim, throw a flotation device or other buoyant objects toward the victim or row out to the victim if a boat is available. Each situation dictates its own solution; think and respond properly while not reacting irrationally.

Have a safe and fun summer!

CASTING CALL

If your broken foot requires a cast, how is it made? A cast is a supportive, solid bandage that encompasses the extremity. Plaster and fiberglass are the two most common materials used to create casts. Casts made of plaster are most often used when repositioning the bone is necessary. Plaster can be molded to the individual and will hold the bone in the proper position while healing. Unfortunately, plaster casts are heavy and bulky. They must stay dry or the shape will become distorted and negatively affect the proper healing process. Fiberglass is generally used when the broken bone is not out of position or healing is already in progress. Fiberglass casts are lighter and sturdier, and require less care.

Podiatrists are specially trained to care for foot fractures, including providing the casts that help broken bones heal correctly. In addition to being skilled at making a diagnosis and establishing an appropriate treatment plan, we strive to prepare you for a return to activity. At our state-of-the-art footcare facilities, we also offer relief from the painful condition of hyperpronation through Hy-ProCure™, an ankle stabilizing procedure that requires no casting and utilizes a titanium implant to eliminate the discomfort caused by excessive motion of the foot and ankle. Located at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, office hours also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. You can reach us at 781-966-3668.

Coughlin Receives Seven Seals Award On 60th Armed Services Day

The Massachusetts Committee of the Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR), an agency of the United States Department of Defense, presented Quincy City Council President Kevin Coughlin with the Seven Seals Award during an awards dinner held at the Hanscom Air Force Base Minuteman Officer's Club on the 60th anniversary of Armed Services Day.

The award, depicting the heraldry seals of the seven military services, is one of the highest civilian awards and is given at the discretion of the ESGR chairman to recognize the efforts by a citizen, business, or organization, whose supportive actions have benefitted all of the Reserve Components in a significant manner.

Recipients of this award do not necessarily employ Reservists, but have demonstrated outstanding support, commitment, and extreme patriotism to the United States military.

In presenting the award the ESGR Committee wrote that "Councillor Coughlin is highly supportive of the Guard & Reserve recognizing and including them in the recent inauguration ceremony and recently taking his personal time to visit Massachusetts Army National Guard troops who were training at Ft. Sill, OK, spearheading the Quincy City Council signing of a Statement of Support and then drafting and securing passage of an official resolution honoring ESGR and supporting USERRA.

"He has become a member of two National Guard Family Readiness Groups fundraising to provide the groups financial support, sponsored yellow ribbon events for two local National Guard Units, and proposed and wrote legislation that provides a property tax break to members of the Guard & Reserve retroactive to 2001. MA Governor Deval Patrick signed this legislation recently at the historic chambers of the

In accepting the award Councillor Coughlin highlighted "the profound service and sacrifice of all our members of the U.S. Armed Forces that sustains us as a free society" and underscored "our mission at home to support those in harms way and their families back home."

The National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR) is a Department of Defense agency established in 1972. The mission of ESGR is to gain and maintain employer support for Guard and Reserve service by recognizing outstanding support, increasing awareness of the USERRA law of 1994 and resolving conflicts through mediation. The MA Committee has more than 40 volunteers dedicated to helping every "Citizen Soldier."

As the 1.3 million members of the National Guard and Reserve continue to perform an increasing number of unique missions that require extraordinary actions on the part of everyday citizens, ESGR will continue to be the informational agency for the employers of citizen warriors.

Oversight Committee review of payments due the city from Quarry Hills LLC which operates under a 50-year lease of the Granite Links Golf Course.

The review was scheduled this week but McNamee, chairman of the committee, postponed the review for future discussion.

City officials hired the accounting firm of Di Pesa to review the terms of the Quarry Hills LLC contract and payments to the city for calendar year 2008.

In a letter dated May 3, Dolly DiPesa, CPA, outlined the accountants' review of 2008 payments and found approximately $45,000 due the city for that year.

DiPesa also recorded Quarry Hills' claim of a $7,759 overcharge.

To avoid similar issues in the future, DiPesa recommended that the city revisit the formula for rent calculation and such items as commission expenses.

The accountants' report did not cover any calculations for 2009 and DiPesa stated in a Jan. 15 letter that this was not an audit. "We were not engaged to, and did not, conduct an examination, the objective of which would be the expression of an opinion on compliance."

In discussing his desire for a review earlier this year, McNamee said, "It seems to me as if we need to be a little more zealous in determining if the city is getting (its) fair share."

Budget Review Draws Critics, Revenue Tips

ideas for new revenues and new approaches to the over $7 million dollars in overdue taxes as well as collections of parking fines and new fees.

Resident Kevin Mahoney presented a list of citizen ideas generated from the public through his Save Our Schools- Save Our City website.

These ranged from advertising and fund-raising events for schools to an emphasis on grants, trash fees, and comp time to save or increase municipal funds.

Following the public hearing, Councillor Joseph Finn told the dozen observers that the council has limited powers over the school department budget.

In fact, the council can only cut the bottom line on the school budget and has no power over the school department's allocation of funds. The council cannot add funds to any budget.

While City Councillors and the School Committee must act on the current figures, final figures from the state budget have still not been reconciled on Beacon Hill and Congress is, also, considering federal funds for schoolteachers.

Public Hearing

During the public hearing, Former City Council President Jay Davis told his former colleagues that residents could easily swing a $75 a year tax hike by cutting back on minor expenses.

Davis criticized Mayor Thomas Koch for school budget problems before boosting his proposal for higher taxes with a 'show and tell' of props distributed to council members.

As examples, Davis claimed that seven pizzas a year or two cups of coffee a week or reduced bottled water, scratch tickets or even a cigar a week would cover the slight increase in taxes.

"We taxpayers are not so cold. We would support the children," said Lori Hagborg of Whitwell St. while Tracey Christello asked councillors to "Dig deep and help us."

Two school committee members, Anne Mahoney whose husband Kevin spoke earlier, and Barbara Isola also addressed the committee.

"Please don't gut our budget," said Isola while Mahoney suggested the council not accept the mayor's budget. "You can send it back for re-analysis."

Kevin Mahoney presented nine ideas for school revenues or savings ranging from fund-raising events (road races, family bike day) to the selling of tourist items (hats, pencils, cups, postcards).

In addition, he suggested a review of the school system's grade configuration and more bulk purchasing.

As for municipal finances, Mahoney outlined 19 proposals from residents ranging from a freeze on overtime by using comp time, grant writers, fining utility companies for double poles, a trash fee system, downtown food festivals to boost local restaurants and a consistent property tax policy.

Committee Review

The Finance Committee headed by Chairman John Keenan then conducted a marathon examination of specific accounts as part of their annual review.

Nearly all the of 28 city-side 2011 accounts were outlined by Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance and the department heads.

With most budgets already stripped by as much as 9%, councillors focused on new funds from interest, savings on bank fees and mailing, and legal settlements.

Councillors proposed savings, such as bulk buying and online payments, and then targeted the city's collection system and the millions of dollars in unpaid automobile fines dating back ten, fifteen years as well as the $7.9 million on just under 300 properties in overdue tax liens.

Of those properties, four properties have overdue taxes since the 1950's and a half dozen are due before 1990. Taxes are overdue for five years on at least ninety additional properties.

However, more than a third of the tax liens are more recent and date from 2008. In addition, many of the property owners owe more money than the actual value of the property, thus reducing the potential city income from a sale.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said those tax lien lists should be distributed to the Building and Planning Departments as he recently "looked at a plan for a development and did not realize they owed money (on the property)."

Treasurer Deborah Coughlin said the city will auction off one of the properties, then described the lengthy and costly legal process for the city involved in taking possession.

(The treasurer and City Council President Kevin Coughlin are not related.)

Councillor Coughlin said the City of Weymouth recently sold some of their overdue accounts to a private collector, saving legal fees for the city and garnering over "$600,000 in a very short time."

"It is a very aggressive stance," explained Treasurer Coughlin who noted that companies have approached her department to offer collection services. "Shame is a very effective tool," said Ward 5 Doug Gutro who suggested publicizing the names of tax deadbeats.

As for parking fines, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi asked how one person could have 50 unpaid tickets and still drive.

Councillors then discussed the millions due the city for decades-old fines and possible $2 million that will be written off.

"Why do we continue to put a ticket on the car? The owner is just thumbing his nose," said Raymondi.

"We don't have an ordinance to boot cars," said Puleo while Treasurer Coughlin said the fine situation has improved since 2006 when the city connected with the Registry of Motor Vehicles which will not renew registrations of car reported with unpaid fines.

In addition, Treasurer Coughlin said parking officers now use hand-held devices which scan the vehicles' annual sticker, reducing errors and speeding up the report process.

Gutro suggested that city officials check with Cambridge and Somerville officials who have adopted a successful vendor approach.

In a review of the Legal Department budget, Raymondi asked for a list of all cases resolved by the department and payments, stating that he fears that, in at least one case, "the amount of money (assigned) to resolve the case is less than the attorney's fee."

The Finance Committee reviewed the remaining budget accounts Wednesday after The Quincy Sun deadline and the school budget and sewer and water enterprise funds on June 14.

The City Council is expected to vote on the budget at the June 14 meeting with a second meeting scheduled June 15 if needed.

Under state statutes, the council must vote a budget by June 30.

Welch Healthcare And National Development Business, Community Leaders Celebrate Opening Of New Luxury Senior Living Community

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group President Richard Welch was recently joined by Quincy business and community leaders and staff from the rehabilitation & skilled nursing center and assisted living community at Hancock Park for the official ribbon cutting of the company's newest project.

Village at Proprietors Green, a 149-unit senior living community developed by Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, in partnership with Newton-based National Development Group, celebrated the opening in Marshfield on May 4, followed by tours and a gala reception. In an economic climate that stalled countless projects, Village at Proprietors Green was completed on schedule, and is opening with 40 percent of its independent apartment homes reserved.

"Village at Proprietors Green offers South Shore families the flexibility of a rental community that offers intriguing activities, an on-site theater and educational opportunities, overlooking a village green and soon-to-be-opened Proprietors marketplace shops and restaurants as well as the peace of mind of the continuum of care," says Welch. He adds, "We are pleased that so many of our long-time Quincy friends and supporters gathered to help us mark the occasion." Additionally the community offers assisted living and assisted living/memory care neighborhoods.

Over the past few weeks, residents have begun moving into the rental community that features luxury apartments combined with services and amenities which support a "new generation of senior living."

Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, now in its fourth generation of family leadership, is a nationally recognized industry leader which operates and owns four assisted living communities, seven rehabilitation and nursing centers, an independent senior living community, three adult day health centers; and a home health care company, in addition to the newly opened Village at Proprietors Green. National Development, one of the most experienced senior housing firms in Massachusetts, has completed 20 independent and assisted living residential developments, in addition to a wide range of commercial and residential projects. Welch and National Development have successfully partnered on two previous senior housing projects: Allerton House in Weymouth and Allerton House in Hingham.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

Repairing a vehicle can be very expensive, so it is often best to have a comprehensive insurance policy rather than only the basic policy. Please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600 to schedule a consultation. One of our agents can review your options and recommend the best policy for your driving patterns and financial assets. We are located at 151 Hancock Street.

Smarter Choice! Smarter Move!
No one can blame consumers for trying to get the best deal on their auto insurance. However, not purchasing the most suitable coverage can be far more expensive following a loss. In addition to finding the best deal they can, vehicle owners are also strongly advised to consider more extensive protection than what is provided by a basic policy. For instance, a state may require motorists to carry only $5,000 to compensate for damages they may cause to the property of another party. However, the cost of repairing or replacing an automobile can exceed this amount quite easily, which may leave the insured liable for paying any remaining balance due the other party. Purchasing higher limits would avert this problem.

NOTE: Coverage for accidents involving uninsured and underinsured motorists is also recommended because it provides excellent protection at minimal cost

KEVIN MULVEY, Chairman of the Board of Directors, greets the guests.

SISTER LORRAINE BERNIER, Director of Maria Droste Services, welcomes the attendees.

The Maria Droste Fashion Event this season took its cue from the business pages and not from style and fashion sections. This year's event, however, lost no fashion impact but successfully addressed how the current serious economic conditions have challenged a lady's fashion choices. Frugal Fashionistas, a fashion show was held Friday, May 7, at Lantana's in Randolph. It was a very special evening with cocktails, dinner, music, silent auction and a great deal of 'frugal' chic on the program. Chairpersons for this year's event were Edward and Joan Keohane of Quincy.

This year was the fifth time this annual gala occasion has been dedicated and named in the honor of Darlene Sheehan. For the past four years, this event has been a very successful collaboration; combining the Maria Droste Fundraising Committee and 'Friends of Darlene Sheehan' in a partnership that has proven to be a winning team.

Friends of Darlene's, as well as several local trend setters, both male and female, took to the runway to model two fantastic collections of spring ensembles. To help the ladies in attendance make frugal wardrobe choices, they were given a serious look at spring ensembles from Glory Daze, a popular consignment shop in Milton. Additionally, Hajjar's, a Quincy haberdashery with a long-standing reputation, presented a collection of men's clothing from a less frugal man's point of view. As always, the male models stole the show and were the stars of the evening.

The Maria Droste Services is a very caring counseling agency that is staffed and operated by the sisters of the Good Shepherd and several clinically-trained professionals who serve as volunteers. Since opening in Quincy Center in 1992, as a community counseling service, the agency has provided critical support to individuals, couples and family groups in need of compassionate un-

Going Green In Style

(NAPSA)-You don't have to sacrifice style to be eco-conscious at home. You can use these five simple tips from Linda Woodrum, designer of the HGTV Green Home 2010, to make your living environment more energy efficient, visually appealing and environmentally friendly:

1. Welcome home-Create a welcoming entrance to your home by making sure your exterior relates to the interior. For example, antique wicker chairs painted red and placed on the front porch can introduce visitors to the color scheme inside. And the unexpected color demonstrates that you can be green without being boring.

2. Reduce, reuse, recycle-Unique pieces, such as a dining room table made from reclaimed wood and a light fixture made from a repurposed basket, make a room richer and more interesting. The HGTV Green Home could inspire you to use everyday items in unexpected and amazing ways.

Green decorating is about using antiques, repurposed items and salvaged materials.

3. Create a mood in your master bedroom-Capture all that's good about a place or location through your choice of color and decor but keep it clean and natural with organic and recycled materials. A red four-post bed made of reclaimed wood in the home's master bedroom evokes a vintage Northeastern cottage yet is reinterpreted in a fun, contemporary color.

4. Saturate with one primary color-It's important to pick a color palette and stay true to it. In the HGTV Green Home, red is used prominently. It's easy to re-create the look with low-VOC paint and environmentally friendly fabrics.

5. Use durable materials in high-traffic areas-Your front and back entrances are subject to a lot of wear and tear. A durable tile floor in the mud/laundry room and powder room is a green option that's easy to maintain yet appealing in a New England-style home.

Real Estate

Selling A House? Tips For Attracting Buyers With Good Scents

(ARA) - Can a potential buyer be compelled to make a big purchase if a pleasant background fragrance appeals to their senses and breaks down their defenses? Real estate agents and home sellers these days are widely banking on it.

Ambient fragancing started to trickle into the real estate market years ago, with savvy real estate agents baking cookies or cinnamon rolls in the homes they were showing to create a comforting, deliciously scented atmosphere meant to entice buyers. If you're trying to sell a home in today's challenging real estate market, you may have tried this technique. However, with the excess of available homes, you may need to think a bit more creatively to make your home stand out.

The essential oils that are used in the practice of aromatherapy offer a more practical and potent way to use scent marketing to move buyers to feel good about a property. Using even tiny amounts of familiar, tempting aromas like cinnamon, clove, vanilla and orange, can fill a whole house with pleasant ambient fragrance. An added bonus is that essential oils are all-natural and distilled from plants. They are less likely to illicit the kind of adverse reactions that harsh synthetic fragrances do.

Aromatherapy expert Tom Havran has several ideas to help you sell your home. He crafts blends for Aura Cacia, purveyor of 100 percent pure and natural essential oils and aromatherapy products. A passionate expert on the properties of essential oils, he has been crafting essential oil blends for 15 years. Learn more at www.auracacia.com.

His first suggestion is an easy and sleek way to create a warm, comforting atmosphere that can help put potential property buyers at ease.

Vanilla amber aroma crystals. Havran recommends using vanilla essential oil blended with jojoba for this first recipe.

Ingredients:

1 cup coarse-grained, chunky sea salt

1 teaspoon jojoba or grapeseed oil (just enough to make the salts glisten and gleam)

25 drops vanilla precious essential oil

10 drops lavender essential oil

10 drops sweet orange essential oil

Directions: Mix salt and oils, pour into a decorative dish or bowl and set out on a table. Placing the crystals in a warm sunny window or near a heat register will help diffuse the delicious aroma throughout the room. Stir in additional essential oils to boost the scent as needed.

Fresh flowers and bergamot vacuum powder. This light and transparent floral/citrus scent will create a cheerful, friendly and clean atmosphere to impress visitors. Since you need to vacuum before each property showing anyway, this is a great way to turn the chore into a smart real estate marketing move.

Ingredients:

1 cup baking soda

35 drops bergamot orange essential oil

5 drops ylang ylang or neroli (orange flower) essential oil

Directions: Mix baking soda and essential oils in a canister and lightly sprinkle over carpets, then vacuum.

Because essential oils are so concentrated, a little goes a long way. An initial investment in a small 1/2 ounce bottle of oil will provide you with enough applications to conduct dozens of open houses.

Using essential oils to craft your own bit of psychological scent marketing might provide a good return on a small investment. Aromatherapy may give you that much-needed unique and surprising edge on the competition.

THIS IS A HAMMER By Samantha Mazzotta House Painting

Q: My brother and I share ownership of a house and have decided to save money by painting the outside of it ourselves. We're having a disagreement about how much paint we'll need. I say we should buy more than we think we need, but he doesn't want leftover paint lying around after the job. What's your recommendation? — Clark F., Griffin, Ga.

A: You should purchase more paint for the job than you think you'll need — there's always the unexpected element in home improvement to consider — but your brother also has a good point about too much leftover paint lying around. Though you'll probably want to keep a can for later touchups after the job, having several cans left is a waste of money — you either have to give them away or dispose of them through your city's hazardous materials center, which in some cities costs an additional fee.

Luckily, math can fix this problem. Here's how to estimate paint for an exterior job:

- Measure the square footage of the exterior walls (length x height) and the square footage of the soffit panels (the horizontal panels underneath the roof eaves). Add those together.

- Add a 15 percent "waste" allowance (this is where your extra paint comes in).

- Next, measure the square footage of the doors and windows.

- Subtract the doors/windows measurement from the total.

Next, head to the paint store to pick your color and type of paint. Bring the measurements with you. Once you've decided what kind of paint you need, you'll need to figure out how much you need. Here's the next part of the equation:

- Check the paint coverage rate of the type of paint you selected. (This is located on the label, or the paint-store sales rep can find it out for you.)

- Divide the total square footage of your exterior by the paint coverage rate.

And there you have it: The total number of gallons you need for the job, plus a little extra.

HOMETIP: Oil-based or latex paint? In the past, one couldn't be painted over the other, but many latex paints today adhere well to oil-based paint. Ask the salesperson at your local paint store for the best type of paint for the job.

Send your home-repair and maintenance questions to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Remember, when in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

Financial Tips For Home Improvements

(NAPSA) - There's no place like home, especially when it comes to making improvements.

According to a survey by Wells Fargo & Company in early 2010, the length of time that U.S. homeowners plan to stay in their house is now up to 16 years. That length of time has been increasing by an additional year every year since 2007, which may explain why "upgrading and remodeling" is now the top priority for homeowners.

Home improvements can enhance the way your home looks and make it more comfortable, but this year, some improvements to increase energy efficiency may also earn you a tax credit.

For example, you may receive a tax credit for insulation, replacement windows, certain high-efficiency heating and cooling equipment and low-water-usage landscaping.

Here are a few improvements cited by GreenandSave.com that can help you lower energy costs:

- Replacing windows can reduce your energy bill up to 15 percent.

- Sealing ducts and adding insulation to prevent heat loss can make a big difference, since 50 percent of the energy a single-family house consumes goes toward heating and cooling.

- Exchanging an old furnace and thermostat for a high-efficiency one can save as much as $300 a year.

Learn more about green remodeling and other improvements that can add value to your home at wellsfargo.com/homeimprovement.

Using Home Equity

Many homeowners use their home equity to pay for large projects and improvements. Home equity financing typically has lower interest rates than many other forms of unsecured credit and potentially includes benefits such as tax-deductible interest. (Check with your tax adviser.) Keep in mind that with this type of credit, your home serves as security for repayment.

Cool New Way To Save Money And Still Be Comfortable

(NAPSA) - Imagine being able to save money, reduce your taxes and feel better at home. Now there's a cool way to make this happen with the new breed of evaporative coolers (ultracoolers). For those who live in hot and dry climates, these evaporative coolers work by combining two stages of cooling to provide the coldest air possible. The first stage pre-cools the air without adding any humidity. The second stage completes the cooling by optimizing the humidity in the air. Since the air supplied is colder than other evaporative coolers, it takes less air and energy to cool your home.

How To Do It

The ultracoolers provide an automatic and maintenance-free operation throughout the cooling season. The thermostatically controlled unit lets you "set it and forget it." One such "ultracooler" is the OASys by Speakman Company.

Why Not Save Money?

A Job Well Done

On Monday, May 17, at approximately 12:05 p.m., Officers Michael Powers and Paul Jackson were dispatched to a West Quincy address for a "suicidal party." Dispatch stated that the man in question was cooperative, based on information coming from two counselors on scene.

Upon arrival, the Officers were greeted by the two counselors who work at a Boston suicide hotline. They stated that the man was intoxicated, but cooperative and was requesting to go to the hospital. Officer Powers confirmed this and Fallon Ambulance arrived. The man stated that he was depressed because no one in his family contacted him anymore. He voluntarily got into the ambulance, sat on the stretcher and was strapped in by the EMTs. With the man in good hands, Officer Powers radioed to dispatch that he was clearing and Officer Jackson was not needed at the call.

At 12:20 p.m., both officers were dispatched back to the same location because the man escaped from the ambulance and was now chasing the EMTs around the street, threatening them with a knife. The Officers arrived within seconds and found the EMTs now across the street from the ambulance, along with the two counselors. The man/suspect was across the street leaning on a stone wall. In his hand was a large knife with a seven inch blade.

Verbal commands were issued to the suspect to drop the knife, but he was now extremely aggravated and kept yelling back to the Officers to "@#%&^&* shoot me." He added that he no longer wanted to live and wanted the Officers to kill him. This type of behavior/incident is referred to as "Suicide by Cop" when a person takes actions that force the Officers to protect themselves or others by shooting him.

At this point, the suspect picked up a slab of broken concrete from the wall he was leaning on and walked out into the middle of the street in the direction of Officer Jackson. The officers once again commanded the suspect to stop and drop all weapons, but he continued to rant and rave as he approached the officers. Officer Jackson shot a burst of pepper spray in the direction of the suspect, which stunned him into dropping the concrete slab. The suspect ran off up the street, up a driveway to the back of a house and then into an apartment via the sliding door, with the officers giving chase while ordering the suspect to drop the knife and stop resisting.

Officer Jackson was able to get off one more solid burst of his pepper spray before the suspect slammed shut the sliding glass door. The suspect fled into the apartment and the Officers lost sight of him, so Officer Jackson remained out back while Officer Powers headed to the front of the apartment to prevent escape. At this point, Officer Jackson broadcast over his radio that the suspect was now back at the door and was going to exit. Officer Powers joined Officer Jackson at the door as the suspect opened the slider, threw the knife on the ground in front of Officer Jackson, then exited the apartment.

Officer Michael Brandolini arrived on scene and it took all three Officers to take the suspect to the ground and then handcuff him. The suspect was complaining that he could not see because of the pepper spray. The suspect was brought to the front of the house and placed on the steps where he was eventually treated by the same EMTs. Officer Jackson then interviewed the EMTs and the two counselors as to what occurred when the Officers left the scene initially. Once the suspect was strapped to the stretcher and he was being loaded into the ambulance, he was told he was going to the Quincy Medical Center.

The suspect said he wanted to go to the VA hospital and was told he had to go to Quincy Medical first. The suspect became enraged and struggled to get out of the stretcher restraints that were on him. Once out of restraints, the suspect ran into the house and all four followed him inside trying to get him back in the ambulance. The suspect grabbed a knife off of the counter and stated he wanted to kill himself, then chased all four back out side to the street where he continued to threaten to hurt them and himself. Throughout the entire time at the scene, there were numerous neighbors out in the street who had exited their houses to see what was going on. "911" calls were made for help.

The suspect, a 54 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Assault with a Dangerous Weapon, a Knife (6 counts), Disorderly Person and Knowingly Resisting Arrest.

Nice Work!

Senate Adopts Morrissey Amendment Protecting Victims From Sexually Dangerous Persons

State Sen. Michael Morrissey has won key approval for legislation that will help keep dangerous sex offenders off the streets by giving District Attorneys greater discretion when prosecuting sex crimes.

Morrissey, joined by several colleagues including State Senator Brian Joyce (D-Milton), attached the legislation as an amendment to the Senate budget.

The key language in the amendment will allow prosecutors to civilly commit sexually dangerous persons. The measure is supported by a number of District Attorneys across Massachusetts, including Middlesex County District Attorney Gerry Leone, who has also filed similar legislation.

"The budget process is the quickest way to move forward on this critical piece of crime fighting legislation to protect our families and community from sexual predators," Morrissey said.

"Prosecutors have the option of petitioning the Courts to civilly commit a sex offender if they pose a danger to reoffend upon release."

Prior to release of the individual, a District Attorney may seek a hearing to determine whether the person should be civilly committed from a day to life as a sexually dangerous person who is likely to commit another sex offense due to an active mental condition.

The current statute allows the sex offender to avoid a trial by jury and have their case heard by a judge at the initial commitment trial. The prosecutor has no say and must move forward based on the choice of the sex offender. The change being proposed would allow the prosecutor to ask for a trial by jury.

"What could be fairer and more reasonable than allowing members of the community, in which the individual may reside, to listen to all of the facts and circumstances to make a determination on whether the sex offender poses a danger to the community?" asked Morrissey.

"The jurors would still hear all of the evidence from both sides, including expert testimony from psychologists concerning the individual's propensities to commit additional sex crimes and make their own determination. This levels the playing field for prosecutors and gives them the same ability to request a trial by jury," Morrissey added.

When someone is determined to be a sexually dangerous person they are confined to the Massachusetts Treatment Center for treatment, care, and rehabilitation. Sexually dangerous persons have a right to petition for release and have a new trial on an annual basis. Unlike the process at the initial commitment stage, under current state law the Commonwealth has a right to request a trial by jury at these annual trials for recommitment.

In a high profile case earlier this year, David Falvell, a level 3 sex offender was arrested in Boston after attempting to rape a woman in a bathroom at Massachusetts General Hospital. Prosecutors from the Bristol County District Attorney's Office had moved to have Flavell civilly committed as a sexually dangerous person in 2005, but after a trial before a Judge he was found not sexually dangerous. That same Judge reached a similar conclusion in the case of level 3 sex offender Corey Saunders. After his jury waived trial, Saunders was released and went on to lure a 6-year-old boy away from his mother at a public library and rape him. Saunders is currently serving a life sentence for that crime.

"Right now sex offenders have the sole power to decide whether their trial will be before a judge or a jury, with no input from the prosecutor - and I think that is wrong. This simple change will allow prosecutors to have a say in whether members of our community or a single judge will decide who is and who isn't sexually dangerous. This is a significant tool, that has been missing for too long, for prosecutors to use in their fight to keep sexual predators off of our streets," Morrissey said.

"It's important that we continue to give prosecutors all the tools they need," said Senator Joyce. The Senate members expressed a hope that House members would support the proposal and include it within the Final Budget that is expected to be sent to the Governor later this month.

NAGE/IPBO/SEIU Local 5000 Endorses Keating For Congress

Calling Bill Keating the best candidate to create good paying jobs and keep Massachusetts' families safe, the National Association of Government Employees, International Brotherhood of Police Officers, and SEIU Local 5000 has endorsed Keating for Congress in the 10th District Democratic primary.

NAGE/IPBO/SEIU Local 5000 represents 22,000 members in Massachusetts and an additional 30,000 federal, municipal, EMS, and public safety members nationwide.

"I'm honored to have the endorsement of working families and public safety officers who work hard to keep our communities vibrant, strong and safe. If elected to Congress, I will fight for Massachusetts' families by make it easier for businesses to create jobs and keep our families safe and secure," Keating said.

NAGE National President David J. Holway said, "Working families in Massachusetts can find no better champion than Bill Keating. He knows and understands the issues that matter most to all of us. Furthermore, there's no time to learn on this job, and Bill Keating will be ready to go from day one."

"The job as District Attorney has given Bill a unique view into the needs of our families, children, and communities. Bill has seen the consequences families often face when someone loses their job, and the challenges local communities are facing due to the tough economic environment - something that is often lost on Washington today."

Keenan Supports Proposed Pension Reforms

State Senate John F. Keenan, a Democratic candidate for State Senate, announces he supports the slate of pension reforms contained within a Municipal Relief Bill.

"Too many people are able to game the system, at the expense of taxpayers and those who work hard and play by the rules, and it must stop," said Keenan, a Quincy city councilor at-large. "It was unfortunate that the House did not include these changes in its version of the bill, and the Senate should be credited for its willingness to attack this problem."

The proposed reforms include placing a cap on six-figure pensions, ending the ability for public employees who are "fired" or "laid-off" to collect enhanced pensions, making it more difficult for connected public employees to pad their pensions through late-career job switches.

Keenan, as the Executive Director of the Norfolk County retirement system, is in charge of administering the pension rules set by the state Legislature. His experience in that position has helped him understand where the weaknesses in the system are, and what can be done to make it more fair and sustainable for both public employees and taxpayers. A pension reform package passed by the Legislature last year was a good start that picked off some low-hanging fruit, but won't provide much for long-term savings, he said.

"What I see is a system that is full of loopholes that allow a privileged few to benefit," Keenan said.

"The pension system is there to provide a modest annuity for those who dedicated their professional lives to public service, not to make people rich. We have to take the politics out of the system."

28th Annual Quincy Senior Olympic Games A Success With Over 150 Participants

Once again, the Quincy Recreation Department's Annual Senior Olympic Games was an unqualified success. This year's ten-day event, the 28th annual, saw an increase in both participants and medal winners.

Congratulations to everyone that took part.

During this year's Senior Olympics, over 150 persons, between the ages of 55-96, were enrolled in the games. The participants competed in five-year age groups with featured events such as the half-mile, one-mile, and three-mile walks; the one-mile run, an eight-ball tournament, darts, bowling, bocce, swimming, basketball free throw, horseshoes, shot put, standing long jump, javelin, softball throw, golf and putting.

There was also the yearly volleyball match between the Senior Olympians and the Mayor's "Celebrity" Team; the Olympians defeated the "Celebrity" team by a match score of two games-to-one.

The Quincy Recreation Department, along with the Mayor's Office, and the Department of Elder Services, organized the Senior Olympic Games.

One highlight, of many during the ten-day competition, was the Sportsmanship Luncheon hosted by the River Bay Club. The featured speaker at the luncheon was 75-year old Don Murray, a longtime participant and supporter of the Quincy Senior Olympic Games. Murray, who has run 26 marathons all over the world, is a retired Boston Police Officer.

He spoke of his experiences as he pursued opportunities to race, to walk, and to run for over 50 years. He encouraged each participant to "just keep moving" as the best advice for continuing a healthy lifestyle.

Also at the luncheon, Mayor Thomas Koch addressed the Olympians and congratulated them on their participation in the games and their choice for an active and healthy lifestyle.

At the end of the Games, an Awards Night was held. Council on Aging Director Thomas Clasby presented Geraldine Dussault, Executive Director of the River Bay Club, with a plaque of appreciation of the River Bay Club's support of the Games.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch also presented an award to the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club for sponsoring the bocce tournament.

Bay State Community Services Director Ken Tarebelli was also recognized as the principal sponsor for the Games and it was noted that without their generosity the Games would not have been possible; awards were also presented to O'Lindy's and to Elizabeth Campbell, Executive Director of QATV.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch, Helen Murphy of the Mayor's Office, Barry Welch and Michelle Hanly of the QRD, and Thomas Clasby and Nancy DiPaolo of the Department of Elder Services made up the Senior Olympic Planning Board.

John Malloy, Council on Aging Chairman, officiated at the Opening Ceremonies, which included the torch lighting.

QHS Baseball, Softball, Girls Lax In; NQ Boys Lax In MIAA Tournament Pairing Announced Late Tuesday

By SEAN BRENNAN

Late Tuesday afternoon the MIAA released its tournament pairings for baseball, softball, and boys and girls lacrosse; Quincy High School will field three teams with state title aspirations (baseball, softball, girls lacrosse) while North Quincy High School has one entry (boys lacrosse) aiming for high school immortality.

The Presidents will be fully represented on the diamond. The baseball program, under second-year head coach Tim Daley and behind the strength of a late-season winning streak, have been seeded thirteenth (out of sixteen teams) in the Division I South Sectional bracket.

Quincy (11-9 overall) will open with a first-round game against Patriot League foe Silver Lake HS today (June 3) at 4 p.m. The contest will be played down in Kingston, as the Lakers (16-5 overall) are the higher seed. The winner of this game will play either Marshfield (#5) or Franklin (#12) in a quarter-final matchup.

The top teams in Division I South are Catholic Memorial (17-3), Braintree (16-4), and Bridgewater-Raynham (16-4).

The Quincy Presidents softball team, with a 15-5 overall record, were seeded seventh overall in the 28-team Division I South Sectional field.

Quincy will host #26 Dartmouth High School on Saturday, June 5 at 4 p.m. at Mitchell-McCoy Field. The winner of this preliminary round game will move on to play against the winner of the Notre Dame Academy (#10) and Oliver Ames (#23) preliminary round game in a first-round contest early next week (TBA).

The top teams in Division I South are Norwood (20-0), King Philip (20-1), and Dighton-Rehoboth (19-1).

The Quincy girls' lacrosse team will be making its inaugural appearance in the Division I South Sectionals after finishing the regular season with an 8-8-1 overall record.

Senior Brianne Phelan (68 goals, 26 assists, 94 points) and Meghan McCarthy (56 goals, 19 assists, 75 points) led a potent Quincy offensive attack.

The Presidents, the #15 seed in the 15-team field, played a first-round contest on June 1 against #2 Franklin HS. The winner of this game advanced to play against the winner of the Notre Dame Academy (#7)/King Philip (#10) first-round game.

The top teams in Division I South are Westwood (20-0), Franklin (17-1), and Wellesley (16-1-2).

North Quincy boys lacrosse was seeded #18 in the 21-team Division I East bracket. The Red Raiders (15-5 overall) were set to play against Waltham (#15) yesterday (June 2) in a preliminary round affair; the winner of that game would play against defending state champion St. John's Prep (#2, 16-2 overall) on June 5.

The top teams in Division I East are Duxbury (19-1), St. John's (16-2), and Lincoln-Sudbury (17-1).

The Quincy Sun will have first-round (preliminary round) results next week.

Boys Track Season Over

By JOE REARDON

It was just one year ago that Jim Bottary was shut out of the Div. 1 EMass Championships, failing to qualify in any of his specialties.

Bottary was his bitter disappointment as a motivator heading into this spring track season and his opponents were the ones who paid dearly.

Flash ahead to the present and Bottary's situation proved to be a whole lot brighter. The UMass-Dartmouth-bound senior not only qualified in the 200-meter dash, his specialty, but also in the 100 and 400 as well.

Bottary made the most of his chance on the Dilboy Stadium track last Friday afternoon in Somerville. Racing against a tough, deep field, Bottary blazed to a time of 23.0 seconds for a respectable 10th-place finish.

Bottary's time was just short of his 22.7 personal best in the event. Arguably the most versatile athlete on the Quincy/North Quincy team, Bottary has personal bests of 11.1 in the 100, 52.0 in the 400 and long jumped 39-0.

"He went from just missing qualifying last year, to qualifying for all three this year," said Q/NQ boys coach Jim Finn. "He's definitely one of my favorite athletes that I've coached, by far."

Finn is particularly high on freshman transfer Derek Stone. The young talent, via Cathedral High School in Boston, had a personal best of 53.1 this spring, an eye-opening time for a freshman. In the enormously competitive Patriot League Meet, Stone won his heat in the 400, good enough for an impressive third overall.

In Stone, Finn has a freshman mature beyond his years that carries a strong work ethic, on the track and in class. He was more than a little up to the challenge in league competition, finishing undefeated in dual meet action.

"This kid is going to be pretty solid," said Finn. "I don't think I've seen a kid as strong as this one at his age.

"He's more proud about his good grades than his good times."

Finn has a unique talent in junior Nick Gillespie. The speedy Gillespie had a breakout season in the 800, clocking a solid 2:06.0. He was also a point-scorer in the discus with a personal best of 110 feet. Gillespie matured a lot from his sophomore year and concentrated on excelling on the track and in the discus circle. The results make him one of Finn's best returning athletes.

"He took it seriously for the first time," said Finn.

Another freshman, Dan Tran had a good spring campaign with a 5:00 personal best in the mile while teammate John Greene dipped under 5 with his 4:59.

Junior Jake Mullaney will be back, sporting some impressive personal bests. With a 149-9 personal best in the javelin, Mullaney will be a force in the Patriot League. He'll be looking to better his personal best of 2:10 in the 800 and 56.0 at 400 meters.

Over 500 Middle School Athletes Competed In Annual Middle School Track & Field Championships Atlantic MS Boys & Central MS Girls Earn First-Place

By JOE REARDON & SEAN BRENNAN

Atlantic Middle School, on the boys' side, flexed its muscles on the oval and in the pits to capture five events in taking the Quincy Middle School Track & Field Championships late last month.

More than 500 middle school student-athletes from Atlantic, Central, Sterling, Point Webster and Broad Meadows Middle Schools took part in the enormously popular meet at Cavanaugh Field.

Atlantic MS finished with 66 points to edge Central MS (61 points). Sterling MS captured third-place (52 points) followed by Broad Meadows MS (ten points) and Point Webster MS (five points).

Central MS coach Ricardo Cordero said the meet fielded the most competitors to date and the interest is at an all-time high.

"This is definitely the biggest turnout we've ever had," said Cordero, the Middle School Meet Director. "In middle school, I've seen a lot of interest and growth in the last few years. I totally believe in this (middle school) program. You want to get the kids involved. No students get cut and there's an event for everyone."

Antoine Allen of Atlantic took the gold medal in the 400-meter run with a time of 64.0; two seconds in front Central's Nick Burt (66.0). Atlantic captured the sprint medley in 1:30 and Mouad Abibi was the lone high jumper to clear five-feet with his victory. Aaron Tran won the 50-meter hurdles (8.63) and Greg Clarke's 37-1 heave clinched first-place in the shot put for Atlantic.

On the girls' side, Central MS rolled to a decisive win with 80 points. Atlantic MS was a distant second (46 points) with Broad Meadows MS taking third-place (28 points), followed by Sterling MS (24 points) and Point Webster MS (19 points).

Stephanie DiPietro pushed to a scintillating 2:42 in the 800-meter and showed her mettle off in the turbo javelin with a heave of 71-5. Stacey Gallagher was also a double winner for Central, collecting a win in the 50-hurdles (9.75) and the long jump (12-6) one of eight winners for Central MS.

The sprint medley team edged Broad Meadows, 1:40 to 1:41 and Carolyn Schwartz soared over 4-6 to clinch victory in the high jump. Arianna Viscione and Kerry Phelan lifted Central MS to a 1-2 finish in the 400 at 1:11 and 1:13, respectively.

Health Hints For Men Can Benefit The Entire Family

The month of June is traditionally a special time to celebrate the men in our lives.

Just in time for National Men's Health Week, June 14-20, and Father's Day, June 20, TOPS Club, Inc. (Take Off Pounds Sensibly), the nonprofit weight-loss support organization, offers a variety of tips and ideas to help improve a man's health and also can benefit the entire family.

Whether you're a member of TOPS or simply a member of a family, employ the following information to begin a truly long-standing journey to wellness.

Simple, Healthy Ways To Honor Dad

- Time is a gift; give it to share it. Make a date for a regular activity, and support each other in your healthy lifestyle. Commit to doing yard work together every Saturday or taking regular walks every other evening after dinner.

- Does he like to cook? Give him a healthy cookbook for his collection. Provide him with new grill accessories and encourage replacing unhealthy options with grilled fresh vegetables, fish, and seafood.

- Give him a surprise activity - a long bike ride, a day hike, doubles tennis with two other family members, or an afternoon of golf.

- A subscription to a health and fitness or sports magazine that matches his interests will be a gift that keeps on giving sound advice for his healthy lifestyle.

- A healthy brain is a happy brain. Give him books of puzzles and brain teasers. Play board games with him and the rest of the family.

- Gift him with a membership to TOPS to benefit from weight-loss support and wellness education. Visit www.tops.org for more information or to find a chapter near you.

Foods Just Right For Men

We hear a lot these days about how important it is for women to eat certain foods containing specific nutrients. What about men? Are there foods men should eat for better overall health? The answer is an unequivocal, "Yes."

In fact, there are several foods and nutrients men should consume most days of the week for optimum health, as outlined by Drs. Mehmet Oz and Michael Roizen, authors of the "YOU" series of books.

1. Fiber - Men need to eat at least 25 grams of fiber each day. While that can be daunting, fiber is found in a number of sources, like grapefruit, soybeans, and whole grains. If you're looking for whole grain products, make sure the ingredients read: "100% whole grain" or "100% whole wheat."

2. Folate - Men can significantly reduce their risks for some kinds of cancer by eating food rich in folate. Take a supplement or add dark, leafy greens and orange juice to your diet. Men are advised to look for the words "folate" or "folic" on food labels and to get at least 800 mg each day.

3. Tomato sauce - It takes 165 raw tomatoes to equal ten tablespoons of tomato sauce. This juicy red fruit contains lycopene, which can help fight cancer. Instead of eating all those tomatoes, enjoy ten tablespoons of tomato sauce per week and decrease the chances of arterial aging, heart disease, stroke, memory loss, and other conditions.

4. A handful of nuts - Men should eat walnuts, almonds, and hazelnuts to get the powerful omega-3s, healthy fats with multiple benefits. It's good practice to snack on some before eating foods like pasta or corn on the cob. The fat in the nuts helps the stomach slow down and the body to more effectively process the sugar from the carbohydrates in those meals.

5. Fish - Men also should consider eating a serving of fish three times a week. Tilapia, salmon, flounder, cod, and mahi-mahi are all good choices. They're high in protein and low in fat and carry a low amount of mercury, a chemical that can increase the risk of heart disease and impaired memory.

SOFTBALL QUESTION

While shoulder injuries seem to be most common among male high school baseball players who are pitchers, the same injuries also plague girl softball players at several positions. The female high school softball players most likely to sustain shoulder injuries play first base, catcher, and an equal distribution among the remaining positions. To further differentiate male and female ball players, researchers have found that shoulder injuries among male players are most likely to occur during games while female players most frequently sustain shoulder injuries during practice while throwing, not pitching. One way to address these shoulder injuries involves examination by a chiropractor, who can study the biomechanics of a player's throwing motion.

The practice of chiropractic focuses on the relationship between structure (primarily the spine) and function (as coordinated by the nervous system) and how that relationship affects the preservation and restoration of health. DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PROFESSIONALLY SUPERVISE TOOTH WHITENING

Even if you're considering using an over-the-counter tooth whitener, the American Dental Association recommends that you consult with your dentist. This recommendation is made because tooth-whitening systems containing carbamide peroxide or hydrogen peroxide can be uncomfortable for those with sensitive teeth or gum recession. In addition, most products will only whiten natural tooth enamel, which means that the presence of tooth-colored fillings, veneers, crowns, or partial dentures may yield uneven results. With this in mind, the dentist can evaluate whether tooth-whitening is a good idea for your teeth. While tooth whitening usually reduces most stains caused by age, smoking, and regular coffee/tea drinking, it will not remove tooth discoloration caused by the use of tetracycline in children under age 8.

We'll be happy to answer any questions you may have on the subject of tooth whitening. Your smile care needs deserve an exceptional dental office, with a professional care team who provides leading-edge care and more comforts than you ever thought possible in a dentist's office. We want to do more than meet your expectations - we want to exceed them. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we make it a point to get to know you and the specific needs of your family. It's important to us. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Having nice looking teeth gives a boost to health and happiness. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth-whitening products are not recommended for children under age 16; pregnant women (or women who are breast-feeding); or people with sensitive teeth, gum disease, or worn tooth enamel.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that successful people rarely consider work as just so much labor; they regard it in the nature of an opportunity for service and feel enjoyment and derive pleasure from it.

Success is not a thing to be acquired; rather it is a spirit. It is not a matter of position or possessions. Success is the satisfying feeling of a life spent in a worthwhile way and a feeling of service rendered. Yes, success is a frame of mind...

"Success is in the way you walk the paths of life each day; It's in the little things you do, and in the things you say. Success is not in getting rich, or rising high to fame. It's not alone in winning goals, which all men hope to claim. Success is being big of heart, and clean and broad in mind; It's being faithful to your friends, and to the stranger, kind. It's in the children whom you love, and all they learn from you;

Success depends on character, and every thing you do..."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Still operating under a full head of self-esteem makes you want to tackle a matter you had shied away from. OK. But be sure to arm yourself with facts before you make a move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That smart move you recently made caught the attention of a lot of people, including some with financial deals to offer. Use your Taurean wariness to check them out thoroughly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Shyness might keep you from asking for more information on a potentially important matter. But your curiosity grows stronger by midweek and gives you the impetus for data-gathering.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking on too many tasks may not be the wise thing to do at this time. You might overspend both your physical and emotional energy reserves, and have to miss out on some upcoming events.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your spending at an affordable level. Splurging now — especially on credit — could create a problem if your finances are too low for you to take advantage of a possible opportunity.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not approve of a colleague's behavior during much of the week. But don't play the judgmental Virgo card here. As always, check the facts before you assume the worst.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Coping with an old issue that has suddenly re-emerged could take a big toll on your emotional energies. Decide whether you really want to pursue the possibilities here.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) For all your skill in keeping your secrets safe, you could be unwittingly letting one slip out by the way you're behaving in that new relationship. Are congratulations soon to be in order?

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good old-fashioned horse sense could help you get around those who unknowingly or deliberately put obstacles in your way. Ignore the confusion and follow your own lead.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A puzzling attitude change in a colleague from friendly to chilly might stem from a long-hidden resentment suddenly bubbling up. An open and honest talk should resolve the problem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This week, many ever-generous Aquarians might find themselves feeling an acquisitive urge. If so, indulge it. You've earned the right to treat yourself to wonderful things.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Expect to get a lot of advice on how to go about implementing your plans. But once you've sorted it all out, you'll probably find that, once again, your way will be the best way.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy the quiet times of your life, but when you're in the mood, you can throw a party everyone will want to go to.

Remember Those Who Are 'Called Home From This Life'

Kevin Barrett of Quincy brought his daughters Reilly and Cady to the ceremony to remember those veterans who gave their life for their country.

"We're here to remember all the soldiers and the men who fought in the war," Barrett said. "We didn't stress to the kids the parade. The day is about those people who protected us. We look at the flags and realize they never got to be husbands or daddies."

Seven-year-old Reilly said the soldiers were very brave protecting the country. "It's pretty cool that all these people fought in the war to protect me."

Tricia Farulla held a sign that simply read "Thank You" as the parade passed by on Sea Street. Farulla, whose nephew, David Frederick is a member of the Military Police in the U.S. Navy stationed in Guantanamo Bay. Her cousin and brothers have also served in the military.

"We come every year," she said. "If we knew nobody in the service we'd still be here. This day is not about cookouts."

$126M Project Ahead Of Schedule, Under Budget

New Quincy High School Dedication Set For Aug. 29

By JOE REARDON

Construction of the new Quincy High School is in its final phase and moving along faster than expected. The $126 million project, which broke ground in 2007, is about three weeks ahead of schedule and under budget according to principal Frank Santoro.

"We've done everything we can to stay under that figure," said Santoro.

Both the A wing, which houses the science, mathematics and technology classes, and the D wing, home to humanities, English and foreign languages have been in use for several months and been getting rave reviews from students and faculty alike.

Currently, work is being done in both the B and C wings of the building. Included in the wings are the auditorium, gym, cafeteria and library.

Early Telephone Notice For Matters Of Critical Concern City Joining Sheriff's Reverse 911 System

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy is joining Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's Reverse 911 system which will give residents early telephone notice on everything from catastrophes to Amber Alerts to local options, such as H1N1 flu vaccine clinics.

Bellotti said Monday that Quincy information has been downloaded already to the system's database and will be up and running.

at no cost to the city, in a very short time.

"We're very excited about it," Bellotti said Monday, crediting Mayor Thomas Koch and Fire Chief Joseph Barron for their leadership in joining the system.

"It's a cheap and quick way to notify residents of matters of critical concern to them in their communities," Bellotti said. "It's a great tool."

Mayor, Council OK Noise Ordinance

It's been a bumpy trip for the noise limit ordinance sponsored by Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee. That is, until this Monday when city councillors voted 8-0 to approve his proposal for noise limits throughout the city.

"Time is wasting," said McNamee when he opened Monday's discussion of the proposal which he said has less restrictive limits on noise than his original plan. "It's a start."

"This is not as strict as I'd like," said McNamee. "It appears to be what can work at this time."

McNamee said the ordinance is particularly needed at this time of year when evening entertainment offers music and loud sounds outdoors which can adversely affect residents, such as his constituents in Marina Bay.

The ordinance "institutes some objective measures" for the public

The evening will be capped off by a spectacular fireworks display over Black's Creek that will kick off at roughly 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade itself, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to

Nine Fire Fighter Jobs At Risk Cuts Could Strip Manpower, Increase Response Time

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Fire Chief Joseph Barron last week forecast potential brown-outs at Wollaston and Germantown fire stations, layoffs looming for as many as nine firefighters and alarm response time mounting to 4 1/2 minutes from three minutes as his department grapples with the 3.7% cut in his 2011 budget.

"We are at barebones; we were at barebones before..." Chief Barron told the Finance Committee chaired by Councillor John Keenan. At last week's session, Chief Barron announced five firefighter layoffs as of July and another four potential layoffs in November.

The news appalled city councillors who fear for firefighter and residents' safety and the firefighters' union chief Ernie Arienti who warned of a 'decimated' department endangered by 20 years of cuts.

"We are heading down a slippery slope that we cannot afford to be at," Arienti said in a statement which concluded, "In these times when our city is increasing in size and, also, the added hazards and jobs we are performing, we should be increasing in size."

Even more alarming for councillors was the news that one percent of the proposed 2011 budget is contingent on raising $250,000 through accident insurance and third party claims deposited in a Fire Claims Fund.

A proposed ordinance detailing "a program to charge user fees" to bankroll that Fire Claims Fund created something of an uproar when it was presented to City Council Monday as reported on Page 9.

Councillors directed that the proposed ordinance on accident recovery claims and a second on excessive false alarms be considered by the Public Safety and Ordinance Committees.

Budget Details

During the Finance Committee meeting, Chief Barron said a captain and four lieutenant positions will be cut as of July 1 and those officers will bump down to fill five openings created by layoffs at lower levels.

Chief Barron anticipates another round of layoffs in November, stripping the department of four more positions which had been funded through federal grants this year.

"I share your concerns," Chief Barron said, acknowledging that the cuts will affect service. "It's disheartening. It's the reality."

The Fire Department's 2011 proposed budget will be $17,802,927, more than a half a million dollars lower than the current budget of $18,476,602 and over three quarters of a million dollars lower than the actual 2009 expenditures of $18,570,258.

One percent of the department's budget depends on collecting third party insurance claims as Chief Barron said that $250,000 could be raised under a plan "to charge the insurance companies for the cleanup and damage after an accident."

"It's a conservative projection," Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance told the committee, estimating that the department could easily see $300,000 in added revenues from insurance claims. "We've issued an RFP (request for propos-

Sheets Eyes Congressional Bid

Jim Sheets for Congress?

It looks that way.

Sheets, who is the city's longest serving mayor, says he is leaning towards a bid for Congress in the 10th District. The six-term mayor from 1990 to 2001 is expected to run for the seat being vacated by Quincy Democrat William Delahunt. A decision could come as early as next week.

If he enters the race that is already crowded with six candidates from the Democratic and Republican parties, Sheets would run as an Independent. The lifelong Democrat changed his party affiliation to unenrolled Feb. 18 - in part because he opposed President Obama's health care reform.

"I decided I couldn't belong to a party that basically shoved that health care package down people's throats," Sheets said in a recent interview. "Today's Democratic party has very little resemblance to the party of John F. Kennedy and Harry Truman."

Sheets, who celebrated his 75th birthday June 3, appears rested and ready to launch a Congressional campaign. It would certainly spice up what is already shaping up to be a very exciting election season both locally and state-wide.

Furthermore, political observers will have a field day analyzing how Sheets will impact the Congressional race. Consider this:

There are two Democrats in the race: Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating and state Sen. Robert O'Leary of Barnstable. Keating recently moved to Quincy and until Sheets showed up, was considered the only Quincy candidate in the Congressional race. Quincy is the largest municipality in the 10th district that spans from the City of Presidents throughout the South Shore to Cape Cod.

There are also four Republican candidates: Robert Hayden of Hanover, Raymond Kasperowicz of Cohasset, former state treasurer Joseph Malone of Scituate and state Rep. Jeff Perry of Sandwich.

If O'Leary and Perry were to win their party's nominations, Sheets would be the only candidate who does not live on Cape Cod or, in other words, "lives on this side of the bridge."

Another political factoid: 51 percent of the registered voters in the 10th District are unenrolled (Independent); 32 percent are Democrats and 13 percent are Republicans. Those numbers can certainly change as the election approaches but it's obvious about half of voters in the district are not aligned with either major party.

Sheets would also be the third Independent from Quincy appearing on the state ballot this fall.

There's former city councillor Tim Cahill who is waging a gubernatorial bid as an Independent. And there's also Karl Roos, who's an Independent running for state representative in the 2nd Norfolk District.

But Sheets may have some company as an independent in the 10th race.

Three other Independent candidates have taken out nomination papers in the 10th District, according to the state Election Division. They are Peter White of Mashpee, Thomas Lawler and William F. Quinn III (residence unknown).

One political observer believes White will not return papers.

Independent candidates must collect at least 2,000 signatures by Aug. 3. Those signatures must then be certified by the state by Aug. 31 to be eligible for the Nov. 2 ballot.

So, Sheets - and any other Independent candidate - would not have to compete in the Sept. 14th primary. Just get 2,000 certified signatures and be on the final ballot.

If he enters the race for Congress, it would be Sheets's second attempt to win a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. He ran in 1978 but bowed to Brian Donnelly. (Sheets, at that time, was also a state representative. He was elected in a special election in 1975 to fill out the term of Bill Delahunt who was appointed Norfolk County District Attorney by Gov. Michael Dukakis. Sheets was elected to a two-year term as state representative but chose to run for Congress instead of re-election in 1978.)

Sheets began his political career in 1973 when he defeated three-term incumbent Ward 4 Councillor Albert Barilaro. At the time, Sheets was a teacher at Quincy Junior College.

"I ran for councillor at the urging of my students. They told me, 'You're always encouraging us to get involved. Why don't you get involved?'" And I told them "I will if you help me."

Sheets went on to serve 16 years as Ward 4 councillor before being elected mayor in 1989. He served 12 years until he was defeated by challenger Bill Phelan by 17 votes - the closest mayoral election in Quincy - in 2001.

Two times during Sheets's stint as mayor a Congressional seat opened up. First in 1992 when Brian Donnelly stepped down; and again in 1996 when Gerry Studts retired. But both times Sheets declined to be a candidate.

"I felt I had a primary obligation to the people who elected me as their mayor to serve as mayor and not to run for Congress," Sheets said.

During his tenure as the city's chief executive officer, Sheets was known for building coalitions and reaching across the aisle to work with Democratic and Republican leaders.

"I had a superb relationship with (Democratic) Senators Ted Kennedy and John Kerry and at the same time I worked well with (Republican) Governors Bill Weld and Paul Cellucci. I figured we could get a lot more for the City of Quincy if we worked well with both parties and that's what we did."

Among his major mayoral accomplishments Sheets lists the $18 million addition to the Crane Public Library, the construction of the Granite Links Golf Course at Quarry Hills and transitioning Quincy Hospital to Quincy Medical Center - saving 1,000 jobs and overcoming $30 million in debt.

He also left his footprint on the school system: opening two new schools (Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center and the Marshall Elementary School); adding space to the Bernazzani and Parker Schools and reopening the Beechwood Knoll School.

"Those 12 years (as mayor) were the most creative and the most rewarding years of my life," Sheets said. "I loved to come to work but we also did have some tough times. I felt more fulfilled within myself than at any other time. If I saw a dirty street, I took that personally and made sure it was taken care of."

He left the mayor's office - and elected public service - nine years ago. "I wasn't angry, sorrowful or mad (after losing the 2001 election). I had an opportunity to serve as the mayor of Quincy and I did the best job I could. I thought at that time maybe it was time for me to just fade away (politically) - which is what I did."

Until now perhaps.

TACKEY CHAN, candidate for state representative in the 2nd Norfolk District, will host a campaign kick-off celebration Tuesday, June 15 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Five Spices Restaurant, Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Suggested donation of $25, $50 or $100. For more information, contact Paula Jacobs, 617-479-8075.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1907 postcard printed in Germany is a view of the old sightseeing observatory that was on the top of Great Hill at the end of Houghs Neck. The tower was built in 1901 by Quincy contractor William Lofgren who also built many of the Quincy churches of the time with wooden steeples. The tower was octagon in shape and about 25 feet wide at the base tapering to 12 feet at the top, rising 50 feet high with a 25-foot pole at the top flying a 12-foot flag. Lofgren's company built it in three weeks. The tower was built for Andrew Odom, a young civil engineer who worked for the city and was also an entrepreneur. He had the tower built as an investment; he placed a powerful telescope at the top and charged five cents for admission. At over 130 feet above sea level, the view on a clear day was fantastic; besides all of Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay it included Gloucester to the north, Provincetown to the east and Plymouth to the south. The tower was later fully enclosed and converted into a summer cottage. It burned to the ground in 1939. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Flagging Veterans Graves With Care And Reverence

On Sunday, May 30, the traditional Memorial Day, I was headed home from church and missed the green light at the intersection of Coddington and Sea Streets and Southern Artery.

I didn't mind missing the light as I had two minutes to enjoy the sights of the Veterans section of Mount Wollaston Cemetery. The large flag was flying at full staff against a beautiful blue sky. Close to ground level there were hundreds of smaller flags placed at each veteran's grave. It was windy and all the flags were fluttering in the breeze.

The small fluttering flags seemed to be talking to their neighbors! In "my mind's ear" I could hear the conversation! "Hi, Buddy, I was in Vietnam. Quincy had a good representation of the 48 of us who didn't make it home alive - out of 58,000. How about you, neighbor?" "I was in Korea and that was no picnic either. How about you, over there in the next row?" "Well, I was older than you fellas. I was in World War II - in the Army Air Corps. Believe it or not, but I trained for two years and saw just enough action near the end of the war to come home this way."

"Hi, Buddy, I was in WWII also. Were you in the Pacific with me? We were on Okinawa and Ie Shima during the typhoon season and the supply ships couldn't get to us. Believe it or not we had Spam for every meal for 28 days and the Air Corps cooks never served it the same way twice! "Hey, you guys, didn't it feel good to have the Veterans Council put an American flag beside our grave markers! They did it with care and reverence. I hope we have many more breezy days so we can 'talk' again!"

Burgin Elected Mayor - Burgin Majority Largest Ever

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor-Elect Thomas S. Burgin pledged a "New Deal" in city politics consisting of a clean sweep of all Ross-appointed department heads from City Hall. Burgin received the largest majority ever given to a mayoralty candidate in the history of the city.

His opponent, Acting Mayor Leo Mullin carried only four of the 24 precincts in the city, while Burgin made a clean sweep in Wards Three, Five and Six.

The winner swept all sections of the city where he was considered to be strong and ran surprisingly well in Mullin strongholds.

The total vote was Burgin 15,056, Mullin 10,141, out of a total vote cast of 25,264.

(Editor's note: This special election was brought about by the trial in March where incumbent Charles A. Ross was found guilty of campaign irregularities and removed from office. City Council President Leo E. Mullin became acting mayor pending a special election. A preliminary election held in late May pared the field down to Mullin and Burgin.)

NEW MAYOR EXPECTED TO MAKE GOOD ON HIS PROMISE OF CHANGE

One department head has already resigned (City Solicitor Charles Young) and another has his resignation prepared, but all others who could be reached, gave no indication as to what their actions would be as a result of the election of former Councillor Thomas S. Burgin as mayor. While Solicitor Young already has resigned and Tax Collector Edward G. Morris has his resignation prepared, other adopted a wait-and-see approach.

Burgin will assume office pledged to the early dismissal of all major department heads appointed by former Mayor Charles A. Ross. He made that statement the chief issue of his campaign and the battle was on among aspirants for the various posts.

MULLIN MUM ON NQHS ADDITION

Acting Mayor Leo E. Mullin declined to say whether or not he would award the contract on the final addition to North Quincy High School in his final three days in office.

Mayor-Elect Burgin will not take office until Friday evening and until that time Mullin is within his right to award the contract.

The low bidder on the $350,000 project was the A. Piotti Company of Dorchester, the head of which is the father-in-law of Public Works Commissioner Angelo P. Bizzozero.

George Eggleton, a brother-in-law of County Commissioner Russell L. Bates, an active Burgin campaign worker, declared that Mullin should leave the decision on the awarding of the contract to incoming Mayor Burgin.

Burgin commented, "I do not become mayor until Friday. Mullin is in control until then."

ADULT GROUP members perform "Don't Stop Believin'" at their annual year-end variety show. The weekly group for adults with developmental disabilities is co-sponsored by Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts and the Quincy Recreation Department.

At Annual Variety Show

Adults With Disabilities Perform With Joy, Enthusiasm

The men wore Hawaiian shirts and straw hats. The women donned pink shirts and jeans, and wore flowers in their hair.

And when the curtain opened on a stage festively decorated with twinkling lights and musical notes, the 24-member cast put on a show that brought the audience of more than 100 to its feet.

The performers are all participants in a Quincy program for adults with developmental disabilities. Co-sponsored by Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts and the Quincy Recreation Department, the free, weekly program brings participants to the Lincoln-Hancock School for an evening of activities, arts and crafts, music and socializing. The group meets from September to June and to cap another successful year, the participants took to the Lincoln-Hancock stage recently to present their annual year-end variety show.

"They really look forward to the show," said Program Supervisor Barbara Robbins, whose adult son, Christopher, has participated in the group for 10 years. "It's a fun way to celebrate the end of the year with an array of songs."

The cast members opened the program with the song, "Celebration." As the group segued into "Sweet Caroline," the audience got into the act, singing along and providing the "So Good! So Good!" chants that echo through Fenway Park each summer.

The show featured several upbeat numbers, including "Dancin' Queen," "California Girls" and "The Locomotion," which had cast members doing the popular train dance down the aisles. But the program also featured quieter moments, as a number of participants performed solos and duets.

Michele Germain's rendition of "You Light Up My Life" earned her a standing ovation. Sheila Eagan and Kathy MacDonald, meanwhile, offered a duet of the Bette Midler hit, "From a Distance." As the duo sang, they were joined on stage, one by one, by the entire ensemble, until the whole cast joined with the audience in singing the chorus, "God is watching us, God is watching us, God is watching us... from a distance."

Other highlights included Chris Robbins' solo performance of The Traveling Wilburys' "You Got It" and an ensemble performance of Journey's "Don't Stop Believin'," currently enjoying renewed popularity thanks to the hit television series, Glee. The program culminated with the entire cast waving American flags as they sang, "We are the World."

"It was great to see how the audience really got involved," said Joan Plansky of Quincy, an employee of Cerebral Palsy. "The whole crowd just got swept up in the enthusiasm, and when the audience started singing along, the performers responded and just took it to another level."

Tom Zukauskas, CEO of Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts, agreed. "The interaction between the audience and the performers was really wonderful," he said. "Barbara and the program staff are to be congratulated for all the time they've put in with the group."

Quincy Recreation Department Director Barry Welch noted that the Adult Group has been around since the 1960s, when it first met at what was then the Furnace Brook Elementary School. The group relocated to Lincoln-Hancock when that school opened in the 1970s, and has been going strong ever since.

"Clearly, this program is a labor of love," Welch said. "It's great to come to the show and see the results of all the hard work the group and staff put in from September to June."

Donna Greene, one of the Cerebral Palsy staffers for the program, noted that the group's activities include everything from art and music to special events like bingo, field trips, movie night and "make your own pizza" night. The group also puts on an annual Christmas variety show.

THE ENTIRE CASTS performs in the finale, singing "We Are the World."

"The best part of the group is really the camaraderie and the socialization," said Greene, who along with Robbins worked on the variety show with Quincy Recreation employees Maria Della Croce and Roxanne Lydon. "There aren't many programs like this out there for adults with developmental disabilities."

Participant Sheila Eagan of Quincy said the group has helped her to renew old acquaintances. "I went to school with some of the people in the group," she said. "It gives us an opportunity to be with people we haven't seen in a long time."

Following the performance, audience members raved about the show while snapping photos of friends, neighbors and family members who participated.

"It's absolutely wonderful what they do in this program," said Weymouth resident Carol Harkin, whose brother, Daniel, took pride in operating the curtain for the variety show, which was taped for future broadcast on Quincy Access Television (QATV). "We love to come to the shows. You walk out of here just singing and smiling."

Suggestions To Reduce Budget, Raise New Revenues For Athletic, Drama Programs

I would like to offer two suggestions which I believe will significantly reduce this years budget deficit and raise new revenues for our athletic and drama programs for the City of Quincy.

In 1991 the State of Massachusetts reduced local aid by $320 million dollars. This cut would have cost municipalities throughout the state thousands of jobs. The legislature passed Chapter 336 Acts of 1991 which allowed municipalities to defer summer teachers salaries. This bill was an accounting maneuver which allowed communities to pay the teachers and defer the amount paid over a 15 year period. The money was then raised each year on the Tax recap. The City of Quincy took advantage of the bill in order not to layoff teachers. The City deferred $1.9 million dollars.

In 2007, the Town of Tewksbury filed a home rule petition to allow for a teacher's salary deferral. Tewksbury had used this back in 1991. The governor vetoed this petition was overridden by both the House and the Senate. The Town of Tewksbury was allowed to defer $1.3 million dollars reducing there deficit and eliminating the need for a trash fee. Mayor Koch I am asking that you file a similar home rule petition. What is allowed in one community should be allowed in the City of Quincy and this may save many jobs within the City of Quincy. This would allow the City to spread this payment out of 15 years. It worked before in Quincy and it will work again. I urge you to seriously consider the value of education to our children when deciding on this proposal.

In 1996, I suggested that municipalities be allowed to issue specialty license plates. In 2002 as part of the municipal relief act, this legislation was passed. My idea at the time was that each municipality be allowed to issue a plate as long as they could get the required 1500 plates. The Registry said they would not allow this but in these difficult times and coming from a Mayor with a $12 million dollar budget problem, I'm willing to bet the Registry would consider this. In 2009, I estimated that based on participation, the City could make between $148 thousand and $444 thousand dollars on a bi-annual basis and this is just from city residents. I believe the appeal of a John Adams plate could be sold statewide and that this program could be used to fund student athletics and the drama program without taking away from current revenue sources.

On March 24, 2003, in a letter to me Lt. Governor Kerry Healey stated that "specialty plates certainly have merit and I do recommend thinking of something more broad based such as Massachusetts sports teams. She states that you could offer to donate a share of this revenue to athletic groups and teams in k to 12 schools. She also states, that this has been known to be successful in other states such as New York. I would happy to work with you or your office to make this program successful in Quincy.

Memorial Day: A Salute To The Lives, Courage And Sacrifice Of Those Who Served

This year I missed marching in the Quincy's Memorial Day Parade. I was out of town but took time to reflect and remember all the sacrifices made over 235 years by America's fighters for freedom. In April, I was up in a small New Hampshire cemetery in the town of Hebron and noticed the many gravesites of veterans who fought for America in our War of Independence. Last June, I was in San Antonio, Texas where I visited the remains of the Alamo. I had an uncle who served in the US Navy during World War II. I was a Vietnam Era member of the United States Air Force. Today, I am a member of the DAV Post 13 in Dorchester and the Abraham Lincoln GAR Post 11 in Charlestown.

I was miles from Quincy on Memorial Day but I was here in spirit. Quincy has one of the best Memorial Day parades in Massachusetts and The Quincy Sun always does a great job of covering it year after year. This year it was no different. The crowds are never as large as you wish but all who show up to honor, remember and salute the sacrifices made in the defense of liberty are acknowledged and thanked.

I did read a news story on the Memorial Day exercises over the Mt. Hope Cemetery in Mattapan where only 20 people show up. Some excused the numbers by saying folks were dying off but there is no excuse for forgetting what Memorial Day is all about. It is about sacrifice and freedom. Where were the younger people? Have they forgotten their roles as American citizens?

However, there were also other places that showed the spirit of Memorial Day. People turn out all across the country in the millions to honor our war dead. A friend of mine, a colonel in the Marines attended exercises up in Andover and met a survivor of D-Day. My friend called the aging World War II veteran a "national treasure" and a piece of American history. This man landed in the First Wave of the 29th Division, 125th Infantry and made it out alive. D-Day wasn't just June 6, 1944; it was 45 days of hell.

I hope that as long as we exist as a nation that we will remember the sacrifices made for our freedom that many take for granted. I still remember with pride knowing a member of the Rough Riders who went up San Juan Hill in 1898 with Teddy Roosevelt. He was my neighbor on East Canton Street in Boston's South End. I once watched him march in full uniform in the Veteran's Day Parade in Boston back in 1962 when he was 82 years old. He marched with pride for his country.

Let us hope that Memorial Days continue forever as a salute to the lives, courage and sacrifice of those who fight and often die in the defense of our freedoms. If Memorial Day ever went out of style, the end would truly be near for the future of America.

Once again, thanks for another great parade and great coverage in The Quincy Sun.

A SETTING FOR YOUR PRECIOUS STONE

Because it places more emphasis on the diamond than the metal holding it, the prong setting is the most popular setting for a diamond solitaire ring. Prongs, the metal claws that clutch the edge of the diamond, allow the gemstone to sit higher with more visibility.

While a Tiffany-style prong setting features prongs that come from a common point in the shank, a basket-style prong setting has prongs of potentially smaller size emanating from a basket framework. While this style allows the diamond to be set lower, because the prongs extend directly to the diamond's girdle, the Tiffany style requires that the diamond be set higher to allow sufficient spread in the head to accommodate the size of the diamond.

As the foremost name in fine jewelry in Quincy, you can trust us concerning any jewelry question. Councillors Blast Fire Cost Recovery Plan

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Councillors Monday blasted a proposed ordinance aimed at allowing the fire department to recover third party insurance fees at accidents and service costs at fires due to criminal activity or gross negligence.

Chief Joseph Barron submitted two proposed ordinances to the council as part of an effort to boost department revenues by a minimum of $250,000 in fiscal year 2011.

However, several councillors expressed shock and outrage over one of the ordinances which was called the "Bacon Fire" ordinance, charging it would terrify old ladies from calling 911 and bankrupt fire victims who were just cooking bacon.

That was never the intent, according to Chief Barron who said third-party fees would be sought from insurance companies after vehicle accidents or incidents stemming from criminal activity or gross negligence, such as a recent fire at a home methamphetamine lab.

"This is a proposal that many chiefs throughout the state are seeking," Barron said when introducing the user fee proposal. "It is not my intention to burden anyone who has had a fire."

The city solicitor's office had reviewed the proposals prior to the council meeting and councillors asked for an opinion.

Assistant City Solicitor Janet Petkun said the user fee ordinance, as written, required a preamble specifying the limits of fire department billing, noting that an owner might be charged for gross negligence when 20 boarders are cooking on one hot plate with one extension cord.

A preamble was not sufficient for Councillors Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2, and Brian Palmucci, Ward 4, who expressed shock and outrage over the plan. Raymondi who suggested the ordinance would terrify old ladies in need of 911 services called the proposal "horrific," while Palmucci envisioned being charged for negligence for a grease fire due to burning bacon.

"Dial 911, you're going to get a bill," said Raymondi.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin said the proposal "leaves the door open for (charges) for the vanilla fire."

"The language in this is shocking, far too loose," said Palmucci who heads the Public Safety Committee. Palmucci who had, originally, sought a review of possible cost recovery for the fire department called the proposal as written "unconscionable."

With the terms of the proposed ordinance, Palmucci said residents "would think twice about dialing the fire department."

The details of the proposal also troubled Raymondi who said, "Enforcement is subjective, depending on the chief of police or future mayors."

James Fatseas, Chief of Staff for Mayor Thomas

Koch, attempted to douse the terrors raised by the ordinance opponents, stating that the fire department budget is not factored on anything other than third part automobile accident recovery claims.

"There is no intention to put a burden on seniors," said Fatseas, adding that the ordinance was expanded to cover "extreme situations."

Councillor John Keenan said the ordinance was "too broad, too discretionary," and councillors referred the measure to the Ordinance and Public Safety Committees.

The second ordinance which allowed a $100 fine for the third fire alarm in a year due to malfunction, mechanical failure, improper installation or negligence of the user or malicious false alarms was also referred to committee.

Quincy's Todd DiSalvo Walking for Life-Saving Care

Quincy resident Todd DiSalvo is hitting the streets again.

DiSalvo will walk for the second time to raise money for live-saving care in NSTAR's Walk for Children's Hospital Boston.

The walk is slated for June 13, beginning at the DCR Hatch Shell on the Charles River at 9 a.m. Walkers can register for the 2- and 7-mile walks online or on-site. Registration is $20 for adults and $5 for children 12 and under. Each adult walker is asked to raise at least $150.

As a long-time patient, beginning in 1977, DiSalvo suffered from frequent seizures. Working with doctors in the Neurology department, he visited Children's 3-4 times per year. Even with medication, his seizures continued 4-5 times a week. He did not expect to be able to lead a normal, independent life.

As technology advanced

over the years, doctors were finally able to determine that DiSalvo had a malformation in his brain. He had two surgeries in 1994 and 1995 to remove 90 percent of the malformation. He has been seizure-free since 1996.

"Children's has given me a chance at a real life," DiSalvo said.

His experiences at Children's have also influenced him to begin work in the Health Care industry. He currently works as a patient services representative at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

In some ERs, this is the only face you'll see for hours.

The wait. It's something that many patients have gotten accustomed to when they visit an emergency room. But not our patients. At Milton Hospital, we've shortened wait times and improved emergency care processes. And that's why our patients have rated us in the top 2% nationwide in patient satisfaction* for the year 2009. An impressive number. And we've done a number of things to earn it. We handle minor emergencies more efficiently. Patients have been impressed with our bedside manner. And we're staffed with Harvard Medical Faculty Physicians through our Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center affiliation.

With our commitment to patient satisfaction, we're changing the face of ER care. Milton Hospital. Our quality shows. And shines.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Rita's Low-Carb Crustless Quiche

Any time there is a family gathering, and we are asked to bring an entrée, appetizer or dessert, we can always count on my daughter Rita to bring something different and delicious.

And so it was recently when she made this incredible low carb quiche. But don't be fooled by the low carb, you will never know it.

LOW CARB CRUSTLESS QUICHE

- 1-pound ground turkey
- 2 chicken sausages (roasted garlic/herb-taken out of casings and crumbled finely)
- ½ onion finely chopped
- 1 shallot finely chopped (optional)
- 2 or 3 garlic cloves (finely chopped)
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1-teaspoon cumin (optional)
- 3eggs
- 1 ½ cups half & half
- 6-8 ounces shredded cheese
- Veggie of choice (she used about a half cup of spinach)

Sauté the onion/shallot in oil until translucent and slightly browned. Add the garlic at end for one minute on low heat careful not to burn. Remove from pan and set aside.

Using the same pan, brown the turkey and sausage meat until just cooked, and drain off any excess fat, then add the Worcestershire and onion mixture and mix well. Salt and pepper to taste.

Press meat mixture into an oiled or buttered sturdy pie plate (deep dish) to resemble a crust.

Sprinkle cheese in center of meat mixture. Sprinkle the veggies over that, if using. Can also add chopped fresh herbs if desired.

Whisk the eggs and half & half in a bowl until combined. Place the pie plate on a cookie sheet and pour the egg mixture into the pie plate, mix liquid gently (just a little to distribute,) but careful not to disrupt meat crust.

Cook a 350-degree oven for approximately 40 minutes or until center is set and top is starting to brown.

Gasoline Safety Tips: A Review

Here's a repeat topic, gasoline. While the frequent use of gasoline invites complacency, complacency warrants a review.

Gasoline is so commonly used and is such an integral part of our daily lives, I wonder if most of us are aware of it as a potential hazard if used haphazardly? For instance, according to statistics acquired by the Office of the State Fire Marshal, Massachusetts hospitals have treated 85 people for gasoline-related burns over the last 5 years.

Gasoline vapors ignite at a very low temperature. Fumes are heavier than air and can travel some distance to potential ignition sources. Therefore keep anything that can provide heat to ignite gasoline vapors well away from the fumes. A spark, a lit cigarette, or a pilot light is enough for the fumes to flash.

A static spark created when gasoline is IMPROPERLY USED to clean a paintbrush can ignite with devastating consequences. Gasoline is a tool, one frequently used, while it demands respect!

When at a self-service gasoline station make certain your engine is turned off before fueling. Obviously do not smoke while fueling your vehicle as well. Remember to replace the nozzle back onto the pump when you're through fueling and before you drive away. It happens! Fueling hose lines come with a breakaway feature for that very reason. If a car drives away with a nozzle in the fill pipe, there is a breakaway feature that is there to minimize spillage to the environment.

Keep gasoline away from children. Statistics indicate that children between ten and fourteen were almost three and a half times as likely to get in trouble with gasoline.

I recall an incident when a gasoline safety can was used to mark a child's bicycle obstacle course within a garage under a house. The contents accidentally spilt onto the garage floor while the vapors migrated to the basement furnace and ignited. There were devastating consequences to this incident.

If you need to carry or store gasoline, use an approved container. Within a vehicle, make certain it is secured in an upright position away from the passenger area. Anyone who has ever spilt gasoline within a vehicle trunk knows how difficult it is to rid the car of the odor.

Particularly if you're driving a short distance with a safety can, make certain the fill and vent openings are tightly closed. I hesitate to mention this where gasoline expands as it warms in atmospheric air temperatures. The vent then reduces the internal pressure within the container; however, to reduce spillage the State Fire Marshal encourages tightening the vent. I therefore suggest keeping a container within a trunk for shortest time possible. For me, it's typically a ride from the gas station back home for that very reason.

When filling an approved gas container, always place it on the ground, insert the pump nozzle and bring it in contact with the inside of the container. This will reduce the risk of static electricity igniting the vapors.

Lastly, do not store gasoline within a building used for habitation. I've focused on this issue in a prior article because of the importance to occupants and responding firefighters as well.

I hope you find this information helpful!

square-foot addition began in 2007. Symmes Maim & McKee Associates drew up the plans for the building and Gilbane Building Company of Boston has been the main construction group on the project.

Like Santoro, Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro has been pleased with how smoothly the ambitious project has been carried forth. "I think the process has gone extremely well," DeCristofaro said. "Everyone has worked together as a team to make sure this is on time and on budget."

DeCristofaro said the biggest concern right along has been the safety of the students. "The staff provided a real good safety net as it progressed," he said.

A dedication of the completed building is slated for Sunday, Aug. 29, which will include city officials, school faculty and students. Tours of the building will also be held. DeCristofaro is looking to "include as many people as we can," he said.

And although Quincy High sophomore Quintessa Petit is a little sad about saying goodbye to the old building, she realizes the new advancements are a big plus. "I miss the tech - the old building," Petit said. "There are a lot of new changes. There are better rooms and better materials. This building is a lot cleaner than the old building."

Junior Meghan Peterson is looking forward to heading back to school when the construction is 100-percent finished. "It's very new compared to the old building," she said. "There's a lot of new technology that makes it better."

There has been an average of 150 trades people on the project site since nearly the beginning. It features a 750-seat, air-conditioned theater and a huge three-story gymnasium including multi-purpose and fitness/cardiovascular rooms. The building is equipped with wireless Internet and the classrooms have sloped, acoustical ceilings to allow maximum day lighting into the rooms.

'Yakoo' Parade Grand Marshal,
Retiring Principal Koch Service Award Recipient

Dr. Allan Yacubian, Philip Connolly Flag Day Honorees

DR. ALLAN YACUBIAN

The City of Quincy Flag Day Committee will honor Dr. Allan H. Yacubian, known to the North Quincy High School Community as "Yakoo," as grand marshal of the 59th annual Flag Day Parade and Celebration while retiring Marshall Elementary School Principal Philip J. Connolly will receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service award at Saturday evening's patriotic festivities.

Yacubian, whose dental offices are located at 580 Hancock St., is a product of the Quincy Public Schools' system and a 1958 graduate of North Quincy High. Yacubian was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame in 1985. The school's beloved mascot, Yakoo, was modeled after his likeness.

A graduate of Eastern Nazarene College and Tufts University School of Dental Medicine, Yacubian also worked at White Brothers Milk and Howard Johnson's on the boulevard. His father was a cobbler in Norfolk Downs for more than fifty years. Although possessing a quiet demeanor, Dr. Yacubian has and continues to support many of the athletic teams and school-sponsored organizations affecting high school students throughout the city while seeking no recognition in return.

"Dr. Yacubian has contributed so much to our community over the years, and has done it solely to make the City he loves a better place, not for any kind of acknowledge," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "We are tremendously proud to have him as our Grand Marshal this year and show him the appreciation he very much deserves."

The parade and celebration originated in 1951 and was started by the late Richard J. Koch and the Koch Club and focused on honoring our flag and teaching youngsters to take pride in our country. Each year, an award is given in his name honoring an individual who has gone above and beyond to ensure that the youth of our community are given the opportunity to succeed. Philip J. Connolly, who will retire at the close of the school year after 22 years as principal of the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School, will receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service award.

Connolly has dedicated more than 35 years to the youth of Quincy as an educator and principal in the Quincy Public Schools. Connolly was previously a teacher - assistant principal at Snug Harbor Elementary School and the Parker Elementary School. He has co-authored several grants on behalf of the school system and has been responsible for many special programs serving the city's special needs and behavioral growth and development population.

"Mr. Connolly dedicated his career to the children of this City, but more than that, he dedicated his life to the kids. His good works and serviced to our community go well beyond the classroom, and we could not be more proud to honor that commitment on Flag Day," Koch said.

Both gentlemen will be honored at a celebration at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park following the parade which will include a flag raising of a massive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, patriotic music and sing-along, and howitzer salute capped off by a dazzling fireworks display at approximately 9:15 p.m.

Cuts Could Strip Fire Manpower, Increase Response Time

als)."

Puleo and Chief Barron said they've reviewed cost recovery with other fire departments and the program has been successful. The Town of Andover has already adopted the program as have departments in the South and on the West Coast.

Brown Outs

"It's not something we want," Chief Barron said of potential "brown-outs" at the Germantown and Wollaston fire stations which will be reduced as manpower shortages demand.

Germantown will be covered by the Houghs Neck Station and the ladder truck at Wollaston will not respond when "brown-outs" are necessary due to manpower shortages, according to Chief Barron.

The Wollaston Fire Station will operate without its ladder truck, but "that station will still be operation and Engine 4 will continue fully in service," said Chief Barron, adding the "brown-outs" will be ordered periodically as staff demands.

Councillor Joseph Finn called the department outlook, "a serious issue," while Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi warned, "This is about it for this department. It's not safe for the men who work. I don't know how far you can go or what's left."

Raymondi cited the declining number of firefighters slashed by 66 since the mid-1980's.

"I hope that people are listening tonight because no department is being spared," said City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3.

The proposed 2011 budget funds five deputy chiefs, 14 captains, 40 lieutenants and 128 firefighters down from 15 captains, 44 lieutenants, and 134 firefighters.

As for the departments' equipment, Chief Barron reported that funding for equipment has been slashed regularly for years but, "the engines are in good shape."

"The ladder trucks have seen lot of wear," said Chief Barron who, also, described the expensive equipment which must be maintained and replaced on a regular basis and the shortage of funding.

Arienti, also, referred to maintenance and equipment, stating, "When a cut is made to the fire budget, it is strictly manpower. We do not have a line item for vehicles, equipment or gear that we can take from."

"As for the maintenance budget, it we were to need something the repair an apparatus now, the Chief would must likely have to put that piece of apparatus out of service due to no funding, causing greater risk."

As for the future, the city will have to consider a new training area, according to Chief Barron who reminded councillors that the fire department is currently training on private land at the former Fore River Shipyard.

That property will eventually be reclaimed and a new training facility designated.

Grants and Changes

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked whether the city would qualify for additional grants, such as those that funded four firefighters last year.

"We have applied for grants," Chief Barron said but added that fire departments throughout the state and country appear to be under siege. "They're in far worse shape than we are," Chief Barron said of current grant recipients at all levels. He did add that "Local legislators are lobbying" for aid to the city.

Budget problems are widespread among fire departments, according to Chief Barron who said, "Half the chiefs I've spoken to are looking for an opportunity to weather the storm. It's disheartening. It's the reality."

And while Arienti deplored the budget cuts, he also pledged that "the members of the Quincy Fire Fighters will still perform their duties to the best of their ability to try to insure the safety of the residents of the City of Quincy."

Rachel Marie Esquerra of Braintree is attending Boston University next fall, studying Biomedical Engineering. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being a member of the Dance Club, National Honor Society, and Student Council. She was also Vice President of the International Club, and a Peer Tutor in math.

"Fontbonne Academy has changed me in so many ways. Not only was I challenged to work to the best of my abilities, but I was also taught how to budget my time wisely. I learned to find ways to make time for studying, for meetings, activities and for myself. Along with the academic rigors at Fontbonne, I made new friends and gained a confidence in myself I never had before. The most valuable things I take from Fontbonne are the relationships I have made with other students and all my teachers. After four years together, the people I have met at Fontbonne are like a second family to me. I believe Fontbonne has successfully prepared me for future challenges in college and in life."

Fire Department Budget 'Decimated' Says President Of Fire Fighters Association

The Quincy Fire Department is at the lowest point that it has seen in many, many years.

The budget of the Quincy fire has been decimated to the point we cannot perform the duties and responsibilities that need to be performed to guarantee the safety of the members and the people we serve to the standards that we have in the past.

Our numbers have dwindled over the years as other departments have, with the exception that these other departments have come back and we haven't. In the 1970s, there were 278 firefighters on the job. When I was hired back in 1985, we had 248 firefighters; with this budget our numbers will be down below 190 firefighters as of July 1.

The budget of the Quincy Fire Department is approximately 98 percent personnel. When a cut is made to the fire budget it is strictly manpower. We do not have line items for vehicles, equipment, or gear that we can take from. As for the maintenance budget, if we were to need something to repair an apparatus right now, the Chief would most likely have to put that piece of apparatus out of service due to no funding, causing greater risk.

In fiscal 2004, $1 million was removed from our budget and added to another department's budget so the mayor at the time could play a shell game with this money. That year the same department returned approximately $3 million, and we lost the use of Rescue One for over 80 percent of the year and also lost the Aides to the Deputies which are a major factor for the safety of the members at all scenes.

If that money was not taken we could have sustained these cuts without as much safety being compromised. But since that is not the case we are heading down a slippery slope that we cannot afford to be at. In these times when our city is increasing in size and also the added hazards and jobs we are performing we should be increasing in size.

As always, though, the members of the Quincy Fire Fighters will still perform their duties to the best of their ability to try to insure the safety of the residents of the City of Quincy.

Dan Dewey Candidate For State Senator

Daniel M. Dewey, 139 Sonoma Rd., Quincy, announces he is a candidate for State Senate in the Norfolk and Plymouth District that includes Quincy.

Dewey, who is running as a Republican, is seeking the Senate seat being vacated by state Sen. Michael Morrissey who is a candidate for Norfolk County district attorney.

"For years the Beacon Hill candidates have been putting special interests above the interests of our towns and cities. I am running for the State Senate because I know we can do better," Dewey said. Dewey served in the Marine Corps during Vietnam and earned the rank of Sergeant. He earned a B.A. in business from Texas A & M (Kingsville) and went on to earn an M.B.A. and a Masters in criminal justice from Anna Marie College.

Dewey served the community working with juvenile delinquents trying to get them on the right track. He was appointed to the Massachusetts Parole Board and the Governors Advisory Board of Pardons by Governors Weld, Cellucci, and Swift.

DAN DEWEY

Dewey raised his family in Quincy, met his best friends here, and spent his time trying to make this community a better place to live.

Most recently Dewey served as commander of the Quincy Veterans Council and commandant of the Marine Corps League, William R. Caddy Detachment, in Quincy. He is a life member of the Disabled American Veterans Post 29 in Braintree. As a registrar of Voters for the City of Quincy, he was entrusted with supervising clean and fair elections.

If elected state senator, Dewey said he first priority is to get the state budget under control so that local aid funding can be fully restored.

"For years the Beacon Hill politicians have been putting special interests ahead of our communities, paying for their pet projects by cutting local aid and raising your taxes. Today, we see the results of their work: layoffs, increases in taxes and fees, and in many towns Prop 2 1/2 overrides.

"The decisions that directly affect our neighborhoods," Dewey continued, "should be made by the community with financial support from the state. Today, the state dictates policy to the towns through unfunded mandates all the while cutting local aid. That has to change.

"A lean state budget would allow us to save vital local services and provide tax relief for workers and businesses. Replacing the Beacon Hill candidates is the first step in creating new private sector jobs, allowing small businesses to expand, helping our towns keep classroom sizes small, and providing for safe neighborhoods," Dewey said.

"We can do much better for our towns, cities and business. We can do better than ethically challenged legislative leaders who put personal gain above public service. We can do better than the Beacon Hill politicians who only pay lip service to the unemployment problem because they keep getting re-elected year after year.

"In November," Dewey said, "you have the chance to send Beacon Hill a message, and send Dan Dewey to tell them, that we can do better."

Mayor, Council OK Noise Ordinance

and for enforcers and can be amended in the future, according to McNamee who hopes stricter measures will be enacted in the future.

Mayor Thomas Koch must now sign the ordinance and he apparently will do that quickly.

On Tuesday, Koch congratulated McNamee for successfully shepherding the ordinance through the system after more than two years, Councillor McNamee first introduced the issue of noise pollution in February of 2008.

In an official statement, Koch said, "Councillor McNamee deserves great credit for his persistence on this issue. I will be signing the ordinance and look forward to continue working with the councillor and our neighborhoods to address these issues in a way that is responsive and fair to all of the stakeholders."

Once Koch signs the ordinance, it will become effective in 30 days.

Ironically, the council passed an almost identical ordinance a year ago but Koch declined to approve it because he and McNamee believed that stricter noise limits were needed. Councillors then approved a revised ordinance with slightly stricter limits by a 5-4 vote but City Solicitor Jim Timmins ruled the vote invalid and ordered a new advertisement of the revised limits.

In late June, a reversal of one council effectively killed the ordinance for that council session. The ordinance was defeated 5-4.

The ordinance approved Monday had one amendment submitted by Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest who asked that motorboats operated in accord with manufacturer's requirements be excluded.

The council passed the amendment.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin said Monday that Boston actually has more restrictive noise measures in place than Quincy's new ordinance.

Councillor Michael McFarland asked for clarification on the chapter related to "Noise sensitive areas," which have more restrictive noise limits. He suggested the language was so vague it could apply to many areas beyond those with churches, nursing homes, libraries or schools.

No changes were made and no sooner had the full ordinance been approved by the council than McNamee submitted an amendment designating Marina Bay as a "Noise Sensitive Area."

Councillors sent his proposed amendment to committee for further study.

City Joining Sheriff's Reverse 911 System

The system most commonly called Reverse 911 and officially the RANS or Rapid Alert Notification System is funded by grants through Homeland Security, such as the most recent grant of $40,000.

Quincy becomes the fifth municipality in the Norfolk County system, joining current members, Milton, Avon, Braintree and Holbrook.

Bellotti said the system offers residents speedy notification of critical incidents, such as notices of the recent MWRA water emergency or any critical incident.

"We should be ready within a couple of months," said Bellotti. At this time, Bellotti said the Reverse 911 can reach 4000 homes an hour. "We're going to increase that number significantly with more telephone lines."

Bellotti said the goal is to reach every number in "a city the size of Quincy in one to two hours" and he expects the latest Homeland Security grant will allow his department to upgrade and speed up the system.

"We will work with any community to determine if there's (additional) uses for it," said Bellotti, adding, "We're open to the needs of the communities."

In addition to the MWRA emergency, the Reverse 911 has been used to notify Braintree residents of a rash of thefts executed by people claiming to be town employees.

"This Reverse 911 system is so effective at reaching out directly to citizens to notify them about extremely important public safety issues," said Bellotti. "It also is a tool that works perfectly on a regional level without regard to town boundaries."

The computerized system uses map software to allow the user to target a specific geographic area with public announcements tailored to their needs.

"We envision the reverse 911 system as a great tool to keep everyone in Norfolk County as safe and secure as they can be," said Bellotti. "It is another way of using advanced computer technology."

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

Texting has revolutionized how people communicate, but you should not text while driving. If you have questions about auto insurance, please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600. As an independent insurance agency, we are able to offer you the best auto coverage at the most competitive price. We have served the North Quincy community for 53 years and look forward to addressing your insurance questions. Our office is located at 151 Hancock Street.

According to a study addressing the issue of texting while driving, the risk of an accident is four times greater for a driver typing out a text message than for a driver dialing a cell phone. The study, released in August, 2009, by the Transportation Institute at Virginia Tech, also pointed out that the risk of an accident while texting and driving is more than 23 times greater than for a driver who was not distracted by a phone at all. However, a recent survey shows that one-third of teens ages 16 and 17 have texted while driving. The same survey indicates that 48 percent of teens ages 12 to 17 have been in vehicles with drivers who texted.

NOTE While some teens profess to be blasé about texting while driving, others say that the habit scares them and that their parents are also guilty of the behavior.

Old CDs Find New Life in Garden

Q: A friend passed on this tip to me, and I want to pass it along to your readers. I like to start my backyard garden from seeds rather than planting seedlings, but birds are a problem as they fly in and eat the seeds before they sprout. To combat this, my friend told me to put my old, unused CDs to work.

Place stakes all around the garden perimeter – and up the middle if need be – and string sturdy twine along the stakes, wrapping once around each stake to keep it level. Then, run a short piece of string through the center of each CD and tie them to the perimeter string so that they dangle between the string and the ground.

The reflecting, shimmering light and spinning CDs frighten off birds. I've had a lot more success this year getting plants to sprout and get established! – Sara F., Glens Falls, N.Y.

A: Thanks, Sara. That's a pretty brilliant way to reuse old CDs! Keeping birds away from seeds – whether garden vegetables or grass – is an annual challenge, one that novice gardeners and experienced landscapers alike must often face.

Here's a few other ways to discourage birds from nibbling away at freshly sown or planted seeds:

- For small garden plots or spots on the lawn being patched, place stakes in a square around the perimeter and tie string along the perimeter and crisscrossing over the area. Tie strips of old cloth every 9 inches or so.

- Large areas where seeds have been sown – such as several feet of bare lawn – can be covered with a layer of dry straw, which lets water in but discourages birds and other creatures from getting at the seeds.

- Hang wind chimes at the edge of garden plots. The sound sometimes alarms birds and pests and keeps them away.

Finally – and this might not be practical in your neighborhood – but my mother placed her clothesline right next to the garden. She hung out washing several days a week, and rarely had trouble with birds coming around.

HOME TIP: When planting seedlings, place a flattened paper bag or cloth sheet next to you and put excess dirt onto it, so the dirt can be moved easily and won't cover up other plants.

Take Care Of Your Home Away From Home

(NAPSA)-According to the U.S. Census Bureau, more than 3.5 million housing units in the U.S. are for seasonal, recreational or occasional use-from big summer estates and time-share condos to A-frame structures and simple fishing cabins.

"That means these homes are unoccupied a good portion of the year," says insurance expert Charles Valinotti, senior vice president, QBE Regional. He offers tips on how you can minimize property loss and damage for your home away from home:

- Team up with your neighbors-If there are other seasonal homes in your area, get to know the owners and exchange phone numbers. Keeping an eye on each other's property is a good way to quickly learn about wind and hail damage-and take care of it before it gets worse. If a full-time resident isn't nearby, consider hiring someone to periodically patrol your residence.

- Shut off the water-As you prepare to exit your vacation residence for the season, remember to turn off the water. Not doing so can lead to massive water damage from a burst pipe. Valinotti suggests installing an alarm system that notifies a service when water is detected or the temperature dips below a certain level. "The service will contact you, so you'll know about problems sooner rather than later," he says.

- Snuff out fire hazards-Valinotti says he's seen several large losses as a result of portable fire pits, where ashes can smolder long after a homeowner has locked up and left. Before you vacate your vacation home, make sure coals are completely extinguished.

Consider signing on with a central-station alarm company that provides services to monitor burglar and fire alarm systems.

- Discourage break-ins-Burglar alarm systems will summon help to vacation homes in more-populated areas but aren't as effective for isolated cabins, which are more difficult for police to locate. Invest in high-quality dead-bolt locks and post an alarm warning as a deterrent.

Attending to these im-

WHEN IT'S TIME to say good-bye to your vacation place, be sure you've taken the proper precautions so you can enjoy it when you come back.

portant details can go a long way to protect your investment and ensure continued enjoyment of your seasonal home.

Outdoor Do-It-Yourself Projects To Prolong The Life Of Your Home

(NAPSA)-Here's the inside scoop on the exterior of your home: Although it can take a beating from weather and atmospheric conditions throughout the year, the sooner you address the issue, the less likely it is that the damage will lead to more and larger problems. To help, home-improvement expert Spike Carlsen offers a few do-it-yourself projects that could mean more money in your pocket down the road.

Extend the life of your deck for years.

- Check for loose boards and fasteners. For "popped" nails, pound them back in and then drive a 3-inch galvanized drywall screw in next to it to hold the board firmly in place.

- Gunk that's accumulated in the gaps between deck boards can hold moisture that leads to premature rot. To remove it, take an old handsaw and lightly "saw" through each gap. The blade will push the debris out of the gap so your deck can breathe.

Take care of leaky or overflowing gutters.

- Leaky or overflowing gutters can create problems ranging from peeling paint to damp basements.

- Use an old plastic spatula as a minishovel to scoop leaves and debris out of the gutter. If it's too wide, trim one edge.

- Once clean, place a garden hose in the "high end" of the gutter, turn on the water and check for leaks. If there's a leak at a seam, clean the joint and apply permanently waterproof silicone caulk. If there's an actual hole in the gutter, replace it rather than patch it.

Weatherize with silicone caulk and save.

- Air can enter or exit a house through cracks and openings in many places, and leaks can lead to higher energy bills, water damage and mold growth. The upside is that a homeowner can save 10 percent or more on energy bills by air sealing, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

- Not all caulk provides energy savings over time, though. For long-lasting energy savings, choose 100 percent silicone, not acrylic caulk, which can shrink and crack over time, leaving gaps for air and water to seep through. You can use GE Silicone II* Window & Door or Paintable Silicone to seal around windows and doors, as well as in the attic and basement.

The 'Keys' To Homeownership: From Credit Reports To Mortgages

(ARA) - "It's a buyer's market" is a popular headline right now. It's one that's hard to ignore, especially if you're a young adult or even a long-time renter who has been waiting for the right time to pursue the American dream of owning your own home.

Buying your first home can be scary, but as with anything else in life, the right preparation should bring you good results - a home you want and one you can afford.

Whether you are ready to buy a home in the next few months or next few years, preparation is critical.

Thrivent Financial Bank offers the following five "keys" to open the door to homeownership.

Obtain a credit report. Review your credit report prior to starting the home buying process. This will enable you to dispute any incorrect entries and satisfy any derogatory items on your report. You are entitled to one free copy of your credit report every 12 months. Ensuring your credit report is accurate is critical as it is an important element lenders review to determine your credit worthiness for a loan approval.

Establish a budget. Knowing where you spend your money and how much you are able to set aside each month can, first, help you decide if purchasing a house is a viable choice now or if it is something that will have to wait until later. Establishing a monthly budget also helps determine how much house you can afford, which will help you zero in on possible homes to look at. If buying the home you want is not in the cards now, use the opportunity to take a closer look at your spending and savings habits and develop a plan to begin setting money aside for a down payment and monthly mortgage payments.

Secure a down payment. Although there are loan programs that will allow you to purchase a home with no money down, making a down payment is almost always a good idea. The most common sources of a down payment are your savings or a gift of cash. The amount you put down has a direct impact on what your monthly mortgage payment will be and will also determine if you will be required to purchase PMI, or private mortgage insurance.

Understand mortgage options. There are many types of loans available to suit your needs. The following is a list of some of the more common types of loans.

* Fixed rate loan - The interest rate is fixed for the life of the loan. The life of a fixed rate loan may range from 10 to 30 years.

* Adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) - The interest rate is fixed for a certain period of time, but once that period expires your interest rate will adjust according to the terms of the mortgage.

* Negative amortization (pay option) loan - The minimum payment is less than the interest that accrued on the loan. In this loan, your principal balance will increase when you pay less than the interest that accrued.

* Balloon - The interest rate is fixed for a period of time. At the end of that period, your entire balance on your loan is due. (Example. With a five-year balloon, your loan is fixed for five years and at the end of five years your remaining balance on your mortgage is due.)

* Interest only - The minimum payment is just the interest that accrues on the loan.

Also, get an estimated, hypothetical look at your monthly payments for the various types of mortgages by using the Thrivent Financial Bank mortgage calculators. However, these are not meant to replace professional financial advice.

Get pre-approved. Now that you have done your homework and are ready to purchase a home, you should meet with a personal banker to get pre-approved. A pre-approval allows the lender to review your situation and make recommendations prior to entering any formal purchase contract. The pre-approval will establish for you a limit on the dollar amount the lender will commit to your home purchase.

To begin this process, your loan officer will complete an application with you and will also check your credit report. After some analysis, your loan officer will inform you of the various programs and the amount you qualify for. They will also give you a pre-approval letter that you can give to your realtor so they know the price range of homes they can show you.

To be pre-approved, you'll need to submit the following to a potential lender:

* Tax returns and W-2s for the past two years.

* Pay stubs to prove you're currently employed.

* Documentation of other types of income, including investments or a second job.

* Recent bank statements.

These preparations are just the beginning of your journey to homeownership. You'll also want to do your homework for the next stages such as selecting a realtor, house hunting, putting in an offer and getting an inspection.

Buying a home is one of the biggest decisions that you will ever make. In your pursuit of the American dream, make sure you follow the keys to success and enjoy this exciting journey.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, May 30, at approximately 8:20 p.m., Officers Matt Tobin and William Lanergan were dispatched to the Wollaston Yacht Club on Quincy Shore Drive to investigate a report of a stolen boat. Communications advised the officers that the owner was towing the boat back into shore. They also learned that the two suspects were still on the boat.

At that time, the Quincy Police Marine Unit, manned by Lieutenant Robert Gillan and Officer Jamie Curran heard the call and advised dispatch that they were en route to the call as well. Upon arrival at the yacht club, the officers were unable to gain access into the club, but could see a large boat towing a smaller boat approximately twenty five yards offshore.

The officers stood on shore to prevent the suspects from swimming ashore while Marine unit closed in. After several minutes the boat arrived at the docks and the caller allowed us access into the yacht club. Lt. Gillan and Officer Curran arrived on scene at that time as well.

The caller, the Commodore of the Yacht Club, stated that he noticed that his 14-foot Carolina DLX boat, valued at $5,000 was missing from the dock. He thought this was unusual since he tied it there recently and was unlikely that it just floated away. He then scanned the water and observed what he thought was his missing boat, occupied by two people, headed out to sea.

The caller got into a larger boat and was able to catch up to the two suspects. He said that he did not know the male and female suspect on his boat. The two suspects complied with the caller's instructions to shut the engine down and then the caller pulled up next to his boat, secured it with a rope and towed it back to the Yacht Club as he notified the Police.

Once at the dock, the two suspects were given their Miranda Rights by Officer Tobin. When questioned, the suspects had the same story - that they simply borrowed the boat to scatter the ashes of a loved one. The male suspect said the ashes were of a dead cousin while the female suspect said it was her grandmother. The female suspect then admitted that there was no dead relative, that she just wanted to go out for a boat ride, so they walked through the mud and water and onto the boat. At this time, the suspects, one a 23 year old Quincy female and the other a 31 year old Quincy resident, were placed under arrest and charged with "Larceny over $250."

Nice Work!

LIEUTENANT ROBERT GILLAN of the Quincy Police Marine Unit.

Amanda Kirschner Receives Mass Senior Care Foundation Scholarship

Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy announces Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA), Amanda Kirschner of Quincy has been chosen to receive one of 50 scholarships from The Massachusetts Senior Care Foundation.

Ms. Kirschner has worked for Hancock Park, a Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group center, for over 10 years and is considered by all to be a caring and dedicated aide. She recently completed a CNA II training program, a Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group sponsored program, designed to encourage the continuing education of its staff in the field of nursing. Kirschner is currently attending Quincy Community College in the LPN program.

The Mass Senior Care Foundation, the education and research arm of the Massachusetts Senior Care Association has awarded over $2 million in scholarships to more than 1,250 Foundation Scholars since it began supporting long term care workers in 1985. This year's class winners, many of who are seeking nursing degrees, will use the assistance to further their professional development in the long term care setting.

"The scholarships are vital to career development, enabling staff to complete the education required to reach their professional and personal goals," said Mass Senior Care Foundation Executive Director Carolyn Blanks. Many of these women and men have been promoted multiple times, steadily progressing from CNA to LPN to RN.

Shape Up For Summer

(NAPSA)-The sun is shining and spring is quickly turning into summer. That means it's time to shape up for the shorts, sleeveless shirts, swimsuits and sundresses that will be coming out of the closet.

According to a recent survey, half of Americans (52 percent) say that recent warm weather has them more motivated to get in shape for summer, but one in five (21 percent) Americans say that they do not know where to begin. Registered dietitian Tara Gidus offers these suggestions to help you shape up for summer:

1. The kids are into sports, why not you? Join a tennis club or sports team. You will have fun, get fit and socialize all at the same time.
2. Move a bit more. Go on a 15-minute walk during your lunch break or stand up and move in place while you are on the phone.
3. Need an energy break? Instead of reaching for a cup of joe, move your major muscle groups. Doing a set of lunges can increase oxygen to the brain and offers a natural pick-me-up that is better than a cup of coffee.

REGISTERED DIETITIAN
Tara Gidus offers tips to shape up for summer.

4. Rise and shine. Breakfast is a must. You will feel more energetic if you fuel your brain by giving your body the food it desires.
5. Eat light and often. Eat only what you need to sustain yourself for three or four hours, then follow up with a light snack to tide you over until the next meal or snack. Healthy Choice meals are low in calories and satisfy your craving for health and convenience. The meals are portion controlled and feature whole grains and fiber-perfect ways to keep you full and satisfied.
6. S-L-O-W D-O-W-N. Food is meant to be enjoyed, so slow down and taste every bite.

7. Color your plate. Fruits and veggies are colorful and add nutritional value to every meal without adding excess calories.

8. Track your spending. Not dollars but calories. People who keep a record of what they eat lose twice as much weight as people who don't.

9. Shrink your plate. Eating from a smaller plate will help to control portions.

10. Save money by eating at home. Restaurant meals can have high calories along with high prices. Cook at home or bring your lunch to work to save time, money and fuel. Instead of ordering takeout or heading to a restaurant, try Healthy Choice Café Steamers. With varieties like General Tso's Spicy Chicken and Roasted Chicken Marsala, you can enjoy a great meal without the added cost and calories.

By increasing your activity level, eating healthy foods and watching your calorie consumption, you will not only fit into your summer clothes, you will look great in them. Most importantly, you will feel better and be healthier.

How To Buy Safe, Affordable Medication

(NAPSA)-Good news for an increasing number of Americans is that information on where to get the medication they need at a price they can afford is at their fingertips.

Medication costs in the United States continue to rise, making it difficult for many people, especially those on fixed incomes. Consumers who take daily "maintenance medications" for such things as diabetes, high blood pressure, high cholesterol and a variety of other medical conditions can also feel the financial squeeze of high prescription costs.

While there are many online pharmacies around the world that sell drugs at significantly reduced prices, they do so with varying degrees of oversight and reliability. So how can consumers know whom to trust?

Consider this helpful checklist of five questions that consumers should ask before ordering any medication online:

- 1) Is the pharmacy licensed and regulated in its home country?
- 2) Does the pharmacy require a written, signed prescription from the patient's doctor in order to fill the prescription?
- 3) Does the pharmacy guarantee patient privacy and confidentiality of records and contact information?

4) Are the medications sold made by leading brand-name manufacturers?

5) Does the pharmacy have a licensed pharmacist reviewing orders, and is the pharmacist accessible to patients for questions?

"It is possible to find safe, affordable prescription medications online," says Tim Smith of the Canadian International Pharmacy Association. His organization's members are licensed retail pharmacies in Canada that have a well-established history of filling millions of U.S. prescriptions a year, at prices up to 80 percent less than those at U.S. pharmacies.

"Patient safety is a top priority for licensed and regulated pharmacies," says Smith. Although his group has a perfect safety record, "numerous unregulated 'rogue pharmacies' exist and patients need to use caution by ordering only from trusted sources."

For more information and guidance on ordering safe, affordable prescriptions online, visit www.ciparx.ca or call (204) 453-6586.

NON-SPECIFIC LOW BACK PAIN

For most people, low back pain usually resolves spontaneously after a few days. On the other hand, about 10% to 20% of the population must deal with chronic low back pain. While many cases can be attributed to such identifiable physical causes as herniated discs, pinched nerves, arthritis, or osteoporotic fractures, others cannot be traced to any apparent cause. Such cases of non-specific low back pain, which is the most common variety, are more likely to occur as we get older. Weak muscles in the back and abdomen are likely to be contributing factors, as is lack of exercise. For non-specific low back pain, adopting an exercise regimen and a program of chiropractic treatment may bring real benefit.

Do you suffer with low back pain? We will only accept you as a patient if we sincerely believe we can help you. Let us at the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC help you live your life to the fullest. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we provide professional chiropractic care for the entire family. Periodic spinal examinations to locate and correct vertebral subluxations should be a part of every family's health routine. The body talks to us on many levels about its needs - we can teach you how to listen. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Among the neurological ailments reported by U.S. patients, only headaches are more common than low back pain.

THE 13TH ANNUAL SQUIRREL RUN Road Race will take place this Saturday at Pageant Field. The race, named after Jimmy "The Squirrel" Kennedy is one of the largest charity road races held annually in Quincy. Kennedy was 31 when he lost his battle with ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease). Front row from left, Kristen Powers, Executive Director Park, Cemetery and Forestry Department and Mary (Kennedy) Peretti, Kennedy's mother. Road Race Held In Memory of Jimmy Kennedy 13th Annual Squirrel Run June 12 At Pageant Field

The 13th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, also known this year as the Squirrel Run XIII, a five-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day will be held Saturday, June 12 at Pageant Field.

This year's race theme will honor ALS patient George Mazareas. Runners and walkers will be sporting tee-shirts imprinted with the Greek phrase, Molo n label, which corresponds roughly to the modern English phrase, "Bring It On!"

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund, a non-profit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to participate in the five-mile run and 2.5-mile walk that begins with registration at 8 a.m. The 2.5-mile fitness walk starts at 9 a.m. followed by the five-mile run at 10 a.m. The USA Track & Field New England Association officially sanctions the course.

The cost is $20 on the day of the event; all participants will receive a race tee shirt; numbers will not be mailed prior to the race.

In addition to the race and walk, the day will also be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments, and awards for competitive runners in 15 age divisions for men and women. There will be trophies, gift certificates, and other awards in addition to Red Sox tickets.

Junior Kori Sorensen Finished With 25 Strikeouts 20 Innings Later: Quincy's Season Ends With 1-0 Loss

By SEAN BRENNAN

A historic pitching performance by junior Kori Sorensen (20 innings, 25 strikeouts) was not enough to lift the Quincy Presidents past Dartmouth High School in a Division I South Sectional preliminary round affair last Saturday. The Presidents lost 1-0.

The marathon game ended in inning number twenty when Dartmouth, the 26th seed in the field of 28, scored the winning run on a bunt single. The game-winning base hit was just the fourth allowed by Sorensen in the contest.

Quincy, which finished the 2010 season with a 15-6 overall record, had been seeded seventh in the sectionals, and hosted Dartmouth on its home field (Mitchell-McCoy), but despite a magnificent pitching clinic by the all-star Sorensen, Quincy's offense managed only six hits. Dartmouth hurler Caisie Cadorette had a game to remember as well, striking out 19 Presidents batters to earn the win.

The loss brought an abrupt end to a successful regular season for Quincy. The Presidents opened the season on a tear (at one point running their record to 12-1 overall). Two late-season defeats to Middleboro HS eliminated Quincy from contention for a Patriot League Fisher Division crown, but, the program had high hopes entering the tournament and an opportunity to play two home games before the South Sectional quarterfinals was within reach. Unfortunately for the Presidents they came up short.

The 20-inning affair, which amounts to almost three full high school softball games, may have ended Quincy's season, but according to head coach Roger Bacchieri, his team left everything out on the diamond.

"It was a well-played game by two very good teams," he said. "I was sad for the girls, especially my seniors, that it came to an end because we did have high hopes for a tournament run. The finality of it hit them when they left the field and you could tell from the looks on their faces that they were mentally and physically drained, but they have nothing to hang their head about because they gave everything they had."

Sorensen, who will return for her senior season in 2011, held Dartmouth hitless from the third inning through the tenth, and, according to Bacchieri, the idea of her ever coming out of the game was never even considered.

"(Kori) is such a tough kid," he said. "She is a competitor and even if we had tried to take her out she wouldn't have let us. She could have pitched another 20 innings if she had to."

Bacchieri also recognized the effort of senior catcher Olivia Berry. Sorensen may have thrown 20 innings, but it was Berry who crouched for 20 frames on a hot and humid Saturday afternoon.

"Olivia was behind the plate for all 20 innings," he said. "Her toughness is unquestioned. Just like Kori, there was no way she was going to come out of that game."

Quincy did have scoring chances in the late innings but was unable to capitalize. In the 15th inning, the Presidents had the potential game-winning run thrown out at the plate, and in the bottom of the 20th, Quincy got a runner to second base.

"We had some chances but I have to give credit to Dartmouth, they played a great game" said Bacchieri. "The team gave me everything they had. It wasn't like we gave the game away. It really was a well played softball game by both teams."

QHS Baseball

The Quincy Presidents were set to play Franklin High School Tuesday night in a South Sectional quarterfinal game. The Presidents defeated Silver Lake HS in comeback fashion last week, 7-5, in a first round game.

Results from both games and a potential semifinal game will appear in next week's Quincy Sun.

Lost To Franklin In Opening Round of Tourney Quincy Girls Lacrosse Makes Strides In 2010

By JOE REARDON

When Kerry Duffy graduated from UMass-Dartmouth, seven years ago, she knew that starting a lacrosse program at Quincy High School, and having it succeed, would be a long process.

The Presidents have made huge strides over the past few seasons and this spring Duffy's talented squad fought its way into the Div. I tourney for the first time in school history. The fact that Quincy fell in the opening round to Franklin couldn't take away from its stellar 8-8-1 campaign in the perennially tough Patriot League.

"When I started the program, no one ever heard of lacrosse," said Duffy. "These are all kids who never played until they got to high school. Our goal was to make the

America FC U14 Team Earning Accolades

The America FC Under-14 boys' team was one of three AFC Revolution teams that won their divisions this spring in the MA Soccer Conference (MASC), a statewide developmental youth soccer league. The other two teams were the AFC U10 boys and U12 girls.

The U14 Revolution boys went undefeated in MASC's third division. During the season the team remained undefeated even though it was matched up against progressively harder opponents from MASC's second and first division.

The team amassed a good enough record to qualify for the MAPLE Qualifying Tournament this weekend at Lancaster. MAPLE is the state's top or premiere youth soccer league. If the team plays well against four other statewide U14 boys teams they will have an opportunity to play next spring as an U15 team against seven other teams throughout MA. Also, should the team qualify, it will be the first time a Quincy-based boys' team has earned entry into the challenging MAPLE league.

The AFC U14 Revolution team included 11 Quincy residents and one each from Milton, Dorchester, and Randolph. Joining the team this weekend from the AFC U13 team will be more Quincy youth soccer players. They include backup goalie David DeVico, forward/midfielder Carlos Barbosa, and defenders Jimmy Dalton and Sean O'Connor.

U14 defender James Abundis will miss the tournament due to injury and midfielder Roy Bandar will miss the tournament as well

Strikers FC: 2010 Cape Cod Challenge U-11 Runner-Up

The Hancock Strikers U-11 Girl's soccer team, a new premier soccer club based in Quincy, recently completed their successful inaugural season by finishing in second-place at the 2010 Cape Cod Challenge held over the Memorial Day weekend.

The Strikers cruised through their preliminary round without allowing a goal and finished first overall in the White Division. A 1-0 victory over the East Long Meadow Spartans, a 2-0 win over Tolland, CT and a 0-0 tie against Falmouth ensured the Strikers advanced into the semifinal round.

In the semis, the Strikers defeated the Ludlow Junior Lions, 3-2, on penalty kicks; after finishing regulation and sudden death OT tied at 1-1, the Strikers advanced with a one-goal advantage in PKs.

The Strikers season came to an end following a 1-0 hard-fought loss to the Berlin Bash in the championship round.

Don Martin and Gerry Hanley coach the Hancock Strikers, a club soccer team that competes in the MA Premier Soccer League (MAPLE). MAPLE offers a league structure based solely on merit and exists to provide competitive play for teams interested in the highest level of youth soccer.

The Hancock Strikers finished tied for third overall in their MAPLE division this spring.

QYS Lady Spartans Win Foxboro Cup 2010

The Quincy Youth Soccer Under-14 Lady Spartans, over the Memorial Day weekend, competed in and won the annual Foxboro Cup played at Foxboro High School.

This year's team, consisting of girls from several teams of QYS as well as three players from Stoughton, defeated King Phillip, 3-0, to earn the championship trophy.

The format for the Foxboro Cup begins with a round-robin first-round tournament. The Lady Spartans finished this round with a 2-0-1 record with 14 goals for and three goals against. The team tied King Phillip (0-0), and beat Easton (3-0) and Foxboro (11-3) to finish second in their respective sectional.

In the semifinals, the Lady Spartans defeated Walpole, 5-0, behind a strong defensive game plan and timely scoring. The win advanced Quincy into the championship round against King Phillip.

In the finals, the two evenly matched teams played to a 0-0 halftime score. Quincy came out early in the second half with focused determination and took control of the contest. Rachel O'Driscoll scored the team's first goal and Quincy quickly added to that advantage with two additional goals in a span of 1:30. Delia Devane scored the second goal and the final tally came of the foot of Shayley Monahan on a penalty kick.

Rachel Berkowsky of Stoughton was the team's number one goalkeeper throughout the tournament.

Lady Spartans head coach Dana Santilli said about his team this year, "(I) honestly did not know what to expect when we put girls together from three Quincy teams and three girls from Stoughton. However, after watching the girls welcome the Stoughton players so openly to the team and seeing how well the girls performed, we all believed that the girls would make it to the finals. Winning the tournament was simply icing on the cake."

The Lady Spartans will be attending a New England Revolution game on June 27 as part of a "Night of Champions" where they will have a team name on the jumbotron as well as a team photo on the field prior to the game.

tournament. Last year it came down to the last game and we missed by a couple of goals."

Duffy had a nice mix of senior leadership with a handful of juniors and sophomores. Quincy also had a pair of all-stars in wing Meghan McCarthy and Brienne Phelan. Phelan, who will attend Mount Holyoke in the fall, is the best player in the school's history. She had a monster campaign this spring, finishing with 94 points on 68 goals and 26 assists. Phelan graduates as Quincy's all-time leader in points, career goals, single-season goals, and both career and single-season assists.

McCarthy found the back of the net early and often this season, finishing with 56 goals and 19 assists.

The Presidents had a third player with a skillful scoring touch in captain Anne Bythorow. An aggressive weapon from the attack position, she had 25 goals and 11 assists.

"She was our most important player," said Duffy. "Without her we don't do much."

With half the team coming back, Duffy has a strong core of players who finally have tournament experience under their belt. She's relying on the shutdown defense of Amanda Sullivan and Becca Shea. Both were rock solid in front of goaltender Sarah Ahola. Quincy's senior keeper finished the season with 140 saves in her first season between the posts for the Presidents.

The highlights during the season were numerous. After losing to Pembroke last year, the Presidents whipped the Titans in the first game of the spring with a five-goal cushion. The Presidents played a tough Plymouth North squad, falling by just a goal. And playing in the tough Patriot League against the likes of Hingham, Duxbury, Scituate and Hanover toughened Quincy for its tourney contest.

"It's not fun getting beat badly but it helps you get better," said Duffy. "We beat North (Quincy), that's always fun."

Amanda Hyslip and Victoria Wallace are both strong defensively and Duffy sees the team possibly returning to the tourney in 2011.

"A lot of these kids had not made the tournament on any team," Duffy said. "We keep getting better and better every year, so it's nice."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Choosing to work with someone you once thought might have been disloyal is a courageous move. The logical next step is to talk things out so there'll be no reason for raising suspicions again.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take your time making a decision about a personal or work-related relationship. New facts are still coming in, and you'll want to know the full story before you take a definitive step.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Expect to learn something new about an old problem. This could provide some insight into how the problem began, and why it still defies efforts to find a resolution. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An uneasy work-related relationship can be eased with compromises by both sides. The parties might consider putting the agreed-upon changes in writing in case of a future misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Oh, you lucky Felines: Your romantic aspects are in absolutely purrfect form. Don't be surprised at how especially attentive the ladies and gentlemen in your life are going to be this week.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Looking to prove yourself in a difficult situation is laudable. But try paying more attention to advice from experienced contacts. It could help you avoid time-wasting missteps.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business decision seems easy enough to make based on what you know. But this week could bring new facts to light, and you might have to do some heavy rethinking.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Feeling sure about the steps you expect to take is great. But you may need to share a few dollops of that confidence with those who have some doubts about your plans.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A sense of well-being dominates much of the week. A slightly depressed mood could set in on the weekend. But being with family and friends helps shoo it away.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You appear to be walking your life's path like the sure-footed Goat you are. But someone might feel you could do better. Listen to the advice, but make up your own mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With positive signs growing stronger, Aquarians could find themselves facing choices that are each too good to turn down. Best advice: Go for the one you feel most comfortable with.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you know might need your comfort and wisdom during a particularly difficult period. Your encouraging words help restore self-confidence and rebuild strength.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your kindness to all who need you is always appreciated and sets a fine example for others to follow.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

On Flag Day, June 14, let us fly 'Ole Glory' proudly. Let us take pride in the knowledge that when OUR flag was born it brought into the world a new concept of government; a government OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE, and FOR THE PEOPLE. That concept could be based on no other principle than that of which our flag is the symbol; the PRINCIPLE OF FREEDOM.

Let us prove our loyalty and appreciation by believing, loving and maintaining in our minds and hearts that founding principle of our great and precious symbol, the LAW OF HUMAN FREEDOM.

Let us salute that flag, and pledge allegiance to it; let us never fail to remember that fundamental and universal principal of Freedom, of which our symbol is:

Flag Day Tribute To Old Glory

MEMBERS OF THE Hancock Strikers F.C. soccer team were among the youth groups participating in the City of Quincy's 59th Flag Day Observance. The parade, because of inclement weather, was cancelled. Festivities were shifted to Sunday at Pageant Field.

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The bitter 2011 budget review ended Monday when City Council voted 8-0 to approve a fiscal year 2011 budget of $229,884,084 as recommended by the Finance Committee. The budget is effective July 1 through June 30, 2011.

That sum is roughly 1% or just over $1 million lower

Project Would Expand Green Space At City Hall, United First Parish Church; Other Outdoor Features

Adams Green Final Schematic Concept Unveiled

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The final schematic plan for the Adams Green – a project that would expand public space along Hancock Street in front of City Hall and United First Parish Church as well as alter the traffic pattern through the heart of downtown Quincy – was unveiled at a public presentation June 9 at the Crane Public Library.

Speakers included Quincy Planning Director Dennis Harrington, Richard Heapes, partner of Street-Works which the city has partnered with for redeveloping the downtown; Dean Rizzo, co-director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and Craig Halvorson and Bob Uhlig of Halvorson Design Partnership which developed the Adams Green plan after receiving input from city officials and residents.

Heapes called the Adams Green concept a cornerstone of the Quincy Center redevelopment initiative. "If you can only do one thing, this is the thing to do," he said referring to Adams Green. "We completely support the plan."

The Adams Green is also supported by the Quincy

Chamber of Commerce.

"We are wholeheartedly in support of this project," Rizzo said. "Traffic and other areas of concern can be flushed out. It's going to take some time but we will see this project come to fruition."

Quincy Planning Director Dennis Harrington said the Planning Board looks forward to endorsing the plan. He acknowledged the plan will continue to undergo review, especially the traffic reconfiguration. The plan calls for eliminating traffic on Hancock Street south from Coddington Street to Granite Street. Instead, northbound and southbound traffic would flow in front of the former Quincy Savings Bank and Adams Buildings on Hancock Street from Chestnut Street to Temple, Coddington and Washington Streets. Presently, there are two lanes of traffic in front of the Adams Building – both heading north on Hancock Street.

"Much more traffic engineering will be done in the future. We believe the (Adams Green) traffic plan will work provided the course project is complete,"

Harrington said.

It is likely changing the traffic flow on Hancock Street would require state and city council approval. The state would need to sign off on the project if funding from the Massachusetts Department of Transportation is secured, said Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon.

Designers said the Adams Green project is a vision for the future – and would create a civic open space in the heart of Quincy. The plan would enhance and expand the public space connecting United First Parish to old City Hall. The space would allow opportunities for people to sit and gather as well as provide public areas for functions and ceremonies.

The Adams Statues – one of John Adams and the other of Abigail and a young John Quincy Adams – may be relocated so they are closer together. They currently face each other from opposite sides of Hancock Street near

Puleo: City Funding Well-Above State Average School Budget Woes Ease; 140 Employees Recalled

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Panic over the school department's 2011 budget eased a bit this week as School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said over 80 employee positions will be reinstated, thanks to $3.6 million in restored funding, deferred salary hikes, fees and unemployment savings.

"The additional funds would not have been possible without Mayor Koch and the QEA (the teachers' union)," Dr. DeCristofaro told the Finance Committee Monday.

School officials anticipated 2014 layoffs and that number has now been reduced to 118.6.

Originally, the layoff numbers had been labeled catastrophic after the school issued 240 layoff notices. According to James Mullaney, III, laid-off teachers may bump into another position provided they have the proper license and seniority so the department must protect itself by issuing considerably more layoff notices than needed.

The larger number was sent because all pink slips must be delivered before May 30.

Mullaney said that a total 140 employees will be recalled.

DeCristofaro then outlined the source of the new funds which includes $2.3 million in QEA salary savings, $120,000 in added rental fees, athletic fees, and the institution of transportation fees, along with over $800,000 in savings on unemployment payments.

The added funds will restore 10 classroom teachers, the literacy program, deans in the high school, 16.5 full day kindergarten teachers, a half-time music teacher and one full-time art teacher, and extra-curricular programs.

In addition, there will be funding for such areas as two guidance positions, and assistant principal, and six office aides, foreign lan-

Committee Seeks Donations To Support Quincy Public Schools

The Quincy School Committee worked with the City Council and Mayor in 2003 to approve a fund for residents to make charitable contributions to supplement the educational needs of the Quincy Public Schools. As part of the City's property tax and excise tax bill there is a section whereby concerned citizens can make voluntary contributions to this education fund. Donations must be marked for education. This is a separate fund maintained by the Director of Finance, Nick Puleo.

The Quincy Educational Fund Committee and School Committee are hoping more funds will come in due to the City's financial situation. By making a charitable contribution to the fund, taxpayers who itemize on their income tax return will be able to claim a tax deduction. This is a win-win situation; it is good for children, our educational system and taxpayers.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On June 22, 1775, Congress issues $2 million in bills of credit. The bills, known at the time as "Continental," notably lacked the then de rigueur rendering of the British king. Instead, some of the notes featured likenesses of Revolutionary soldiers and the inscription "The United Colonies."
- On June 27, 1844, Joseph Smith, the founder and leader of the Mormon religion, is murdered when an anti-Mormon mob breaks into a jail where he is being held in Carthage, Ill. Smith claimed in 1823 that he had been visited by a Christian angel named Moroni, who spoke to him of an ancient Hebrew text that had been lost for 1,500 years.
- On June 23, 1902, Daimler-Motoren-Gesellschaft first registers "Mercedes" as a brand name, feeling that the non-German name might sell better in France. The famous Mercedes symbol, a three-point star, was registered as a trademark in 1909.
- On June 26, 1948, U.S. and British pilots begin airlifting food and supplies to Berlin after the city is isolated by a Soviet Union blockade. By July - 15, an average of 2,500 tons of supplies was being flown into the city every day.
- On June 25, 1950, armed forces from communist North Korea smash into South Korea, setting off the Korean War. The United States quickly sprang to the defense of South Korea. More than 55,000 American troops were killed in the three-year conflict.
- On June 24, 1975, an Eastern Airlines jet crashes near John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York City, killing 115 people. The Boeing 727 was brought down by wind shear during severe thunderstorms with heavy winds and rain. Seven passengers and two flight attendants survived the fiery crash.
- On June 21, 1982, John W. Hinckley, Jr., who shot President Ronald Reagan, was found not guilty of attempted murder by reason of insanity. In the trial, Hinckley's defense attorneys argued that their client had a pathological obsession with the 1976 film "Taxi Driver," in which there is an attempt to assassinate a fictional senator.

Something Borrowed

The revitalization of Quincy Center reminds me of that old wedding-day adage: something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue.

The old: downtown itself – in a historic sense. Old City Hall – also known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center – is 166 years old. United First Parish – its across-the-street neighbor – is 182 years old.

The new: the Quincy Center concourse. The roadway is well on its way to completion evidenced by the heavy equipment, lane closures and traffic signage along Mechanic Street and Revere Road. Once completed, the concourse will have a significant impact on traffic through Quincy Center. Officials hope it will also key a resurgence in the Center's retail and commercial areas.

Which brings me to the borrowed. Specifically, the plan to create more open space around old City Hall and the United First Parish Church. The plan – dubbed the Adams Green – would eliminate the northbound side of Hancock Street from City Hall to Granite Street and replace it with green space and a promenade for visitors and residents to linger and boost foot traffic in the retail district. With the northbound side of Hancock Street converted to open space, two-way traffic would be reconfigured in front of the Adams Building (which today has two lanes of southbound traffic). The precise traffic patterns have yet to be nailed down.

But the idea is to make the area more pedestrian friendly and a place where people want to go. With more green space and expanded sidewalks, visitors can grab a cup of coffee, pick up the local weekly newspaper and enjoy their beverage on a shaded bench or under an umbrella. Then hit some of the stores and see what treasures they can find, the idea goes.

The plan looks terrific on paper. And maybe someday it will happen.

But the general concept is not new. In fact, a strikingly similar idea was pitched 21 years ago during the mayoral campaign of 1989.

In late October, 1989 – a week before the election – mayoral contender and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell proposed a National Urban Park for the Hancock Street area between City Hall and United First Parish Church. Sen. Ted Kennedy, in a visit to Quincy, announced his support for the project while endorsing O'Connell for mayor over eventual winner James Sheets.

The Adams Green project and the Urban Park are not identical plans. But they share similarities. Among them:

- Closing and landscaping Hancock Street between City Hall and the United First Parish Church.
- Traffic rerouted around the church, opening Washington and Temple Streets to two-way traffic while merging with Hancock Street.
- Expanding green space in McIntyre Mall and planting more trees.

O'Connell's plan had one significant difference: it called for street and sidewalk improvements between the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansion.

But reading the press account of O'Connell's plan, much of the reasoning behind it then resonates today.

Here's what Kennedy had to say about the plan 21 years ago:

"Quincy stands second-to-none in its historical heritage and this new park will recognize and highlight this heritage. Federal grants in other communities have restored civic pride in those communities and contributed to the revitalization of their local communities."

And this:

"This project will serve as a catalyst for further improvements in downtown Quincy. It will be an attraction, bringing tourists and recognition to the city."

And this:

"United First Parish Church is an island isolated by traffic and Peter O'Connell feels the burial place of our Presidents deserve better. (John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives are entombed in the church's crypt.)

"This plan is an opportunity to rectify that. To accord the tribute and respect the city's most revered historical site deserves."

O'Connell, in proposing the park, said it would "enhance the image of Quincy Center by recognizing its history, smoothing the traffic flow and bringing new vitality to the downtown." He feels the same way today.

Another person who supports the basic concept of the Adams Green is the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church. He was among the interested parties attending a public presentation on the Adams Green last week at the Crane Library.

Just as it did 21 years ago, the park concept still has merit. And looking at some of the renderings of today's Adams Green proposal generates excitement and enthusiasm for the project. Sure, there are details to be worked out, among them traffic and parking.

Some even wonder how old City Hall will receive deliveries if there's no roadway in front of that granite structure. But if you can put a man on the moon, then you can deliver paper and other supplies to City Hall using another point of egress.

The Adams Green is full of nice features such as enjoying an outdoor concert at the elevated amphitheater in McIntyre Mall. Or picture yourself having a bite to eat on the sidewalk outside a café. Or leisurely window shopping looking for a certain something for someone special. Or just sitting and relaxing on a lunch hour, after a long day's work, or on the weekend.

Some may wonder if the Urban Park initiative would have come to fruition in an O'Connell mayoral administration. And what the downtown would look like now had it happened 20 years ago instead of resembling a new plan called the Adams Green.

The important thing is the Adams Green plan has taken significant steps forward. And it's a priority of the current mayoral administration – and groups are working together to move it forward.

So that's the borrowed: the Urban Park.

As for something blue ... we could always use a little more police presence downtown.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1922 postcard view of the Wollaston Boulevard looking south with Beach Street on the right. The house of the corner, known then as The Wollaston Beach Inn, was one of the first built along here many years before the Boulevard was built in 1908. The small store attached to the left of the house was a grocery and provisions shop at the time, but served as home to many different seasonal shops over the years. One of the last was Balducci's-by-the-Bay, a branch of Balducci's Sub and Pizza Shop up the Downs. That little building is now gone as is the ancient Elm tree, one of a group of trees that shaded a small beach here in the 19th century. On the left some of the youngsters are sitting on a fence that overlooked Sachem's Brook, which was an open waterway all the way up to East Milton. Today, the brook is piped from its source to a culvert that empties between the yacht clubs. The first seawall along here was built a few years ago after this picture was taken. Koch: City Will Get Through This Financial Crisis

This week, the Quincy City Council unanimously approved our administration's Fiscal Year 2011 budget, one that is undoubtedly the most difficult in at least a generation and one that will see substantial spending cuts in virtually every area of government.

I am grateful to the Council for its advice, hard work and deliberation on the budget and every issue facing our City.

These are historic times faced by cities and towns not only across Massachusetts, but across America, and our budget reflects this reality. But through this process, the strength of our community has become abundantly clear to me, as has my resolve that we will not only withstand this crisis, but emerge a stronger community with potential beyond any City in the Commonwealth.

We entered this budget process with a single primary objective: Protect the core services the City provides without raising total property tax collections beyond new growth. As our families continue to grapple with job loss, stagnant wages, and a national economy churning slowly toward recovery, the thought of passing all of government's struggles onto our residents was simply not tenable.

So while many cities and towns in Massachusetts are raising property taxes to the legal limit and considering Proposition 2.5 overrides, Quincy for the second consecutive year will not raise any additional taxes beyond what is created by new commercial developments, home additions, and other growth factors.

The caveat attached to this policy is the inevitability of major spending cuts and the difficult decisions that must follow.

For this budget, that means at least 9 percent spending cuts in the Department of Public Works, Library, Parks Department, Inspectional Services, and a number of smaller City Hall departments. For a number of these departments, the two-year total reduction is approaching 20 percent.

Our Police Department will maintain critical patrol services, but its budget will be cut by 3.7 percent and 9 civilian employees. Our neighborhood fire stations will remain open, while the Fire Department will be cut by 3.7 percent, which will unfortunately mean losing a number of firefighters.

The School Department's bottom-line budget is reduced by 3.6 percent, or about $3 million, from the Fiscal Year 2010 budget. The cost of growth in the School Department — it would need a 7 percent budget increase to maintain all services at current levels — required further reductions beyond the bottom-line cut.

Thanks to the leadership of Superintendent DeCristofaro and the hard work of my fellow school committee members amid incredibly challenging circumstances, we will keep class sizes within School Committee guidelines and preserve important programs such as early literacy, full-day kindergarten, foreign languages and extracurricular activities. Make no mistake, these cuts are serious, but anyone who suggests that the Quincy Public Schools will cease to be one of the best in the Commonwealth as we face these historic difficulties could not be more wrong. Our commitment to our children remains our highest priority, as education spending continues to take up a larger share of our total City budget as it has every year since we have taken office.

It is important to note that our ability as a community to confront our challenges has been greatly strengthened by the cooperation and sacrifices of all our City unions, all of which have agreed to some form of wage deferral over the last two years. In some cases, unions, including our police and city hall workers, have twice deferred contracted raises, and our teachers and firefighters last year led the way to allow us to join the state health insurance program, an agreement that saved $10 million in the first year alone. We are all in this together, and our employees clearly recognize that fact.

Above all, I wish to extend my gratitude to the people of this great City. This spring, we held community meetings on our finances across the City attended by more than 1,000 people. The questions were serious, the dialogue was honest and the advocacy was passionate. Most importantly, it reaffirmed the fact that the strength of our City is in its people, and it is exactly that strength that will carry us through this financial crisis.

To Benefit The William James Falco Foundation 'Footprints Of Billy' Fundraiser Saturday At Florian Hall

Organizers are planning a fundraiser launch to support the charity "Footprints of Billy - the William James Falco Foundation" for June 19th at Florian Hall in Dorchester.

"Footprints of Billy" is a charity in the memory of little Billy Falco of Weymouth who passed away suddenly in December, 2009 at the age of 14 months.

The charity was formed to help support children and families on the South Shore. Proceeds will also help support organizations that conduct research for sudden unexplained death of children (SUDC). Charity organizers are also hoping to grow a scholarship program to help area children advance their education.

The event will run from 7 pm to midnight. Tickets are $20 in advance or $25 at the door and all proceeds will benefit the "Footprints of Billy" charity.

Additional information on the charity and the event can be found on the event's Facebook site.

Florian Hall is located at 55 Hallett St. in Dorchester.

The event will feature music, dessert, candy bar, fun, live auctions, and many raffles. Prizes will include unique sports memorabilia, gift certificates to the area's best restaurants and shops, sporting event tickets, and much more.

The entertainment will feature East Coast Accapella, an award-winning street acapella group. Also on the lineup card will be Lil' Phunk, an entertaining children's hip hop dance group. The entertainment will be rounded out by a reunion of the acoustic band The Painkillers.

Chris Falco, owner of Falco Masonry & Excavation, has been using their office as the charity's headquarters. All construction has been put hold now for over a month and until the launch party is over. "We felt the best way to honor the memory of our beloved son Billy was to help other children," said Chris and Lorinda Falco, parents of Billy. "From our own personal tragedy, we are hoping to help others. We would have taught Billy to be kind to others so we hope Billy will live on and leave his "Footprint" through our work with his charity."

Tickets can be purchased in advance by contacting Chris Falco at chris@footprintsofbilly.org or their office at (781) 331-7500.

Donations can be sent to: Footprints of Billy 52 Blackstone Rd. Weymouth Ma 02191

Discussions are under way for recreational projects in Weymouth. Organizers have talked to Weymouth Mayor Sue Kay about improving Beale Park. Discussions are also being held with Fr. Blaney at St. Jerome's School about a new playground at St. Jerome's School in Billy's memory.

"We're hoping to make the first fundraiser a successful one so we can help as many children and families as possible," added Bill Falco, little Billy's grandfather and former Quincy police chief. "I want to thank the countless people who have donated to the event and supported this wonderful cause."

Public Tours At Josiah Quincy House

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, will be open for tours Saturday, July 10 and Sunday, Aug. 7.

Tours will be offered at 1, 2, 3 and 4 p.m. Residents of Quincy are admitted free; regular admission is $5.

The Quincy House will also be open for tours Saturday, Sept. 25 from 1 to 5 p.m. (tours on the hour, last tour starts at 4 p.m.) for school programs, and by special appointment. Call 617-994-5930 for information.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gagne sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

The Quincys played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard.

More than 100 visitors attended the free tours of the Quincy House June 5.

HazMat, Medicine Drop-Off Day A Success - Over 400 Cars

Over 400 cars came through the DPW on Sea Street June 5, to drop off Household Hazardous Waste and dispose of unused medicine.

The record-breaking number of cars meandered out of the DPW parking lot at 55 Sea St. stretching all the way to Wendy's on Southern Artery. For the first time the DPW combined the familiar Hazmat Drop-off with the relatively new Prescription Drug Drop-off to increase participation and save money.

Sponsored by the Mayor's Drug Task Force, the unused medicine collection portion of the day was funded with a grant secured by Arlene Goldstein of Impact Quincy. Dozens of residents showed-up at the DPW Saturday to rid the community of over 3,000 doses of highly addictive prescription drugs including barrels of uncontrolled substances and used needles.

Participants were greeted by members of EDAN (End Drug Abuse Now.) Quincy's grass roots volunteer anti-drug abuse volunteers.

Residents were then instructed to leave the material with Quincy police officers. Volunteer pharmacist Susan Barret performed sorting and counting. Then, the material was placed into the appropriate containers for destruction.

The prescription drug drop-off event grew out of concerns by members of the Mayor's Drug Task Force that many of today's drug addicts began their drug abuse by pilfering drugs at home.

Studies show that children can begin a lifetime of addiction to drugs by simply opening the medicine cabinet at home. Drugs such as Oxy Contin, oxycodone, hydrocodone, morphine, codeine, Percocet, Darvocet, Vicodin and Lortab have all been linked to opiate addiction.

tion.

The hazmat portion of the drop-off day lasted only two hours but tallied thousands of pounds of paints, thinners, strippers, varnishes, cleaners, automotive fluids, oil and gasoline, chemical fertilizers, insecticides, polishes, ni-cad and lithium batteries.

Several thousand linear feet of mercury containing fluorescent tubes were also collected including CFL (swirly) light bulbs, thermostats, thermometers, button batteries and mercurochrome.

Once released into the environment, mercury persists for long periods of time. Mercury can damage the nervous system, brain, kidneys, liver and immune system. Developing brains and nervous systems of children are very sensitive to mercury.

For the proper disposal of other materials visit the City's website www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/Trash.cfm, and scroll down to "How can I get rid of..."

Quincy Police Project Lifesaver, Help Programs

The Quincy Police Project Lifesaver and Help Programs are aimed at people who suffer from dementia, Alzheimer's disease, Autism and associated ailments.

Project Lifesaver, a nationally recognized program, uses an electronic tracking device on the client to locate him/her once the person is reported missing. People considered for this program require round the clock monitoring by family members and/or programs. There is a small fee associated with Lifesaver.

The HELP program is free and aimed at people of all ages who may have difficulty with memory and are a concern for finding their way home. Unlike Lifesaver, this program addresses people who may live on their own and do not require regular monitoring. Most of HELP's clients (over 200 signed up) are actually referred by family members.

The sign-up process is simple; basic information is gathered, a photo is taken, a bracelet is issued and the data put into the department's computer system.

If a client goes missing, his/her data and photo is sent to all officers, and to the media if necessary, to find the client and return them to their loved ones.

For more information on either program, contact Dispatcher Carol Flynn at (617) 479-1212 between 4 p.m. and midnight.

Fore River Bridge Construction Project Draws Concerns

By JOE REARDON

Weymouth residents voiced their thoughts and concerns Tuesday night at the Abigail Adams Middle School in Weymouth over various issues surrounding the construction of the Fore River Bridge that links Quincy to Weymouth on Route 3A.

The bridge replacement is being conducted under the Commonwealth's Accelerated Bridge Program (ABP) that was approved by Governor Deval Patrick in 2008. Construction of the new Vertical Lift Bridge is scheduled to begin in 2011 with a completion date set for 2015. The cost for the bridge is an estimated $255 million.

Representatives of the Massachusetts Department of Transportation (DOT) have been holding public information meetings about the ambitious project in several towns on the South Shore. DOT held a meeting in Quincy in April at the Fore River Club so residents could ask questions and raise concerns.

Town Councilor Victor Papp, who represents North Weymouth, said he had concerns with the bridge's aesthetics and what bearing it could ultimately have on the property value of houses in the area and the historic standing. "It's no longer an industrial (area) but more towards historic," said Papp.

Long-time East Braintree

Civic Association member Mike Lane was critical of the DOT website, which he said had no data or minutes of the public meetings.

"You should have the information for the public," said Lane.

Highway Division Project Manager Mike O'Dowd told Lane that the minutes of all the meetings will be made available to the public on the website by this Friday.

Lane went on to say the problem with the Fore River is the ledge and silt underneath the bridge makes it difficult for tankers enroute to the Cigo port in East Braintree to pass through.

DOT officials, though, said trying to make the channel deeper would require many more years of permitting and millions of dollars.

O'Dowd reassured Weymouth resident Jeff Cutler that work would be done to incorporate improved projected bridge openings after Cutler said the flashing sign at the rotary on the Quincy side of the bridge is not always accurate.

"We don't know when the bridge is going up," he said.

East Weymouth resident Ed Farmer said all the numbers could be "reduced to zero" if the bridge plans were scrapped in favor of a tunnel running underneath the Fore River. Farmer said a tunnel would eliminate the rotary and serve as a "permanent solution" that future generations wouldn't need to deal with.

"You'd no longer have the nightmare of opening the bridge," said Farmer. "That thing there is a mess."

O'Dowd said a tunnel was initially given consideration, but the cost would have been more, and homes and businesses would have been impacted in the area.

Bill Schroeder of Hingham said the bridge construction will be "a huge disruption for the South Shore" and asked if there was any talk of moving the Cigo dock north of the bridge.

Contact with Cigo, O'Dowd said, had been made over 10 years ago to no avail. "Ten years later the elected officials have not gotten any positive response," he said.

O'Dowd stressed that DOT has been reaching out to communities to get as much feedback from as many people as possible. "We've been trying to get as broad a background of people as possible," he said.

Don Adams, who teaches at the Broad Meadows School in Quincy, said more attention to the noise of the cars crossing the bridge should be made. He said the noise "overwhelms" the moments of silence held on the USS Salem that is located at the base of the Quincy side of the bridge.

DIALING UP WATCH'S ART QUOTIENT
There was once a time when European watchmakers enlisted artists with engraving, enameling, and other skills to decorate the faces of their beautiful high-end wristwatches. In fact, during the 17th century, when Swiss watchmakers were at their zenith, the decorative aspect of a watch was as important as the mechanical element in adding to a watch's prestige. While elaborately decorated timepieces eventually fell out of favor, there has recently been a resurgence of their popularity. Today, consumers are coming to appreciate the workmanship that goes into creating watches that are so beautifully decorated that they can stand alone as pieces of art. In fact, in some cases, well-known artists from other fields are asked to create signature watch styles.

Today, the possibilities seem endless. What are you looking for in a watch? An elegant piece of wearable art of innovative design? A sports watch designed for special activities? Or maybe a watch that simply and accurately tells the time? Today's watchmakers surely have created one that will match your desires. For beautiful jewelry of fine design, including both high and low end watches of the latest fashion and trend, we welcome you to 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. PH: 617-773-3636.

MORE FOR YOU HERE AT HOME

Twinkle designs
Architectural Color Consulting & Decorative Arts

Did you know the right color can make a store's customers feel more welcome? And the wrong color can make them feel uneasy? Color can also make diners hungrier, or inspire office workers to do more. And the colors of your home's interior can affect your mood as you leave for work each day.

All of those reasons, and more, are why businesses and homeowners hire Gloria Robertson of Twinkle Designs to choose colors for their offices, shops, salons, restaurants, and homes. As an Architectural Color Consultant, Gloria helps them choose the right colors and hues to accentuate a space's architectural elements, keeping in mind how it will be used, the amount and types of lighting, and the effect the owner wants to render on those in the space.

Have a big paint job? Hiring Twinkle can also save you money. For example, a South Boston couple bought a Victorian-era townhouse and wanted to paint their "new" 4-story home in the multi-color tradition of the era. They tried it themselves, buying gallons of paint in various colors, but couldn't find the right combination. Down that path, they could have paid their painting company thousands of dollars to give their classic home a new look, only to dislike it. Instead, they hired Gloria, who photographed the house, developed color renderings to show the owners a choice of combinations, then found exactly the right paint chips so the painting company got it right the first time.

As a Certified Decorative Artist, Gloria also paints effects on walls and furniture. This can make a dramatic statement to customers, as the mural she painted for Salon D'Alessandro does in East Milton Square. Or it can add smiles to a child's room, as her Fantasy Rocking Chairs do.

Featured in the women's business magazine MARCH, and quoted in Design New England magazine, Gloria also teaches the use of color at Boston Architectural College. Call her at 857-544-2477, or learn more at www.twinklesite.com.

guage in the middle school and the Academic Talent Program.

DeCristofaro said the department and the School Committee sought input from the staff, teachers, students, parents and the public in determining the priorities which are class sizes, early intervention, literacy and special education.

"Difficult decisions were made in academic support," said DeCristofaro.

"The impact will be mainly class size," explained James Mullaney, III, director of Business Affairs who said that all classes will still maintain the following enrollment: 28-33 for Grades 9 through 12; Grades 4 through 8 at 24-28 and 22-26 for Kindergarten through Grades 3.

Council Inquiries

Despite the new funds and reinstatements, the department is still short million of dollars from its original goal of level funding and the years ahead may be even more difficult, according to Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan.

"The school department is facing a serious situation down the road," said Keenan who noted the city has begun long-term financial planning for two, three and five year goals.

As examples of school spending or over-spending,

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi targeted the 2006 union contract and the free full-day kindergarten program which serves 740 children.

Raymondi estimated that the 2006 teachers' contract and free kindergarten has or will cost taxpayers tens of millions of dollars.

Even a modest charge of $100 for the full-day kindergarten could have helped the schools, according to Raymondi who said, "It's too late for the $7 million this program could have and should have taken in."

In response, Dr. DeCristofaro said that the administration and school committee studied alternatives such as half-day only, a private contractor or a lottery at each school.

"We'll explore more issues as we go forward," said Dr. DeCristofaro, noting that 260 of the children are eligible for free tuition.

Raymondi, also, asked whether the department was considering any of the suggestions outlined by Kevin Mahoney at the council's public budget hearing last month.

Among Mahoney's suggestions were a study of the system's grade configuration, paid banners and bus advertisements, and a combination of athletic programs.

Dr. DeCristofaro said the administration has already met with the MIAA (state athletic association) regarding combining several sports programs and a committee will begin to "explore and discuss" new ideas in the fall through a policy subcommittee.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee suggested that the school officials comb through the records so that non-residents are not being educated at Quincy's expense.

There is "an impression that resources are being used to educate students who do not live in the city," said McNamee.

Better Than Average

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest sought answers to a recent article which stated that the city's financial contribution to the school systems was below average at 48% of the city budget.

"Are we even average?" was the title of the item which Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance, refuted by citing the source of the statistics.

Puleo said the author used Department of Revenue statistics rather than Department of Education (DOE) statistics which show the city contributes some 53% of the city budget to the schools and is well above average.

DOE records would have included the school employee health insurance paid by the city, and police resources of over $1 million for crossing guards and DARE officers.

"We don't charge back," said Keenan, referring to other municipal systems that would increase the school budget to repay municipal costs.

"Quincy is absolutely spending its fair share," said Dr. DeCristofaro.

Each of the councillors thanked the QEA for their vote deferring their contracted raise.

Dear Friend,

For the past year and a half, Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, and the City of Quincy, have been successfully working together to increase awareness of the opioid issue in the city. On Friday, June 25, 2010, a conference will be held at the Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills in Quincy. The purpose of this conference is to educate the public on the issue, disseminate lessons learned, and ultimately provide a forum to explore ways to increase the coordination of services and communications when an overdose occurs. The conference will be open not only to the individuals and organizations impacted by this issue in Quincy, but also to other surrounding South Shore communities that are struggling to find ways to address this problem.

Therefore, Impact Quincy would like to invite you to represent your organization at the June 25th Impact Quincy Opioid Conference. You will hear from a panel of program collaborators as well as distinguished experts about this growing problem across the Commonwealth. Guest speakers include John Auerbach, Commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Alexander Whalley, MD, the Medical Director for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's Opioid Overdose Prevention Pilot Program, and Steven and Nancy Holler, Quincy parents who have experienced this issue firsthand.

We look forward to your participation in our ongoing efforts as we continue to demonstrate strength and solidarity to improve the health of our citizens.

Council OK's FY11 Budget Of $229.8M

"We are weathering the storm as best we can," said Committee Chairman John Keenan who forecast more dark days and likely tax spikes in the years ahead as local receipts and growth remain flat, deferred salary increases, building debt, and employee insurance hikes come due, and local aid dissolves.

Over the past months, every department head, major and minor, echoed the sentiments of Mike Coffey, Business Manager for the Department of Public Works (DPW), who said, "We are trimmed to the bone."

And while the school department was battered, the system remains intact, suffering a major storm rather than a catastrophe with fewer layoffs than the 201 previously anticipated due to an addition of $3.6 million to the original school budget.

Several councillors specifically thanked members of the Quincy Education Association for their part in rescuing the school budget with $2.5 million in savings and sparing their colleagues' jobs.

As a direct result of the teachers' union vote to defer this year's contract raises, 40 of the 89 teachers recently issued pink slips will be reinstated and thanks to additional funding finds, a total of 82.8 of the 201.4 school department layoffs will be averted.

School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro said the schools remain focused on its core mission and class size is foremost in all decisions.

Few other departments won reprieves as the police department will lose nine civilian positions, the fire department nine firefighters, the library with a 9% cut will eliminate four positions and end Sunday hours and the DPW with a 9.4% cut will lose four foremen and one clerk position.

Even the smallest departments shed personnel as, for example, Elder Service will lay off one employee due to a budget cut of 6.2% and Inspectional Services will drop two employees, in addition to two layoffs last year. That translates into a 45% cut of staff in that department in two cycles.

Keenan noted that the Finance Committee, all council member, began meeting in March and concluded reviews at Monday's meeting when they focused on the School Department, Inspectional Services and Water/Sewer accounts.

Committee members, also, reviewed revenue assumptions. New growth next year should total $2.7 million in added city income. These funds should boost the FY11 income, thanks to the arrival of B.J.'s Wholesale Club and upcoming openings of Lowe's Home Improvement store on Burgin Pkwy, Walgreens in North Quincy, a Stop and Shop building and new condo developments.

While their power is limited to either cutting or rejecting individual budgets, councillors do examine department spending and target areas they see as potential problems and conduct public hearings on the total budget.

This year, councillors challenged the police chief's decision to eliminate the harbor master and his volunteers, advocated more aggressive collection of overdue taxes and fines, as well as changes in the settlement of judgments.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond chaired Monday's council meeting as the eight members voted to approve the budget.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, was absent due to his mother's death and the meeting was dedicated to her memory.

Committee Seeks Donations To Support Quincy Public Schools

Anyone wishing to donate can send a check made payable to the Quincy Education Fund at Quincy City Hall, Attn: Collector's Office, 1305 Hancock St. Quincy, MA 02169.

This can be sent with or without the middle donation section of a property tax bill or excise tax bill. So far, $31,000 has been spent on computer network printers, technology items and library and reference books at every public school. The committee is seeking new ways to spread the message to the public about how someone can donate.

Mayor Koch appointed a Committee who is responsible to determine how to spend the funds. The committee consists of Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro; School Committee Woman and Chair Jo-Ann Bragg; Ward Three City Councilor, Kevin Coughlin; School Committee Woman and former Citywide Parents' Council member, Barbara Isola; Quincy Public School Teacher, Nancy Barron; and concerned parents and residents of the city interested in school affairs, Grace Buscher and Michelle Lydon.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Cold Water Exposure

As I write this, the water temperature along our waterways is around 58 degrees Fahrenheit. I mention this where I get concerned during this time of year especially where individuals can look upon our spring weather as summerlike on those occasions, while water temperatures significantly lag behind atmospheric temperatures. A 70 degree spring day does not mean that water temperatures are comfortable, or can be tolerated safely for long periods of time.

Having grown up in Quincy, so close to the water, while much of my recreation during my earlier years took place upon the water, I was often reminded how much lower the water temperature is in the spring, and how dangerous a prolonged exposure within that water can be.

Unfortunately, it seems that there are those every year that disregard this fact, and succumb to drowning. In fact, news reports this year in particular, seem too frequently to hint these incidents.

Once in cold water, personnel flotation devices might keep you afloat, but will not protect you from heat loss. If exposed to cold water, the internal physiological mechanisms that enable us to replenish heat can then be overwhelmed, causing a drop in core temperature. As body temperature decreases, characteristic symptoms occur such as shivering and mental confusion. Eventually, our compensatory mechanisms cannot keep up with the heat loss resulting in death.

In 2005 there were 74 drowning deaths and a combined total of 187 inpatient hospitalizations for nonfatal submersion-related injuries among Massachusetts residents. Drowning is the leading cause of unintentional injury death among children 1-4 years of age, while alcohol use is involved in about 25% to 50% of adolescent and adult deaths associated with water recreation.

The water can be enjoyed safely, but must be respected. It is no more important to do so than during the springtime when even a brief exposure can be extremely hazardous. Be cautious while we recommend postponing any endeavor on the water unless you are properly prepared or until water temperatures increase substantially. As enticing as the water can be; it demands respect. As enjoyable as it can be; it is equally unforgiving. Think safety first! Thank you for doing so.

Rev. F. Dominic Menna On Administrative Leave

The Archdiocese of Boston announced Tuesday it has placed Rev. Dominic F. Menna on administrative leave as a result of receiving allegations of sexual abuse of children.

The allegations concern conduct alleged to have occurred approximately 50 years ago. Fr. Menna is a senior priest in residence at St. Mary's Church in Quincy.

The Archdiocese immediately notified law enforcement of the allegations and has initiated a preliminary investigation into the complaints.

Fr. Menna will remain on administrative leave pending the outcome of the preliminary investigation. The decision to place Fr. Menna on administrative leave represents the Archdiocese's commitment to the safety of all parties and does not represent a determination of Fr. Menna's guilt or innocence as it pertains to these allegations. The Archdiocese will work to resolve this case as expeditiously as possible and in a manner that is fair to all parties.

"I recognize that news of these allegations may be a source of distress for many people," stated Cardinal Sean P. O'Malley. "My prayers and concern are with all people who are impacted by this matter. I remain committed to doing everything possible to protect our children, to further the healing process and to rebuild trust."

The Archdiocese is making counseling and other services available to survivors, their families and parishes impacted by clergy sexual abuse. The Archdiocese and the Rev. David Callahan, pastor of St. Mary's, are making arrangements for the ongoing pastoral care of the parish community. Fr. Menna is receiving care through the Office of Pastoral Care for Priests.

Insurance STRATEGIES

by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

Health and safety codes change over the years, which business owners need to be aware of when selecting insurance. If you own a business, please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600 to arrange an insurance consultation. We can review your current policy and identify any gaps in coverage. Our dedicated staff works with you to ensure that you and your business are protected, that any financial losses are minimized, and that your operations continue as soon as possible. We are located at 151 Hancock Street.

Business owners located in older buildings should understand that their normal property insurance policies designed to replace the existing building in the event that it should be destroyed probably will not be enough. This is because the legal requirements put into place since the building was constructed many years ago will normally require that the building be reconstructed to higher standards, at greater cost. To address this possibility, business owners may want to purchase a policy that will pay for the legally required upgrades. This coverage, called "building ordinance coverage," will cover the cost of meeting current health and safety codes, the cost of rebuilding the undamaged portion of the building, as well as the cost of demolition.

NOTE: Because building codes change all the time, even newer buildings are not exempt from potential building ordinance problems.

Adams Green Final Schematic Concept Unveiled

City Hall and the church.

The Granite Gazing Ball – which was relocated to City Hall from the Fore River Rotary a number of years ago – may be moved, too, but officials said it would remain in the general vicinity of where it is today.

Other features call for an amphitheatre in the area of McIntyre Mall, pathways in the historic Hancock Cemetery, and a tree-lined promenade from the area of City Hall and the Munroe Building to Granite Street. Planners envision outdoor cafes – like those along Boston's Newbury Street – would dot the promenade and make the retail areas live and festive with gathering areas for visitors and residents.

"Quincy has its own character," Uhlig said during the presentation. "We didn't want to reinvent the city's past."

"This is not a finished project. It's just another step in the design process," he added.

The city is trying to secure federal funding for the project.

The city hired Halvorson Design Partnership – a national, award-winning landscape, architectural, and urban design firm – to develop a schematic design for a pedestrian-friendly public space and gateway incorporating Hancock Street between United First Parish Church and City Hall.

After the public presentation, Craig Halvorson, president of Halvorson Design Partnership, highlighted some of the plans features.

Question: What was the major goal in designing this concept?

Answer: I think it gives a whole new life to Quincy. It creates a place to see and be seen. It creates a place where people don't get on the subway, get in their car and leave. They stop and they have an ice cream. They meet a friend, go to a restaurant, come to a parade. There's a series of different moments that work socially as well as visually. There is such a great inherent character in Quincy – not just of the building but of the people and that becomes part of the 21st century of Quincy that automatically builds in the great, unique history of Quincy.

Q: What kind of enhancements does the project call for?

A: There will be interpretive events along the way interpreting the history of current events – informational, directories, signage. There will be benches for people. There will be programmed events in the space of many different kinds. There will be an amphitheatre in part of the space. There will be new trees, green space building on the historic character of the town green along the common and along the historic (United First Parish) church bringing it into the 21st century and celebrating the vitality of the town.

Q: What's been the major concern from the public?

A: I don't think we've had any concerns. I really think we got fabulous comments the last time we were here. People who live here come up and they're responding with real common sense that help us make the design work and work and be better such as the comment around the front of the church and what people would like to see bringing some of the events that exist today into the downtown. I'm sure new events will happen too such as art festivals and farmers' markets. The space that will be there will be a flexible space so those sort of things can happen.

I really believe it's going to happen because I think there's a will here to make it happen on a lot of different levels both through the people and (Quincy) Planning Department, the development people, the mayor. I think there's a collective spirit to make it happen and I think it will.

Q: Is the concept like (Boston's) Newbury Street meets Boston Common?

A: I think there are parts

HANCOCK STREET in front of United First Parish Church (left) and Old City Hall (right) would be eliminated and replaced with open green space in the Adams Green proposal. The final schematic plan for the Adams Green was unveiled last week at the Thomas Crane Public Library by city officials and designers. The Adams Green plan is part of the city's overall redevelopment strategy in creating and enhancing public spaces throughout the downtown, with an emphasis on the promotion of lively, walkable streets.

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

ONE OF THE KEY components of the Adams Green concept eliminates the southbound flow of traffic on Hancock Street (above, left). That area of Hancock Street would be replaced with public green space. As a result, two-way traffic (both north and south) would flow on Hancock Street from Granite Street to Temple Street in front of the old Quincy Savings Bank (where The Quincy Sun is located) and the Adams Building (seen at right).

of it that if you took the sense of Newbury Street with the cafes, the retail and people strolling down the street, that's a vitality. It won't be a copy of Newbury Street but in a Quincy sort of a way it will be more of that liveliness and festiveness will be brought in. There will be more space for people to linger. This will be a place where people want to be in and people come. It will be a destination space where people want to be.

HANCOCK STREET southbound from City Hall to Granite Street would be replaced with green space and a tree-lined promenade.

HANCOCK STREET from Chestnut to Temple Streets which handles only northbound traffic would be reconfigured to provide north and south-bound traffic in the Adams Green concept plan.

Perry Opens Quincy Campaign Office

Congressional candidate Jeff Perry officially opened his Quincy campaign office Tuesday at 680 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Currently serving his fourth term as a state representative, Perry (R-Sandwich) is campaigning to represent the state's 10th congressional district that runs from Quincy to the Cape and Islands.

Perry said the time is right for voters to elect new leaders who will fight for reduced government spending, lower taxes and smaller gov-ship status for all applicants for public assistance. Recently, after the Massachusetts House of Representatives narrowly defeated the amendment again this year, the state Senate approved a similar amendment, sending the issue on to a joint conference committee.

"We need to give local and state police the tools they need to enforce our laws, including immigration laws," Perry said. "If elected, I'll fight to enact meaningful legislation to secure our borders once and for all."

Morrissey Calls For Countywide Anti-Crime Council morning up with solutions for crime prevention education or prosecution of crimes.

"The job of the District Attorney is to fight crime, and that means working hard to find ways to prevent it, too," The Anti-Crime Council will help us prevent crime," said Morrissey, a State Senator from Quincy and candidate for Norfolk County District Attorney. "Crime prevention will be a major priority for our office, something we will take just as seriously prosecuting criminals."

Morrissey said the Council will allow communication lines to be kept open between law enforcement agencies, constituents and crime prevention specialists.

"The Anti-Crime Council presents a real opportunity to motivate constituents in our communities to share their experiences and knowledge, to identify and clarify the difficulties they face, and to offer thoughtful proposals to address and resolve those difficulties," Morrissey said.

Norfolk County District Attorney candidate Michael Morrissey said he would institute a countywide Anti-Crime Council to bring public safety and community leaders together to confront emerging crime issues across the region.

The Norfolk County DA's Anti-Crime Council would include police chiefs, other public safety leaders, seniors, parents, and teachers from every community within the County to create a forum for sharing information, ideas and co-

Roos: House Makes Unwise Changes To The Electoral College

(The following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Last week the Massachusetts House passed and sent to the Senate a proposal that would change how our state's Electoral Votes would be awarded in Presidential elections. Rather than awarding the Electoral votes to the candidate receiving the most votes in the state, as it has been done.

Massachusetts will be a member of The Agreement among the States to Elect the President by National Popular Vote. Our electoral votes will be awarded to the presidential candidate receiving the majority of the popular national vote regardless on how well they did or didn't do in Massachusetts. This would take effect when states representing at least 270 electoral votes, the amount needed to become President, also join the agreement.

I agree with Rep. Tobin in voting against this proposal. The Electoral College compartmentalizes the Presidential Election into 50 separate races held simultaneously on the same day. This allows each state to oversee and manage their election. It also allows each state to validate their election results.

We all remember the intensity and tension concerning the recount in the 2000 Presidential election. That recount determined who won the Presidency was contained to only a few counties in one state.

What would happen in a close Presidential election? Believe me, I know that there can be slim margins of victory or defeat when it comes to elections. If the national popular vote was decided by an extremely slim margin, how would a recount be conducted?

As someone who has experienced a recount only on a municipal level, I could not imagine the logistics and cost associated with a nationwide recount of over 100 million ballots. The amount of governmental resources and tax dollars spent on such an effort would be mind boggling.

Hasn't the oil spill in the Gulf taught us that we need to prepare and anticipate for worst case scenarios? They do happen.

The current Electoral College system prevents that situation from happening while the new proposal would make our country susceptible to a devastating national recount. I am someone who thinks it's wise to avoid a chaotic recount scenario.

BOTHERSOME BUNIONS

Stress on the foot, arthritis, and wearing shoes that are too tight can result in the formation of bunions. These bony bumps form on the joint at the base of the big toe, causing a thickening of the skin, swelling, redness, and soreness. Intermittent or persistent pains follow. This results in restricted movement of the big toe, making it difficult to walk in shoes. Bunions develop over time. They are permanent unless surgically corrected. An accompanying condition called bursitis occurs when the bursa, the cushioning sac of fluid over the joint, becomes inflamed. Should you experience ongoing big toe pain, or notice a visible bump on your big toe joint, see your podiatrist.

HINT: When someone has a bunion, his or her big toe angles in toward the other toes, a condition called hallux valgus.

Sticking To A Budget? Tips For Affordable And Easy Home Upgrades

(ARA) -- Living on a budget is the norm, rather than the exception, in the current economy. Whether you're trying to entice potential homebuyers or just want to give your living space a quick spruce up, here are a few tips for making a big impact in the look of your home without breaking the bank:

* Start small. Small improvements - like a fresh coat of paint or an attractive new floor - truly update a home because people's eyes tend to notice surface areas first. Experts agree that these upgrades make all the difference to prospective buyers as well. According to the International Association of Home Stagers, investing in small upgrades can increase a home's value as much as 7 percent - and a new floor has been proven to return nearly twice the value for every dollar spent.

* Shop around. From mattresses and dining room sets to LCD televisions and sofas, you might be surprised to find the home decor items on your shopping list at budget-friendly spots like thrift stores, boutiques and warehouse clubs.

For example, quality flooring is available at Sam's Club. Traditional Living laminate flooring combines low-maintenance and authentic good looks with the outstanding value pricing for which Sam's Club is known. Its glueless click installation makes Traditional Living flooring an ideal weekend do-it-yourself project - saving additional money on installation. The superior protective surface provides durability and scratch-resistance to stand up to years of heavy foot traffic from kids and pets.

"More consumers are on the hunt for retail locations that offer premium home products at bargain prices," says Sherrie Towne, assistant marketing manager of SimpleSolutions, LLC, which distributes Traditional Living. "For example, the cost of a Sam's Club membership plus the cost of Traditional Living laminate floors is approximately 30 percent less than the price of premium laminate purchased at another retailer."

* Accessorize, accessorize, accessorize. If a new sofa or coffee table isn't in the budget, infuse a room with energy and color by adding simple finishing touches like pillows, artwork and rugs. Flea markets, estate auctions and garage sales are unexpected sources of one-of-a-kind - and often inexpensive - accessories that add color and personality. In the bathroom or kitchen, swap out existing hardware on cabinets and drawers to quickly create a more up-to-date look.

* Clear the clutter. Piles of papers, toys and books can detract attention from the unique items that make a house a home. If your space - and your budget - is tight, organize everyday items with furniture that pulls double duty such as a storage ottoman or a bookshelf with built-in compartments. And if you're putting your home on the market, professional home stagers suggest removing one-third of furniture from public areas like living and family rooms to create the illusion of extra space.

Create 'Curb Appeal' With Easy Home Projects

(ARA) - Whether you're selling your home and want the best price, or you just want to be the envy of the neighborhood, creating "curb appeal" can be very rewarding. And you're confident you know what constitutes great curb appeal - siding, windows, doors and a lawn that are all in good shape. But is that all you have to think about when it comes to curb appeal?

Not so, says Gordon

Blickle of Gardner-Gibson, a manufacturer of driveway, brick and patio sealers. "Driveways and sidewalks are the entryways to the home," he notes. "If they're in great shape, you've got a strong first impression. If not -- you've said a lot about the quality of the home."

Unfortunately, driveways are often overlooked, spoiling an otherwise manicured landscape. Unless the drive is severely cracked, crumbling or poses a safety hazard, there's no need to spend thousands on removing and replacing it. There are easier ways to makeover a tired driveway and boost the curb appeal of a home.

Beautify your blacktop

Don't let problems go unaddressed until it's too late. Old pavement left untreated will crack and crumble, becoming an expensive replacement. But a new coat of driveway sealer can restore it to like-new beauty. Refresh old, worn blacktop driveways and fill small cracks with fast-drying Black Jack Ultra-Maxx 1000, a flexible, long-lasting filler and sealer with a 10-year guarantee.

Showcase your home at night

Low-voltage or solar landscape lighting can create a softly lit path to border the driveway. In addition to creating a pretty landscaping effect, the lighting can improve visibility and decrease the chances someone will accidentally drive onto the lawn.

Make walkways more welcome

Stains on sidewalks and entries from dirt, mold, tree sap, and other outdoor invaders create an unattractive first impression. Clean the walk with an outdoor cleaner like Driveway Kleen, a garden-safe spray solution that attaches to a garden hose. To protect stains from coming back, coat the sidewalk and adjacent pavers or edgers with Krystal Brilliance, a waterbased clear acrylic sealer.

Add greenery to your scenery

Instead of having to keep the edge of the lawn trimmed against the driveway, create a "buffer" strip with a decorative rock garden or plant flowers along the path to create an inviting drive up to the home. If the driveway is shared with a neighbor, plant shrubs and flowers between them to create a small privacy wall.

Border on amazing

Edge the driveway with pavers in colors complementary to the home and pavement. Use pavers in different shapes and sizes to create an interesting focal point and frame the driveway.

"Consider your front yard the 'arms' that welcome visitors into a home," says Blickle. "Without a warm welcome, guests and potential buyers may just keep walking."

A Job Well Done

On Friday, June 4, at approximately 1:10 a.m., Sergeant Mark Kennedy and Officer Mark Smith were working a detail in full uniform at the Ocean Club nightclub in the Marina Bay section of Quincy, when they were alerted by the club doorman that there was a disorder in the parking lot in front of the nightclub.

The officers observed two males at the far end of the parking lot jumping around as if they were getting ready to fight each other. Upon closer review, it was determined that the males were horse playing. Since the males were drawing a crowd and causing a commotion, they were advised, along with the crowd to disperse.

As Sgt. Kennedy approached these two males, he detected that they were both intoxicated. One of the males (suspect) had ripped his t-shirt off and was now having trouble maintaining his balance. When the suspect spoke, his speech was slurred and at times incoherent. Sgt. Kennedy told the two males that it would be best for them to take a taxi and leave, then offered to get them a taxi. The suspect replied, "We're all set - I have my car."

The suspect then proceeded to open his driver door and get in, but Sgt. Kennedy informed him he was not in any condition to drive. When told to step out of the vehicle, the suspect responded by putting the key into the ignition and starting the vehicle. Officer Smith then ordered the suspect to turn the engine off and step out of the vehicle.

This time the suspect complied and exited the vehicle. Again, the suspect and his friend were advised to take a cab home as they were both intoxicated. They agreed and Officer Smith requested a cab. As the officers and the two males awaited the cab, the suspect gradually became belligerent and argumentative, demanding to know why they were bothering him and why he had to take a cab.

The Officers told them that they were acting in their best interests to ensure that they arrive home safely. When the cab arrived a short time later, the suspect said, "@#$% this, you can't make me get in a cab," then start to stagger away. Officer Smith and tried to persuade the suspect to get into the cab with his friend, but the suspect refused and at said, "I'll walk home before I take a cab." When asked if he knew where he was, the suspect said he did not know but would go to a friend's house. He then added, "You're Boston cops, I'm in Boston." Since the suspect refused to cooperate, he was told that he would be placed into protective custody due to his intoxication. The suspect then said, "Go ahead - arrest me. I'll sue you." The suspect was placed under arrest as his friend got into the cab. Officer Smith requested dispatch send a cruiser for transport to the station. The suspect, again growing agitated, leaned against his own car for balance as they awaited the cruiser. He began to yell, "They're beating me! The cops are beating me!" The suspect then turned and began banging his head off of the hood of his car.

At this point, for the suspect's own safety, the officers moved to him and direct him to sit on the ground. Once the officers neared, the suspect kicked Sgt. Kennedy in the leg and then kicked Officer Smith in the thigh. The officers then brought the suspect to the ground, where he continued his attempts to kick them, then tried to spit on them.

The officers kept the suspect motionless so that he couldn't assault them again. Officer Steve Rayne arrived for transport, but the suspect refused to stand up, so the officers were forced to carry him over to the cruiser and get him into the back seat. Since the suspect left his car unlocked and his windows down, his vehicle was towed.

Once at the police station, the suspect refused to cooperate with the booking process and was placed into a cell until he could sober up and be booked. The suspect, a 29 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Assault and Battery on a Police Officer (2 counts) Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon (shod foot) and Resisting Arrest." Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE by off-duty Quincy Firefighter John Cristiani, who's attention was drawn to people screaming by the Beechwood Knoll school. He then saw a man chasing after a car that appeared to be unoccupied and was rolling down a hill in reverse on Haviland Street. He also saw a child and a mother outside the car, on the ground, in the street where the car just rolled from. The car rolled into a tree about 20 yards away. The man chasing the car, who turned out to be the driver, then attempted to put the car in park but instead put it in drive. The car then lurched forward and drove across the street into another tree in a neighbor's yard. Firefighter Cristiani, who ran to the car when it hit the first tree, chased after it and pulled the keys out, shutting down the car. Inside the car was an infant in a child car seat, who was crying but appeared unharmed. Mr. Cristiani called "911" for help, assessed the infant for injuries as well as those outside the car. Fortunately, the infant and child were uninjured and the parents escaped with minor bruises. Nice Work!

QHS Valedictorian Stephanie Annessi Encourages Her Fellow Graduates:

'It's Up To Us To Decide How Our Lives Will Play Out'

By JOE REARDON

On an evening where the sun was playing peek-a-boo with puffy clouds over Veteran's Memorial Stadium, it was the Quincy High Class of 2010 that shone the brightest.

Through a spitting rain then bright sunshine, Valedictorian Stephanie Annessi, who will be attending Smith College in the fall, was the epitome of grace as she told the 296 graduates of the school's 135th commencement that she was proud to have shared the hallways and classrooms with them for four years.

Annessi paid tribute to a beloved classmate, Anthony Wilkerson, who died in a car crash in March of 2009 and spoke of the journey the students went through on the way to commencement.

"Graduation always seemed a million miles away to me," said Annessi. "I am genuinely surprised how quickly the time has flown. It seems like only yesterday that we arrived here as nervous freshmen. It's hard to believe high school is now a collection of wonderful memories that we all share."

Annessi was both anxious and excited about what the future held.

"I cannot stand here and tell you all where I will be in the future and I'm sure you cannot say where you will be either. But this is what is great about the future. What I can tell you is that I perceive today as the beginning of the rest of my life."

Annessi stressed the importance of taking the future on passionately and making one's own decisions that will ultimately affect his or her own life.

"I believe that we all have this chance and it is up to us to decide how we want our lives to play out," said Annessi. "I envision myself years from now as a graduate student going on to become a successful engineer. Each one of us has our own visions for ourselves, but it is very important to be aware of this as we proceed with our lives. How do you envision your life? I believe I will become exactly who I want to be. I have set goals for myself and today is the day that I will start working towards them and achieving them."

The graduates entered the stadium in colorful caps and gowns, to the cheers of family and friends, and the timeless "Pomp and Circumstance" of the Elgar-Ployhar Band.

The Horizons Choir performed the "National Anthem" and followed it up with the Phil Collins tune "On My Way." The Quincy High Band closed out the musical part of the ceremony with James Curnow's "Song for the Earth."

Senior Class President Emily Hajjar announced that the class gift was a computerized message sign for the courtyard in front of the new high school. Hajjar spoke of the rich relationships during her welcoming comments that the students built and that will last a lifetime.

"We had teachers who pushed us to be our best," she said. "Each and every one of you have made it to this point through your hard work and dedication."

Hajjar didn't forget to give a big hello to her fellow graduates. "Hey Class of 2010," she said. "What's happening?"

QHS Principal Frank Santoro cited impressive statistics of the graduates' academics. Eighty percent were going on to higher education. Of the nearly 300 graduates, 85 percent of them were named to the honor roll at some point during their four years.

Santoro mentioned the athletic achievements of two-time state champion wrestler Josh Gery and the thrilling 20-inning softball tournament game that will be remembered for years to come.

Mayor Thomas Koch told the students that in life context, they had time to make their mark. "Know that our creator has made each of you unique," Koch said.

School Committee Vice-Chairwoman Anne Mahoney challenged the graduates to make their dreams a reality and allow them to become their passion. The ability to dream, Mahoney said, is something that is limitless to everyone.

"To dream is an essential part of growing up," she said. "Today's the day you start to put a mark on the world. A strong person is able to stand up for themselves. A stronger person is able to stand up for others."

School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro congratulated the graduates and wished them well on their endeavors in the future. "You have fulfilled Quincy's educational promise to you," he said.

QHS SALUTATORIAN Sarah Schulte accepts her diploma from Principal Frank Santoro.

NQHS Valedictorian Drew Leahy Encourages His Fellow Graduates:

'It's Up To Us To Seize Our Own Personal Journey'

By JOE REARDON

Carrie Sunde was a bundle of energy, hugging and laughing with classmates, before the procession onto Veterans Memorial Field for North Quincy High's 77th commencement exercises.

Class president both her junior and senior years, the Syracuse-bound Sunde remembers her freshman year as though it was yesterday, the four years flying by in a blinding whirl.

Thinking back on it, Sunde was amazed at how far she has come from the shy freshman unsure of what high school had in store for her.

"I didn't do any activities in the beginning and at the end I was doing everything," said Sunde, who will pursue a career in broadcast journalism. "This was a real good year for me."

In her welcoming speech last Tuesday evening, Sunde showed just how many of NQHS's 376 graduating students were involved in various endeavors by having them stand.

By the time Sunde went through groups, clubs and sports, including the National Honor Society, Foreign Language Honor Society, Science Fair, Academic Decathlon, Moon Math Team and the Robotics Challenge nearly every member of the class was on his or her feet.

"At this culmination of our high school education, this celebration is held to recognize the accomplishments of this amazing class," Sunde said. "Some of us have known each other since preschool, and we have also built strong friendship with new friends at North."

Valedictorian Drew Leahy, who is Brown University-bound, stressed to the graduates that they all have the choice to put their best efforts forward and not to be discouraged by inevitable failures in life.

"If you messed up, failed a test, flunked a class, lost your job, got in a fight — just a few of the possible difficulties a person can face — you can still decide that those were yesterday's challenges," Leahy said. "Today is a new day."

And of course, the journey forward from high school into the real world was a major theme in Leahy's message to his fellow graduates.

"We have reached the end of our high school careers," said Leahy. "But this is only part of our life's journey. And although the idea of life as a journey might be a bit trite, it is nevertheless true. Make no mistake, life will progress on, with or without our say so. It is up to each of us to seize our own personal journey from the hands of time and to be in charge of our own futures. We are each in command of our own journey. We are the captain, navigators and crew on the voyage of our lives."

Principal Earl Metzler told the crowd that his parents always wanted him to keep "good company" growing up. "Tonight they'd be proud of the company I keep because the class of 2010 is good company."

"The good you do today may be forgotten. Do good anyway."

Mayor Thomas Koch challenged the graduates to use their talents that were nurtured at North Quincy High.

"Graduates remember your roots," he said. "Put these talents to work. Share your gifts and make us proud. We're counting on you."

School Committee Vice-Chairwoman Anne Mahoney reminded the graduates that a dream is much more than its definition in a dictionary. Dreams, she said, awaken and grow stronger through education, the education the students soaked in at North Quincy High.

"Dreams give us focus and purpose," Mahoney said. "The interesting thing about dreams is that we have so many. I hope all your dreams come true."

City Council President Kevin Coughlin congratulated the graduates and admitted preparing his speech gave him the same feeling he had as student when he needed to finish a term paper. And the speakers from his graduation are a blur from the past.

"I'd like to think 38 years ago they had an impact on me but I wouldn't swear to it," Coughlin said.

He went on to remind the students of the importance of family support and guidance as they worked to earn their degrees. The graduates then gave their parents a round of applause.

"Responsibility for your success going forward lies squarely on your shoulders," Coughlin said.

School Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro told the graduates that, in the end, there is still no substitute for hard work.

"We are depending on you to pave the way to success in whatever path you choose," DeCristofaro said, shortly before making his official recommendation that the students be graduated from Quincy Public Schools.

"It's definitely bittersweet in the end," Leahy said after commencement. "We're moving on to bigger and better things."

Dr. Tom Nees Keynote Speaker At 88th Spring Commencement

ENC Graduates Urged To Prepare To Lead In A New World

Prepare yourself for leadership.

That was the message commencement speaker Dr. Tom Nees shared with 240 graduates and their families at Eastern Nazarene College's 88th spring commencement exercises recently.

Nees, a former pastor and the founder of Leading to Serve, inc., told graduates that the days of focusing solely on their education and their own wants and needs must now end.

"This ceremony is more than graduation from Eastern Nazarene College – for you, this is your commencement to leadership," he said. "When you step off this platform, diploma in hand, responsibility for leadership will come to you regardless of your career plans."

Nees began his address by sharing some research on the so-called "Millennial" generation. According to The Pew Research Center, today's Millennials are more ethnically and racially diverse than previous generations. Three-quarters have created a profile on a social networking website, one in five has posted a video of themselves online and nearly four in 10 have one or more tattoos.

DR. TOM NEES, former pastor and founder of Leading to Serve, addresses graduates at Eastern Nazarene College's commencement.

Despite the struggling economy, Millennials are more upbeat than their elders about their economic future and the state of the nation. They are also less skeptical of government.

"You are the least overtly religious American generation in modern times," Nees said. "Yet not belonging does not necessarily mean not believing. Millennials pray about as often as their elders did in their own youth."

Nees noted that students at the U.S. Naval Academy – located in his hometown of Annapolis, MD – must assume significant leadership responsibilities immediately following graduation. For ENC graduates, he said, the challenge is the same.

"Leadership is not necessarily positional, and doesn't require authority," he said. "All of you can be, and in fact are, leaders. You will have to decide who and how you will lead."

The challenges facing today's graduates, Nees acknowledged, are daunting. The recent failed terrorist bombing in Times Square, the devastating oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico and the Haiti earthquake all demonstrate the tremendous natural and man-made problems that continue to confront and confound succeeding generations.

"The planet needs you Millennial leaders to find new ways to preserve and protect what's left of this incredibly beautiful and fragile ecosphere," Nees said. "We can't go on this way. If you believe, as I hope you do, that we are stewards of the earth, all of us must lead and work to reverse our excessive, if not sinful, consumption and the destruction of non-renewable resources."

Nees called upon graduates to draw upon the knowledge and spiritual growth nurtured during their years at ENC to tackle these and other global issues.

"As ENC alumni, you will always remember your values-added education," he said. "Here, your spiritual and moral formation has been as important as your intellectual development. Given what you believe and know, what are you going to do about these challenges?"

"Do not neglect your gift of leadership," he concluded. "Take charge. Lead the way. The world needs you."

Other highlights of ENC's commencement included the presentation of Senior of the Year awards to Micah Horton and Charmaine Barnett; and the Graduate Student of the Year Award to Jean Yamutumba.

28 Local Students Graduate Eastern Nazarene College

Twenty-eight Quincy residents recently graduated from Eastern Nazarene College, receiving their diplomas during the 88th spring commencement exercises held at the Quincy Christian liberal arts college.

liam Chy, Jennifer Colson, Justin Feeney, Hannah Ford, Sarah Karmacharya, Kevin Kessler, Joy Leaser, Nate Leaser, Andrew Messenger, Sara Miller, Dana Parker, Rachel Sorenson, Andrew Stacy, Jessie Stacy, Martin Sullivan, Benjamin Tubo, and Rita Wigle. Master's: Earl Lewis, Oljana Llagami, Carol Marx, Richard McAlister, Tanya Miller, Stacy Myers, and Maria Pousson.

Located in Quincy, Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) is a distinctively Christian liberal arts college. With approximately 1,100 students distributed across its traditional residential undergraduate, adult studies, and graduate programs, ENC offers a breadth of academic programs that prepare students to lead and serve in a diverse world by integrating the "best in education and the best in Christian faith."

Nurse's Aide To Study To Become A Doctor Suffolk Graduate Agnes Emilie Nyeck Hopes To Improve The Lives Of Others

By TONY FERULLO

This spring, countless men and women from around the world will be graduating from college, each one of them hoping to improve his or her life.

Then there is Agnes Emilie Nyeck, who recently graduated with honors from Suffolk University in Boston. She is hoping to improve the lives of others.

In the aftermath of receiving her bachelor of science degree cum laude with a major in biology from Suffolk recently, Nyeck is applying to medical school and will return to her native land of Cameroon and work as a nurse's aide in a private hospital.

"It will be a good experience for me," said the bright 24-year-old, of North Quincy, who has hopes of one day becoming an OB/GYN or a pediatrician. "Although I will be doing basic tasks, I'll still be learning new things and feel part of the medical team."

Nyeck has wanted to become a doctor since she was eight years old, following in the footsteps of her family members — both of her grandfathers were doctors and her grandmother on her mother's side was a nurse.

"I've always been interested in medicine because at home my mom would always like, you know, treat us," she said. "She even had a medical dictionary, where I would go and look at the pathologies and everything. And that's how I got hooked."

Growing up, Nyeck was

certainly no stranger when it came to receiving medical care. From 5 to 17 years old, she was diagnosed with malaria three or four times a year, requiring her to spend a few days in the hospital each time.

Nyeck entered Suffolk four years ago upon the advice of her oldest brother, Francois Nyeck, who received his master of science in accounting degree in 2006. She was involved as a tutor in the Ballotti Learning Center, teaching genetics and general chemistry to her fellow students. She was also a member of the Tri-Beta Biological Society (a national honors organization), a member of the Health Careers Club for pre-med students, and had her artwork published in Venture Magazine, the annual student publication that showcases the university's talented writers and artists.

Her memories of Suffolk will always be special. "I was able to make friends with students from different countries and learn about new cultures," said Nyeck. "And the professors, particularly in the biology department, were always eager to help you and encouraged you to get involved in the Suffolk community. I liked it that the faculty and the students really cared about each other. At times, it actually felt more like a family than a school."

"And I'd like to emphasize the fact that Suffolk gave me the confidence to follow my dream of attending medical school."

RAY CATTANEO NIGHT: Legendary Morrisette American Legion Baseball Manager Raymond Cattaneo, pictured here with Recreation Director Barry Welch in the City Council chambers after being honored for his four decades of leading Morrisette baseball, will be honored on Friday, June 18 at Adams Field when the third base dugout will be renamed in his honor. "Ray Cattaneo Night" June 18 At Adams Field Morrisette Defeats Holbrook To Open The Season at 1-1

By SEAN BRENNAN

The American Legion Baseball season got underway last week in Quincy as both Morrisette Post and Quincy Legion began their 2010 campaigns.

For Morrisette, a team that last year advanced to the American Legion South Sectionals following a 2-1 series win over Norwood Legion in the District 6 playoffs (the team's season ended following a 10-3 loss to New Bedford Legion in the loser's bracket of the AL South Sectionals), this season brings great expectations.

The team returns the majority of its roster, a lineup of local players that have big game experience, both at the American Legion level and at the high school level.

Morrisette began the year with a tough 7-6 loss to Jamaica Plain on June 10, but rebounded nicely on Monday night with a commanding 10-2 win over Holbrook Legion.

The team was set to play against Weymouth Legion on Wednesday, and at Braintree Legion today (Thursday). The team's first prime-time game will be held on Friday, June 18 against Quincy Legion (8 p.m., Adams Field).

The game against Quincy Legion has been declared "Ray Cattaneo Night." The legendary coach will be honored in a pregame ceremony (7:30 p.m.) before the two local AL teams square off for the first of two meetings this season. Morrisette and Quincy will play again on July 7.

Morrisette def.
Holbrook, 10-2

A strong offensive display by batters 1-9 helped carry Morrisette past Holbrook, 10-2. The team's pitching also performed well.

The team scored at least one run in every inning but the third, and even in that frame, Morrisette left the bases loaded. The offense got started with a three-run first inning as outfielder Greg Nelson singled and stole second base; infielder Ryan Louis reached on an error and later stole second putting runners on second and third for catcher Matty Rodriguez. Rodriguez plated both runners with a clutch two-out two-run double; infielder John Ainsley scored Rodriguez with a RBI single.

Outfielder Danny Russell singled in the second and stole second base. After a walk to the next batter, infielder Matt Goreham drove in a run with a double.

In the fourth inning, Colin Ryan singled and scored on a triple from Ryan Louis. The attack continued in the fifth frame as Joe Alibrandi singled; Russell walked, and Nelson drove them both in with a single (Russell scored on a throwing error).

Ryan Louis started the sixth inning with a single and stole second; he came around to score on a RBI single from Ainsley. The scoring finished with a two-run seventh as Russell reached base, Nelson singled, Goreham drove in Russell with a single and Nelson came around to score on a fielder's choice from Louis.

A trio of pitchers helped Morrisette to victory.

Tim Luizzo started the game and went four innings. He finished with five strikeouts, six hits allowed and two runs. Newcomer Josue Ordonez pitched two innings while striking out four batters, and Kevin Magoon closed the game out by tossing an inning of relief.

Jamaica Plain def.
Morrisette, 7-6

In a sloppy game played in wet weather, Morrisette dropped its opener, 7-6.

Joe Alibrandi started the game on the mound and went 4 2/3 allowing five runs. Joe Edgerly came on for an inning plus of relief and Kevin Magoon allowed one hit in an inning of relief.

Greg Nelson (two runs), Colin Ryan (run), Ryan Louis (3-for-3, 2 RBI), Matt Rodriguez (two RBI), Lamont Toombs (run), and Danny Russell (RBI) paced the offense.

The coaching staff is as follows: Ray Cattaneo (manager), Steve Maze (coach), Andy Santos (coach), John Sullivan (coach), Bill Walker (coach), and Bill Marchand (scorekeeper).

Team Finished Year at 15-6 Overall

QHS Seniors Leave Their Mark On Softball Program

By SEAN BRENNAN

Five seniors walked off the softball diamond for the last time after Quincy dropped a heartbreaker to Dartmouth High School, 1-0, in early June, in a Division I South Sectional preliminary round game.

These five, along with a handful of talented underclassmen, helped Quincy to an impressive 15-6 overall record in 2010. Team captains Olivia Berry and Julia Yee, along with seniors Kylie Kozlowski, Eryn Curran and Christine Farnsworth, have left their marks on a program that has only gotten better each year during their high school tenure.

Berry, a stalwart behind the plate for the Presidents, finished the season with 49 at-bats and 19 hits. Her .388 batting average led the team and she also finished with three home runs and 13 RBI. But it was her defense behind the plate and her game calling for all-star hurler Kori Sorensen that made the biggest impact for Quincy.

"She was fantastic all year and was a Patriot Ledger all-star," said QHS head coach Roger Bacchieri. "She led the team in hitting and was the unquestionable leader behind the plate. She called the pitches all year.

"When she was hurt, we had her call the pitches from the dugout. She even limped out to talk to the pitchers and our freshman catcher. Her highlight was a homerun over the centerfield fence at Mitchell McCoy, or catching all 20 innings of the state tournament loss to Dartmouth."

Co-captain Julia Yee, a standout volleyball player and basketball player for the Presidents, finished her senior year with a .313 batting average (20-for-64), driving in eight runs. Yee played both shortstop and third base for Quincy, and her performance on the diamond earned her an all-star berth.

"She was our other senior Patriot Ledger all-star and played both shortstop and third base," said Bacchieri. "She was our emotional leader on the field and she always kept everyone in the game and focused. She started the season slow at the plate, but was one of our top hitters by the end.

"Julia was a terror on the bases every time she got on. Her highlight was scoring the tying run with two outs in the bottom of seventh against North Quincy."

Senior Kylie Kozlowski was Quincy's defensive star playing at first base. With two home runs, nine RBI and a .246 average (15-for-61), Kozlowski provided depth to the Quincy lineup.

"She played first base for us all year and she was a rock in the field who came up with big defensive plays for us every game," added Bacchieri. "Her highlight game was hitting two home runs against Hanover to lead us back from a 5-1 deficit to win the game 6-5."

Outfielder Eryn Curran was the quarterback of the team's outfield defense, playing centerfield and playing it well. Curran batted .235 on the spring and added five RBI, but it was her defense that made the biggest difference for Quincy this past season.

"(She) played great defense for us all year in centerfield," said Bacchieri. "Her highlight was throwing out a runner at the plate in the bottom of the seventh inning against Randolph. The throw took away all their momentum and helped preserve a 2-0 lead.

"Eryn had a good year at the plate; she hit the ball hard, but right at people."

Senior Christine Farnsworth may have only had one at-bat all year, but she was an integral part of the team's chemistry and was a strong team leader for Quincy.

"Christine did not get a chance to play too much this year, but she is a fantastic kid and helped to keep all the subs focused and full of energy," said Bacchieri.

These five were not the only players to produce for Quincy in 2010. Other top performers included junior Kori Sorensen. Sorensen, the team's undisputable ace, went 7-6 on the mound. She threw 104 innings, allowed 11 earned runs, had an ERA of 0.92, and struck out 155 batters while walking just 11. At the dish, she batted .315 with five RBI.

Jamie Shaughnessy finished with a .343 average (23-for-67); Nicole Parry hit .262 (16-for-61) with a team-high 14 RBI. She also went 8-0 with a 0.88 ERA and 54 strikeouts to four walks as the team's second pitcher, and Erin Chiochio hit .226 (12-for-53).

Merrymount Jumps to First Place, Again

Jump around! Merrymount's Beantown Jumpers' team won, again, this year at the Red Auerbach Youth Foundation's 14th Invitational Double Dutch Tournament held on April 17 at Northeastern University.

The Agawam Squaws team won first-place in the Singles Level 2, third-fifth graders competing against seven other teams from Boston, Dorchester, and Pembroke. The Agawam Squaws team included Shannon Foley, Lauren Saccoach and Caroline Bloomer, all fourth graders from the Merrymount School. Kathy Petrilli coached the team.

Liana Cunningham, also a fourth grader from Mer-rymount, trained with the Agawam Squaws but was unable to compete due to other academic commitments.

Bloomer, a first-year jumper had an outstanding performance and Foley, Saccoach and Cunningham, aka "Merrymount's Tremendous 3," were the local and state champions in 2009.

The Merrymount Stars, the program's doubles team, also competed in Doubles Level 1, third-fifth graders and finished in third-place competing against five other teams from Everett, Lawrence and Boston. The Merrymount Stars team included Foley, Saccoach, Bloomer and Nicole Page.

The program's Champions team won first-place in the Singles Level 1, second-third graders competing against eight other teams in their division. The Champions team included Michaela O'Gara-Pratt, Colleen Connor and Abigail Kraunelis, all third-graders at Merrymount Elementary School. Maura O'Gara coached the team.

This was the Champions first year in competition and they had an exceptional performance. Their training and dedication to earn first-place was well deserved.

The Merrymount Green Peas team also participated for the first time. Rayne O'Gara-Pratt, Emily Kraunelis and Hope Hayes, first-grade students, made up this team.

On May 1, at the 18th Annual Massachusetts State Double Dutch Tournament, the Agawam Squaws won first-place in the Singles Competition for Grade Four. The team competed against five other fourth grade teams from Boston. The Squaws performing with grace and precision earned enough points to qualify for the second year in a row, for an invitation to the World Double Dutch Tournament in June in South Carolina.

The Merrymount Stars

Doubles Team took first-place for Grade 4 in the Doubles Competition; the Champions won second-place in the Singles Competition for Grade 3, competing against three other teams from Pembroke and Boston.

To Be Held June 28 at Hyannis GC

Former Coach Mike Casali to be Honored At NQHS Football Golf Tourney

By JOE FLYNN

When former players, coaches and friends gather at this year's North Quincy High School Alumni Scholarship Golf outing (June 28 at Hyannis Golf Club), they will honor the remarkable and distinguished career of one of Quincy's greatest role models to young men and women. Former educator, coach and mentor, Mario "Mike" Casali, will be honored at this year's event at Hyannis Golf Club on Cape Cod.

For 30 years, until the early 1980s, Casali coached football, basketball and baseball at Central Junior High. He spent the last 15 years of his career as a guidance counselor in the Quincy Public Schools system.

"The amount of people that Casali has influenced is significant. He turned many young lives around and taught many others what it is to be a good person and how to be part of a team," said Eddie Miller, former Quincy Athletic Director and North Quincy boy's basketball coach.

The day is an annual highlight for many because it provides an opportunity to visit and share stories and benefit the NQHS Scholarship Fund for deserving NQ graduates. The event has evolved from an annual NQ alumni football golf outing to a live and silent auction raising over seventy thousand in scholarship funds.

Each year, the tournament honors an individual who has made a positive influence on the lives of others. Honorees have included former NQ graduate and ECAC Commissioner Scotty Whitelaw and the late Billy Carroll, an outstanding student athlete who played football for North Quincy in the 1970s. Last year's honoree was the late Robert "Knobby" Nolan, the legendary basketball coach and guidance counselor at NQHS.

Casali grew up in Wollaston and is a former Central student, playing football, soccer and basketball. He went on to Quincy High where, after joining the Navy during his senior year, he returned after two years of service and graduated in 1946.

Before Casali's tenure with Quincy Public Schools, he was an outstanding hockey player at Boston University. In his senior year, BU won the NE crown, defeating Northeastern and Boston College.

After graduating from BU, Casali went to Newport, Rhode Island for two and a half years. He taught physical education in two junior high schools. From there, he began his tremendous legacy in Quincy Public Schools.

This year's tournament will provide a unique reunion for many of Casali's former students and players. He was instrumental and influential in building foundations and shaping the lives of so many at young impressionable years.

Those who played under Casali recall the impact he had on their early lives and how he remained a constant even today.

"Coach Casali had a major influence in my early days at Central," said John Flynn, co-founder of the golf tournament and a former student-athlete who played three sports for Casali in the early 1970s at Central. "Coach Casali had a major influence in my early days at Central. His influence and mentoring have stayed connected with me over the year. The principles, values and fundamentals he communicated are with me today."

"I was on the other side of the city at Atlantic Junior High but knew of Coach Casali's reputation," said event co-founder Bobby Morton. "We had some very, very competitive games against Central in football, basketball and baseball. Coach Casali was always on the sidelines and boy did those Central kids play hard for him and respect him."

Flynn, who played collegiate football at Trinity and Morton for Holy Cross, are both inductees into the NQ Football Hall of Fame. They too will wait in line with others to thank and honor Coach Casali for his wisdom, respect and care he delivered to so many in his 30 years of service.

This year's tournament will be held at the Hyannis Golf Club on June 28. For information and registration on this year's event, visit www.northquincyfootball.com.

AFC Revolution U14 Boys Qualify For MAPLE

The boy's soccer "Revolution" took a giant step forward in the City of Quincy this past weekend when the America FC Revolution Under-14 boys team qualified for MAPLE (Massachusetts Premier League Soccer), the state's premier youth soccer league.

AFC Revolution, to earn their spot in MAPLE's under-15 third division for the 2011, had to play against four other U14 teams throughout the state. The Revolution finished the tournament with a 2-2 record to become, according to team organizers, the first Quincy boy's team to earn a spot in the elite soccer league.

"To our knowledge, this is the first time a Quincy-based boy's team comprised of primarily Quincy boys has 'earned' a spot in the competitive MAPLE league," said AFC club president James Abundis. "Us trainers and parents are all proud of them. They simply earned the right to play in MAPLE the old-fashioned way: through hard work."

The Revolution started the tourney with a 2-1 upset over the top-ranked Raynham Renegades. The lone goal the team gave up came off an own goal; the team was routed in its second match, 3-0, by the John Smith Soccer Academy.

"The first match took a lot out of our players," said Revolution coach Charles DeBaud, a former Quincy High School standout and current player for the Eastern Nazarene College men's team.

The Revolution sent only 13 players to the tournament playing with only two substitutes. In their game against John Smith the team lost their only remaining veteran defender Chris Poles to injury and their top scorer during the season, James O'Shea; both were out of play at the end of the first half and Poles was out for the remainder of the tournament.

During Sunday's first match against Abbey Villa, the team was able to readjust without defender Poles in a defensive line that included players Stephen Beaton, U13 player Jimmy Dalton, and Andreas Marvndis of Milton, one of two non-Quincy players.

"We dominated the match, possessed the ball most of the game, and had many scoring opportunities - but we were not able to convert," said Abundis. "Our get-by defense was not able to click well during the match though they started to develop some chemistry."

In the final match against Crusaders United of Plymouth, the magic of the first match returned. The Revolution won 4-1 to earn a 2-2-tournament record and a berth in the MAPLE U15 Division next spring.

"It's taken this group of boys over three years of hard work and commitment to training to enjoy this success," added Abundis.

At the tournament last weekend were players James Abundis (injured), Bjorn Almuri, Carlos Barbosa, Stephen Beaton, Joey Critelli, Jimmy Dalton, Connor Dane, Stephen Gargan (Dorchester), Andreas Marvndis (Milton), Connor McGonagle, Cian Moriarty, James O'Shea, Chris Poles, and James Struga.

16-Member Team Sailed Out of Boston

Combined Sailing Team Finished Season Strong

The combined Quincy and North Quincy High School sailing team recently concluded another strong season last month.

The sixteen-member team included several sailors with experience, with many having sailed on Black's Creek and raced in the annual Quincy Bay Race Week; many sailors on the 2010 were completely new to the sport.

The QHS/NQHS team held practices at the Community Boating Center in Boston, and competed in weekly races against 13 other high schools.

"This was a strong team with great enthusiasm and team spirit and commitment to helping each other develop into solid racers," said Coach Michael Imhoff. "The team captains shared their knowledge with new sailors and everyone learned to either skipper their own boats or serve as crew.

"The season concluded with a strong showing at the Massachusetts High School State Championship, during which co-captains senior Mary Schwartz (NQHS) and senior Amy Walsh (QHS) sailed together and delivered solid performances over the two-day event."

REAL FLOPS

Flip-flops may be a hit in the fashion department, but they have the potential to pose real problems for the feet, ankles, and hips. According to researchers at Auburn University who studied the effects of wearing flip-flops, prolonged use of the flimsy footwear changes the way people walk. To begin with, volunteers wearing flip-flops reported pain on the bottoms of their feet associated with plantar fasciitis (inflammation of the connective tissue that runs along the bottom of the foot) and, sometimes, heel spurs. Additionally, flip-flops were found to make people walk with shorter strides with ankles turned slightly inward, most likely to keep their flip-flops from falling off. This altered gait can give rise to long-term ankle and hip problems.

Do you wear flip-flops? Chiropractic is a health care discipline that emphasizes the inherent recuperative power of the body to heal itself without the use of drugs or surgery. Could safe and gentle chiropractic care be beneficial to you? At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, your good health is our main concern. Stop the pain - call 617.472.4220 today to schedule an appointment. We will devote the individual attention you need to be sure you will recover as quickly as possible at the least expense to you. DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

FULL MOUTH RECONSTRUCTION

In some cases, patients' teeth may be so decayed, injured/fractured, or worn/eroded that they may require extensive treatment known as "full mouth reconstruction." Also known as "full mouth restoration" and "full mouth rehabilitation," this rebuilding/restoring process typically involves every tooth in both the upper and lower jaws. The process begins with a thorough examination and evaluation of the patient's teeth, gums, and occlusion (bite). It continues with an assessment of the color, shape, size, and proportion of the teeth with respect to how they relate to the gums, lips, mouth, side profile, and face. Then, after taking x-rays, impressions, and photographs, the dentist (in conjunction with specialists, if necessary) can recommend procedures and techniques for totally restoring the teeth.

Our commitment to patient care translates into specialized care for each patient. Every person we treat has a unique dentition and oral health condition, so we take pride in designing customized treatment plans. We want you to receive the highest quality, complete, and affordable dental care. We keep abreast of all new procedures, and we would like to increase public awareness of the importance of preventive oral health care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our aim is to provide individual attention and care to every patient so that we can learn about his or her special needs. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiologist with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

PS. Full mouth restoration can include procedures such as crown lengthening, gum recontouring, jaw surgery, permanent restorations (crowns, bridges, inlays/onlays, veneers, and implants), and orthodontics.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A child sees his Dad as a one-of-a-kind personality. He may be rich or poor, ambitious or otherwise, but like a mother, he, too, is a special person.

Father's Day, like Mother's Day, is a sentimental day founded in American custom. For some it is just another sales promotion event to ring up sales in gifts of ties, shirts, pajamas or other items including sentimental and funny cards.

It has been claimed most Dads frown on the ransom of gifts advertised for Father's Day. Perhaps this is true. But one thing is certain. Most Dads have no distorted notions of importance and prefer not to be lavished with loot from loved ones just because it is Father's Day. Actually, it seems most Dads would really prefer a "Family Day" celebration, not a special Father's Day event. We hope all fathers who read this share the happiness of a "Family Day" on Father's Day...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A plan you've kept on hold for a long time finally could be greenlighted. But in typical Aries form, you'll need to be sure that everything is in place before you hit the "start" button.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Others might urge you to act more quickly on your ideas. But you'd be wise to follow your Bovine instincts and get more facts to bolster your position when you finally present it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be tempted to accept the well-meaning offer of a friend to act as an intermediary in a dispute. But you know best what it's about, and you can handle the challenge. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Entertainment can play an important role this week. Enjoy some well-earned diversion with people you care about. Something especially wonderful might come from this well-spent time.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Catnaps and playtime are in order for Leos and Leonas who need to take some time off from their hectic schedules to restore their energies and rebuild their mental muscles. Have fun.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Virgos will need to keep an open mind this week about choices that seem improbable. A closer study might well reveal possibilities that might have been overlooked. Stay with it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A disappointing outcome of a well-intentioned effort should be seen as a lesson in how to do it right the next time. Note all your changes and have your new plan set up by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Travel plans might need readjusting because of changes in the costs previously agreed to. Deal with the problem as quickly as possible to minimize any delays that might result.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your honest approach to an unsettling experience draws admiration from others. Use their positive feedback to build support for your program to introduce needed changes.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel is strong in your aspect this week, and so is nostalgia! You might want to consider planning a trip to a place that holds some very special meaning for you. Bon voyage.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A job-related situation could provide an opportunity you hadn't considered before. Look it over carefully and see where and how you can tailor it to fit your needs.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Showing strength as well as sympathy helps you deal with a difficult personal matter. It also helps you set an example for others when it's their turn to get involved in the situation.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of making people feel comfortable without losing one whit of your own dignity in the process.

Special Program Marks Flag Day At School Which Will Merge With Sacred Heart, Saint Ann's In Fall 'We Love You Saint Ann's School – We'll Miss You, Too'

By JOE REARDON

Just before the final song at St. Ann's School's last Flag Day ceremony on Monday, 11-year-old Maeve McDonald stood at the podium, reading the poem she wrote for the school she was saying goodbye to.

The pretty fifth-grader with the long blond hair told the student body, faculty and students to remember the great times they had at the school.

"May God always bless Saint Ann's and all of the students, wherever they may go," said Maeve. "We love you Saint Ann's School. We will miss you."

Maeve, who has attended Saint Ann's since kindergarten, decided she wanted to talk about the school when the students began preparing for the Flag Day ceremony nearly a month ago.

MAEVE McDONALD

"We're all going to be leaving and it's very upsetting," she said. "Luckily, a lot of my friends will be going with me to Saint Agatha's (next year)."

Maeve, who someday would like to become a teacher, said writing the poem was harder than she expected. "When I was writing it I felt really sad," she said. "It was about the closing so I did it at the end."

STUDENTS AND TEACHERS at Saint Ann's School assembly

Dropping enrollments are forcing Quincy's three Catholic schools – Sacred Heart, Saint Ann's and Saint Mary's – to close and merge together as one school in the fall.

Led by the strains of "The Marine's Hymn" Bagpiper and Quincy firefighter Steve Sweet led the color guard, fronted by U.S. Marine Veteran John "Butch" Mahoney. The Quincy native was presented with a plaque by musical director Lois Carne, honoring his years of service.

"Thank you very much," Mahoney said. "This is a complete surprise. I'm so honored. God bless you all."

One by one, students read passages of famous speeches by Harry Truman, Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy.

Assistant Principal John Norton, who has been filling in for principal Sr. Catherine Lee because of illness, told the kids that Sister Catherine was with them in spirit.

"I know over in Braintree, Sister Catherine has heard all of you singing today," Norton said.

U.S. Marine Veteran Wayne Scott said he was honored to be one of the special guests at the ceremony. "It was very nice and I was proud to do it," Scott said.

Council OKs Tax Break Boston Scientific $55M Investment At Marina Bay

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Boston Scientific Corporation will invest at least $55 million in its North Quincy facility under a plan outlined Monday at City Council when the firm sought and won an eight-year extension and the doubling of a tax break percentage on property improvements through a unanimous council vote.

Of the $55 million, $30 million is targeted for building and land improvements at the Marina Bay site and $25 million for new equipment, mainly robotic technology, for the international medical equipment firm.

Some 400 to 500 construction workers are expected to be hired for the $30 million construction project which must be underway by 2013 under terms of the amended TIF or Tax Increment Financing agreement with the city.

In 1997, Boston Scientific became the first of six companies in Quincy approved for a TIF tax break which is overseen by both state and city officials.

The TIF, as amended Monday, will allow a 32% break on the new taxes which would ordinarily be

As An Independent Sheets Running For Congress

Former Quincy mayor and two-term Massachusetts state representative James Sheets announced his candidacy for Congress in the 10th District Tuesday, running for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives as an Independent.

Once a lifelong Democrat, Sheets, 75, changed his registered affiliation to Independent Feb. 18. He cited his growing frustrations with the direction in which America's Democratic leadership has been leading the country as the impetus for his decisions to change party affiliation and once again run for office. Sheets served as mayor from 1990 to 2002.

"I was a member of the Democratic Party all of my life, but there comes a time when the people come first — not big government," Sheets said. "Today, I believe the Democratic Party has abandoned its ideals and vision. I intend to go to Congress not to start a career, but to help set America free, to ensure that our children and grandchildren will be able to live the American dream."

Sheets is among a handful of contenders to replace retiring Cong. William Delahunt. They include Democrats Bill Keating, the Norfolk County district attorney who recently moved to Quincy; and state Sen. Robert O'Leary of Barnstable; and Republicans Joseph Malone, former state treasurer of Scituate, state Rep. Jeff Perry of Sandwich, Robert Hayden of Hanover and Raymond Kasperowicz of Cohasset.

Sheets, a native of Clarksville, PA, has been a resident

As An Independent Sheets Running For Congress

Former Quincy mayor and two-term Massachusetts state representative James Sheets announced his candidacy for Congress in the 10th District Tuesday, running for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives as an Independent.

Once a lifelong Democrat, Sheets, 75, changed his registered affiliation to Independent Feb. 18. He cited his growing frustrations with the direction in which America's Democratic leadership has been leading the country as the impetus for his decisions to change party affiliation and once again run for office. Sheets served as mayor from 1990 to 2002.

"I was a member of the Democratic Party all of my life, but there comes a time when the people come first—not big government," Sheets said. "Today, I believe the Democratic Party has abandoned its ideals and vision. I intend to go to Congress not to start a career, but to help set America free, to ensure that our children and grandchildren will be able to live

Sheets is among a handful of contenders to replace retiring Cong. William Delahunt. They include Democrats Bill Keating, the Norfolk County district attorney who recently moved to Quincy; and state Sen. Robert O'Leary of Barnstable; and Republicans Joseph Malone, former state treasurer of Scituate, state Rep. Jeff Perry of Sandwich, Robert Hayden of Hanover and Raymond Kasperowicz of Cohasset.

Sheets, a native of Clarks-ville, PA, has been a resident

Drug Court Commencement At Quincy District Court

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

In October 2007 Catherine Charron was on probation. She had been running the streets, stealing purses, and "ripping people off" in any way she could in order to support a drug addiction.

Catherine's eventual turnaround came with the help of Quincy's Drug Court, a program established in March, 2001 to address the rise in criminal offenses which are related to substance abuse.

As an alternative to incarceration, probationers commit themselves to this treatment, which includes judicial oversight, periodic drug-testing, behavior monitoring and time spent in halfway houses.

"I didn't care who I hurt," she says, "and I hurt a lot of people—and now, being a mother I just can't imagine going back to that lifestyle."

"I look at my son every morning, and sometimes I just watch him sleep and I just well up with tears thinking about how beautiful he is and how blessed I am."

Strongly supported by Mayor Koch, the program has been so successful it is being used as an example in Weymouth now, where, according to Weymouth's Mayor Sue Kay, there is a "significant prescription-drug problem" which, she says, frequently progresses to heroin use. "Thank you for allowing me to copy-cat this wonderful program."

Last Thursday three former abusers—totally drug-free today—officially graduated from the program in a standing-room-only event held at Quincy's courthouse. As Parole Officer Jo Rothman pointed out, this was a "very emotional day."

Graduate Damien Hamler of Dorchester said the first step in his recovery was recognizing God. "Then, the biggest thing for me was to admit I had a problem, after that it was a cool breeze, no problems, no setbacks—months of Drug Court, drug testing, probation, parole, halfway houses, sober houses—I am very grateful and humbled."

Damien came to this program in August, 2008 and has been clean and sober for twenty-two months, without a slip. He told the courtroom, "I am very humbled today. I love everybody in this room because you're here—it means you care."

In accepting her graduation certificate Catherine said, "Without Drug Court I would probably be dead—now I have so much life and love inside me and am so grateful to be alive and to be a mother to my son, who won't ever have to know a mother who is a drug addict."

Catherine grew up in the Germantown section of Quincy and, admittedly, made some bad choices. Her 10-month-old son, Xavier, was conceived and born when she was clean and sober, something she is proud of.

Each of the guest speakers at the event, as well as Presiding Justice Diane Moriarty stressed the significance of collaboration upon the success of the program. First Justice Mark Coven said, "Drug Court only succeeds because it is a community effort."

Mayor Koch praised Quincy's Drug Task Force, which includes emphasis on treatment, enforcement and education. "There is nobody in this room who can say they got where they are without help and collaboration. You do not walk or stand in isolation."

Keynote speaker Lt. Detective Patrick Glynn of the Quincy Police Department stressed the importance of protecting the city against drug-related crime.

"The main goal of QPD is the safety of its citizens, we are there for everyone. QPD has a multi-dimensional approach to law enforcement—overdoses must not fear calling 911 for services."

Glynn smiled as he referred to the sometimes "therapeutic arrests" made by the department in order to get people into the programs they need.

Attendees included 25 people currently in the drug program, law enforcement personnel, representatives of the Norfolk County District Attorney and Sheriff's Departments, administrators of community drug programs and facilities, and medical professionals.

Dr. Robert Brown was presented with a special recognition award for his probation services in relapse prevention.

Renee Foisy, a 2008 graduate, praised and encouraged this year's graduates. A user of heroin and cocaine, after being locked into Quincy Medical Center and committed to MCI, Framingham, she came to the court in 2007.

"Quincy Drug Court saved my life. It was the hardest and the best thing I ever did. Since graduating, I have got my 7-year-old son back and I make better choices. Now I am a woman with dignity and honor."

KING OF THE GEMS

Its regal color, rarity, and beauty all contribute to make ruby, the birthstone for July, "the king of gems." In fact, one of the gemstone's earliest names, "ratnaraj," is Sanskrit for "king of gems." Even the Bible makes mention of ruby's great value. In Burma (now known as Myanmar), ruby was worn as a talisman to ward off illness and misfortune. The rare and valued "pigeon's blood" variety of ruby, which has been mined in Burma, was once called "drops of blood from the heart of Mother Earth," while the Hindus thought the ruby burned with an eternal fire and called it the "king of precious stones." Clearly, this fabulous gemstone stands out from all others in the minds of most.

Mall Demolition Set First Week Of July

One of the last remaining obstacles to the construction of the final phase of the Quincy Center Concourse is set to be removed within the next several weeks, officials said.

Project officials believe demolition work on the Quincy Fair Mall building will begin the first week of July, a part of the project that when complete will provide the first real glimpse of how the road, on the drawing board for 30 years, will connect Quincy Center directly to Burgin Parkway.

The federal, state and locally-funded project has long been viewed as vital to any effort to redevelop Quincy Center by providing an East-West connector through downtown to Route 3A. The goal of the road is to clear existing traffic bottlenecks in Quincy Center for drivers passing through and to provide better access to visitors.

Demolition work on the project's final phase comes as the final touches on the reconstructed McGrath Highway are underway. New paving, plantings, lights and sidewalks are in place, and that portion of the project will be officially completed when overhead utility lines are removed.

Project officials are working with residents and business owners to keep them informed on construction and minimize disruptions to the extent possible.

Plan For Community Preservation Administration Staff Shelved Council OKs Open Space, Preservation Picks

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday approved nearly $700,000 in community preservation and open space grants for 2010 as recommended by Mayor Thomas Koch and the Community Preservation Committee (CPC).

The grants include $559,500 in historic preservation projects ranging from a $200,000 restoration of the stonewall at Faxon Park and $100,000 to stabilize Lyons Turning Mill to a $25,000 grant for the Adams Academy building.

Park improvements will fund bicycle racks at city beaches as well as the design and permitting of sections of the Neponset River Walk.

In addition, a $50,000 grant will allow the city to purchase the Bates property or Viden Street parcel, a landlocked 2.9 acre parcel that will link the 57-acre Faxon Park to adjoining open space including the former Avalon Estates.

With the addition, Faxon Park will total roughly 82.9 acres of open space.

When introducing the CPC list, Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance, noted that the state statute provided that funds be designated for administrative assistance, such as $60,000 salary approved in May by the committee.

Puleo said a $60,000 set-aside for administration was not part of Monday's request, but would be restored and requested at a later date.

When approved, a percentage of the funds would be allocated to five city departments, according to Puleo citing the CPA work done by such departments as legal, purchasing, and technology.

The $60,000 would not fund one specific preservation chief or 'czar' as previously described by the mayor's staff when the $60,000 was assigned to the mayor's 2011 budget. The funds would be split among departments, according to Puleo.

In outlining the CPC's vote in a May 13 report, (Cont'd On Page 15)

Quincy Center Plans On Channel 5's Chronicle

Historic Quincy Center and the City's vision for redeveloping downtown was set to be featured Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 5 "Chronicle" program about the cities and towns along the MBTA's Greenbush Line.

Chronicle spent time touring Quincy Center, interviewing business owners and Mayor Thomas Koch about the history of downtown, its potential, and the plans now in the works for a $1 billion private investment in the coming years.

The program is described on the Channel 5's website as: "Tonight, JC Monahan hops aboard the Greenbush commuter line to sample the sights from South Station to the South Shore."

The program comes as negotiations between the Koch administration and developer Street-Works LLC are continuing to negotiate what is called a Land Disposition Agreement, which will set the financial terms of the development plan.

"We are working hard moving forward with this historic project, and people are paying attention to the potential that Quincy Center holds," said Mayor Koch.

The American War for Independence would last for five more years.

Quincy's 'Changing' Electorate

Quincy's electorate appears to be changing. Or has it?

So far this calendar year, all three major parties -- Democrat, Republican and Independent (unenrolled) -- are down compared to last December. As of June 16, the overall number of registered voters in Quincy has dipped nearly 900 since Dec. 30, the last reporting period before the special election for U.S. Senate in January.

Recent figures show Quincy has 55,112 registered voters; that's down 891 from the 56,003 who were eligible to vote in the Martha Coakley-Scott Brown Senate election.

Of those 55,112 registered voters, Independents still lead the way with 25,309. Democrats are second with 24,047 and Republicans remain third with 5,431.

So, in one instance, the overall composition of the electorate hasn't changed. It's still Independents, Democrats and Republicans running one, two, three respectively.

However, there are some trends worth noting.

Local Democrats lost the most registered voters over the last six months -- 694 since Dec. 30. Republicans lost 138 and Independents only 75 during that same time.

Which begs the question: is the shift towards Independents strengthening while Democrats and Republicans are in decline?

It's a small sampling but it looks that way when you look at the figures of registered voters who have changed their affiliation since December. Those figures are more telling.

According to the Quincy Election Office, some 382 registered voters changed their affiliation following Scott Brown's stunning victory for U.S. Senate in January. The vast majority of those who switched became Independents.

Here's the breakdown:

- Democrat to unenrolled -- 282 or 73.8 percent.
- Republican to unenrolled -- 55 or 14.3 percent.
- Democrat to Republican -- 29 or 7.5 percent.
- Republican to Democrat -- 16 or 4.1 percent.

Clearly, the shift is toward unenrolled. And perhaps one of the factors in that shift is the gubernatorial candidacy of former City Councillor and State Treasurer Tim Cahill. Cahill, who was a longtime Democrat, switched to unenrolled last summer to wage an Independent run for governor this fall. His decision to drop from the Democratic ranks may have spurred other supporters to do the same.

It's no secret some well-known Democrats in the city support Cahill -- either publicly or privately -- over Republican Charlie Baker and incumbent Gov. Deval Patrick, a Democrat. But they're remaining in the Democratic Party.

But other registered voters may have joined the unenrolled ranks as a show of solidarity. If Cahill's an Independent, I'll become one too, the thinking goes.

Another well-known longtime Democrat -- former mayor James Sheets -- changed to unenrolled in February. So did his wife, Joann. Sheets officially announced his candidacy this week for Congress in the 10th District running as an Independent. Perhaps Sheets entry in the election for Congress could prompt other registered Democrats to become Independents, too.

There's possibly another reason why the unenrolled numbers have seen a slight uptick at the expense on the Democratic and Republican parties.

Those who switched to unenrolled may have wanted the ability to sign nomination papers for either a Republican or a Democratic candidate looking to get on the ballot this fall. (For example, if you're a registered Republican, you can't sign papers for a Democratic candidate. And vice versa. However, unenrolled voters may sign nomination papers for any candidate -- Republican, Democrat on Independent.)

Of course, it could also be the "Brown factor." Democrats who supported Brown over Coakley may have become disenfranchised with the Democratic party and feel more comfortable calling themselves Independents than switching to another major party (Republican.)

We'll see if this trend toward "independence" continues as the election season proceeds through the summer and into the fall.

AVID WALKER Frank McCauley marked one milestone -- 23,000 miles on April 23 -- and expects to reach another one this fall: another 1,000 miles for the 24,000-mile plateau.

FORMER MAYOR and avid walker Frank McCauley expects to mark a milestone this fall: he should reach 24,000 miles by foot.

His walking odyssey started in January, 1997 when McCauley retired from his full-time job at the State Retirement Department and he began walking on a daily basis. He also decided to keep track of the miles he walked each day.

The first year (1997) he logged 904 miles. In 1998 he walked 1,350 miles. Frank set a goal at the end of 2001 that he would walk at least 2,000 miles in 2002. He reached that goal in October and went on to achieve a total of 2,345 for the year.

His best year to date was 2,650 miles in 2006. His best month recorded in 2006 was 300 miles walked in October.

Frank reached the 20,000 mile mark on Sept. 16, 2008 and shortly after set his final walking goal: to walk the equivalent miles of walking around the earth at the Equator.

The circumference of the earth at the Equator is approximately 25,000 miles (depending where it is measured.) Frank reached the 23,000 mile mark on April 23 of this year and expects to reach 24,000 miles in the fall; and the 25,000 mile mark next spring.

Frank celebrated his 80th birthday this past December and attributes his good health in part to his daily regimen of walking.

Scenes From Yesterday

PUMPING STATION, NUT ISLAND, HOUGH'S NECK, QUINCY, MASS.

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view of the first Metropolitan Sewerage Plant on Nut Island at the end of Houghs Neck. Built in 1901 this facility served as a screen house at the end of a new 17-mile long sewer pipe. Towns from Framingham to Quincy fed raw sewerage into the pipe and debris caught in the screens here was burned. The rest emptied into the harbor through an underwater outfall pipe. The result was a harbor filled with floating sewage and an obnoxious stench, although it apparently didn't keep these three young ladies from taking a walk. After 50 years of this intolerable situation, a new plant was built here to treat the sewerage with chlorine before discharge. Other than its benefits to the flounder fishing industry for a number of years that solution was a failure. Even the flounder grounds were eventually destroyed by the sewage. Now more than 50 years later, there is again a new facility at this location, but the sewerage now is passed on to a high technology treatment plant at Deer Island where it is discharged nine miles out as almost pure water. Although there is still an MWRA plant here, after 100 years Nut Island has become a landscaped park for joggers, strollers and fishermen. And, recent reports indicate the flounder have decided to come back. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy Beaches And Coastal Commission Publishes 5th Edition

Quincy Beach Guide 'A Labor Of Love'

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy Beach Guide has been a labor of love for Leo Kelly and the other members of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission since its first printing five years ago.

Now, with the 2010 edition out for a month, Kelly, the commission chairman, is anxious to get the word spread that the city's 13 beaches are the cleanest they've been in years.

"We want to promote the beaches and where they are," said Kelly. "I have a commitment to myself to get the word out that the water is clean and swimmable."

"A lot of people don't think it's clean. I'd say the beaches are as clean now as when the Indians were around."

The cover of the guide is illustrated with a painting done by Beechwood Knoll third-grader John Walsh. His painting of a seal on a rock, overlooking the surf, was chosen as the winning illustration in a cover contest for grades 3-5 in the Quincy Schools. Alisa Tam, a fifth-grader at the Bernazani was the runner-up and Clifford J. Marshall third-grader Cindy Trac took third place.

Kelly first presented the idea to Mayor James Sheets was in office and he took to it immediately. Mayors William Phelan and Thomas Koch have also supported the publication. "The mayors have been very supportive," Kelly said. "We can't thank them enough."

In his greeting inside the beach guide, Koch praised the commission for its work and promotion of the city's beaches. "This is a truly wonderful time of year, and I strongly encourage all of our residents to take advantage of our 12 City beaches and, of course, Wollaston Beach," Koch wrote. "The Beaches and Coastal Commission and the Friends of Wollaston Beach work incredibly hard to improve our beaches every year, and thanks to their great work, we continue to see a tremendous resurgence in the quality and number of visitors to our beaches."

The Beach Commission, which was formed in 1989 under Mayor Sheets, "is committed to restore, conserve, protect and enhance resources of the Quincy coastline," according to its mission statement.

The guide itself is loaded with information on Quincy's beaches, along with a tide chart for the summer months, safety tips for boaters, fishing tips, water safety information and maps of the beaches and harbor islands.

There are also photos of the 2009 Germantown Beach Bash, 2010 John Hancock Plunge and "Beach Scenes of Yore" on the back cover of old photos from years past.

There is a strong demand for the beach guide every year, from residents and tourists alike. More than 5,000 of them are printed and distributed in local stores and other establishments including Tony's Clam Shop, Tony's Clam Box, Bernie's General Store, Adams Shore Market, Palmer Street Market, the Historical Society and Thomas Crane Library.

Kelly said the commission tweaks the guide from year to year, but the main content doesn't change dramatically. "It's so popular the way it is we just keep updating it," said Kelly. "We work on it all year. People make suggestions about what to put in it. We're adding to it all the time."

Kelly likes the reaction he gets when he brings the guides into stores to drop off. "We bring them in the stores and people pull them out of your hands," he said with a laugh.

Hospital Rebounding From Fiscal Woes, New Director Says

By FRANK MCCAULEY

In a positive, upfront and upbeat presentation, Quincy Hospital's new director told the City Council that the hospital is rebounding from last year's financial woes while embarking upon a new image-enhancing program.

Last year the hospital operated with a $4 million deficit. Some 200 employees had to be laid off. Officials said the deficit was caused by a decrease in the number of patients and slow reimbursements from various public insurance programs.

Hospital Director Ellen Zane said the hospital's financial future "is a hard road to hoe. However, my feeling is that we have everything at the hospital to brag about - the highest caliber of physicians and technology," she told city councilors.

SHEETS RETURNS TO WASHINGTON FOR DOWNTOWN FUNDING

Mayor James A. Sheets returned to Washington, DC with the hope of securing $250,000 to $500,000 in federal funding for the city's downtown revitalization effort.

Sheets visited the nation's capital two weeks ago with several other city leaders in search of federal assistance. He was scheduled to meet with Connie Harriman, Under Secretary of the Interior. Congressman Brian Donnelly and Senator Ted Kennedy were also invited to attend the meeting.

Mayor Sheets is focusing on tourism as a key component to the downtown revitalization effort. In fact, the mayor believes Quincy can capitalize on its history and become the second biggest tourist destination in the state, right after Boston.

Wollaston Beach Friends Receive Grant

The non-profit organization Save the Harbor/Save the Bay recently awarded the Friends of Wollaston Beach a $3,750 grant to support beach programming this summer.

The grant will allow the Friends of Wollaston Beach to build on past achievements with this year's Kids Fest. The 4th annual event will continue to bring families and visitors to celebrate Wollaston Beach and will feature a chalk festival, amateur sand castles, a moon bounce, DJ, and arts-related vendors.

The Friends of Wollaston Beach were among 11 groups awarded grants in support of 35 free public events in nine Boston Harbor region beachfront communities from Nahant to Nantasket. In all, the non-profit organization awarded $30,500 in grants.

"It was the Metropolitan Beaches Commission that inspired the birth of the Friends of Wollaston Beach, but it has been the Save the Harbor grants that have inspired and sustained their growth," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

This year's "Better Beaches" events will include beachfront concert series, kite festivals, sand sculpting competitions, beachside art shows, environmental education programs, family fun nights and reading programs, volleyball tournaments and several beach festivals.

Boston Scientific $55M Investment At Marina Bay

assessed on the $30 million in new improvements. The original agreement executed in 1997 allowed a 16% tax break on improvements to the property for 20 years from 1998 through 2018.

The program offers real estate tax breaks only on a company's property improvements provided the company's upgrades meet certain criteria, such as job creation or energy upgrades.

Upgrades will include storm mitigation work, new roofing, flooring, electrical and mechanical updates, according to Edward Zielinski, Vice President of Real Estate and Global Facilities, who said the robotics will not replace any employees.

On Tuesday, Mayor Thomas Koch praised the vote and the TIF agreement as "the economic engine for the entire region."

"Quincy is making a strong statement that we will not just wait for an economic turnaround to come to us. We are charting our own course and it is being recognized."

Not only did the mayor and councillors welcome the prospect of new jobs for construction workers but so, too, did Harry Brett, Business Agent for the Plumbers and Gasfitters Local Union No. 12.

Brett told councillors that 30% to 50% of local construction workers are unemployed and eager for work and company officials agreed to favor union firms.

Once the new work is underway, the property at 500 Commander Shea Blvd. is expected to increase in assessed value from the current $31 million to $55 million in 2011 to over $65 million in 2018, according to projections provided by Nick Puleo, Director of Municipal Finance Department.

With the improvements, the company will pay more

Koch Sees TIF Pacts Attracting Developers

Tax breaks offered to Boston Scientific Corp. are part of the city's successful strategy to attract major developers, according to Mayor Thomas Koch.

"We are charting our own course," Koch said Tuesday after congratulating City Council for approving tax breaks for Boston Scientific.

Koch noted that similar agreements helped bring than $10 million in taxes over the eight-year period, a boost to city revenues of nearly a half million dollars a year or $4 million from 2011 to 2018.

During that same period, Boston Scientific will be saving an average of $350,000 a year in new taxes or approximately $3 million over the eight-years left in the TIF agreement as well as savings on personal property taxes.

The new agreement "does not extend the number of years," Puleo assured councillors when he introduced the proposal, noting that taxes will never be based on "less than the current value."

However, the new robotic equipment will not be taxed as "personal property is tax-exempt in all TIF agreements," said Puleo.

In addition, Boston Scientific plans on five full-time company hires or the equivalent, increasing its employee count in Marina Bay to over 450 and guaranteeing a total of 375 employees through 2018.

Over 100 of the employees at Marina Bay are Quincy residents, according to Edward Zielinski, Vice President of Real Estate and Global Facilities, for the firm headquartered in Natick.

Robert MacIntyre, Director, and attorney Harold Da-

BlueFin Robotics to the former Quincy shipyard where the New England Aquarium will, also, be opening a holding facility.

In addition, Koch cited the economic agreement that allowed upgrades of HarborSouth Towers in North Quincy.

As a result, Koch said hundreds of workers from the state's Office of Health and Human Services will be employed at that location.

vis accompanied Zielinski who is overseeing the project's bidding.

"The Commonwealth is very diligent in regard to promises made through TIF," Puleo said in describing enforcement procedures and explaining that his office is charged with local oversight.

Prior to Boston Scientific, the property housed an empty warehouse vacated by Jordan Marsh Co.

"The piece of property had been empty for eight or nine years," recalled Councilor Michael McFarland who said that homeless people hung around the site and slept in the warehouse.

Prior to the vote, McFarland urged speedy passage of the proposal, stating the company enhanced the property and Quincy would be keeping a very important international firm.

During the council discussions, Councilors Brian McNamee, Ward 6; Doug Gutro, Ward 5, and Margaret Laforest, Ward 1, all noted that the building is located on waterfront property.

The site, a portion of a World War II Naval air base, skirts Dorchester Bay, is a neighbor to the Marina Bay development and abuts the Neponset River, and Squantum Point Park.

"The stakes are high," said McNamee, describing the locale as unique and valuable.

However, Zielinski said part of the parcel had been offered for sale but there was no interest.

Gutro asked company officials to explore a river walkway and to reassess the chain link fence that bars walkers' access to the waterfront.

"We would be open to meeting with them," Zielinski said of Gutro's suggestion that he meet with leaders of the local wards and of Quincy Environmental Network.

Quincy Police, Middle Schools Wrap Up Another Successful Year

Police Officers and Teachers teamed up again this year to provide educational and athletic programs to middle school students.

Earlybird basketball programs were held at 3 middle schools, with Officer Jay Borden at Broad Meadows, Officer Ryan Donnelly at Atlantic and Lt. Dan Minton at Central.

Officer Kristen Bowes helped out with the Point-basketball team as well as after school activities. Sgt. Patrick Faherty did the same at Sterling.

Academically, the Quincy Police Department and middle school counselors provided "Anti-bullying" seminars at Central and Broad Meadows. Officers presenting the material were Detectives Karyn Barkas and John Menz.

These are just some examples of the police/school partnership working together for the betterment of Quincy public school students.

Grill Safety - A Reminder

What's the summer time without an article on grill safety? A reminder is vital. Owners come and go, while tenants do so as well, grills come and go while recommendations on their use is essential.

History seems to indicate that our efforts in highlighting safe grill use, both propane and charcoal, reduce the number of accidental fires. The frequencies of fires upon decks, extending to more of the residential structure are less evident than these fires were 16 years ago. I believe education on safe grill use has had much to do with this improvement.

Over the years, we have encouraged landlords to include within their lease agreements, that grills cannot be used on balconies or decks. Condo trustees have been encouraged to include similar precautions in their bylaws.

Just today I spoke with a new building owner informing him of our concerns while suggesting possible future remedies. So the problem is dynamic, and requires frequent revisiting, to highlight precautions and concerns.

The Quincy Fire Department recommends a grill be used at ground level, at least 10 feet away from both sources of ignition and potential combustibles such as wood siding, decks railings, etc. We prefer they not be left unattended while in use as well. Considering the close proximity of some houses within this community, be mindful of wind conditions and smoke migration.

A fire in a deck can easily smolder undetected, or ignite vegetation hidden below. Either way, long after the meal is over and all is presumed safe, a fire can extend into structural members while occupants are left unaware.

The worse financial loss due to fire in recent history occurred when a fire began on a balcony. A grill did not cause it, but a grill fire could just as easily have caused the resulting damage. The fire extended vertically upward along the combustible exterior of the building entering the building at a higher elevation causing considerable damage throughout. The loss was well over a million dollars while the building was then posted uninhabitable, leaving tenants seeking alternate living arrangements for well over a year. Is the convenience of a grill on a balcony worth that price? Property loss, possessions lost, a building left uninhabitable and risk to occupants and firefighters. Should a grill catch fire on a balcony, it can be fed by the natural availability of air surrounding it and the vertical access to the outside of a building where heat and flames will naturally extend.

So please...don't take their use for granted, and embrace sound fire safe precaution. Use them a safe distance from combustibles, do not leave them unattended and keep children and pets safe.

Thank you for doing so.

City Council Briefs

Year-End Transfers Of $512,073 Approved

City Council Monday approved $512,073 in year-end transfers as requested by Mayor Thomas Koch. The funds from Medical Insurance, Communications, and Snow and Ice Maintenance will cover shortfalls in a dozen accounts with the highest amount of $180,000 required for the Medicare Assessment and $130,000 for Solicitor Contractual.

The remaining ten transfers are the following: $1,800 to Mayor Personnel Services, $15,000 to Municipal Finance, $26,500 to Assessors Personnel, and $24,000 to Drain Services.

Also, $5,000.Celebrations; $46,118, to Snow and Ice Overtime, $19,055 for Furnace Brook Golf Course, $45,000 Information Technology.

State Elections Set For Sept. 14, Nov. 2
City Council Monday voted dates for the fall elections with the primaries scheduled Tuesday, Sept. 14 and the regularly election, Tuesday, Nov. 2.

There will be no changes in the assignment of the city's 30 precincts and polling places as noted by City Clerk Joseph Shea.

However, Shea said that change is likely ahead for poll designations in 2013 when the federal census will be certified and he expects the city's total count will exceed 90,000, but not reach 100,000.

Once the census is finalized, the city must redistrict its wards and Shea believes that Wards 1, and Ward 6 will remain untouched but other wards particularly Wards 2, 3 and 5 will undergo some revision.

"In a couple of years there may be some significant changes," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond noting it's often controversial. Raymond said he has always lived in the same neighborhood, but has been assigned to three wards in his lifetime.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, June 16, at approximately 1 a.m., Officer Sean Glennon was on duty in a marked cruiser monitoring traffic in the area of 195 Newport Ave. when he observed a grey pickup traveling southbound with it's headlights out.

The officer pulled out and caught up to the vehicle just south of Elmwood Avenue, where he activated his blue lights to stop the vehicle. The vehicle continued to travel at least one quarter mile at the slow pace of 25 M.P.H. before it finally made a right turn onto Brook Street and stopped.

Officer Glennon's cruiser and the truck were the only two vehicles traveling southbound and there was ample opportunity for the operator to pull to the right as directed. The officer recognized through his training and experience that this action is common for people who possess contraband and/or illegal items, buying time to conceal and/or destroy these items. As the truck stopped, Officer Glennon noted that there were three occupants, with the two passengers moving about and constantly looked back at him. With the car stopped, the officer approached the vehicle and observed the rear seat passenger to be fidgety. When asked for his license, the driver said, "I don't have my license. It's revoked but I'm getting it back real soon."

The officer noted that the passengers were not wearing seatbelts. Officer Glennon observed next to the rear seated passenger an open duffel bag with clothes hanging out of it as if it had been rummaged through. When asked where he was going, the driver said that the owner, who was not present, had too much to drink, so he went out to pick up his two passengers. After questioning the rear seat passenger, Officer Glennon learned that he too had been drinking and did not have a license. He added that he had just been bailed from the Dedham House of Corrections on a charge of possession of cocaine. Based on this information and the actions of the occupants, Officer Glennon called for Officer Jimmy Cassidy, whose K-9 unit is a trained patrol and narcotics detection canine. While awaiting Officer Cassidy's arrival, Officer Glennon conducted criminal record checks on all three occupants. The rear seated passenger had a long history of drug offenses as did the truck's registered owner. During this time, the vehicle's occupants continued to move about and look back at the cruiser.

When Officer Cassidy arrived on scene, Officer Glennon placed the driver under arrest for operating without a license. Officer Cassidy then removed the front seated passenger and immediately observed a needle cap on the floor. All occupants were now out of the vehicle and handcuffed. Since the vehicle was going to be towed, an inventory search of the vehicle per department policy was initiated prior to it being towed.

On the rear passenger's side, the officers saw a needle under the front seat on the floor, in front of where the rear passenger had been sitting. At this time, Officer Glennon read the rear passenger his Miranda rights, which he said he understood and waived. This suspect (#2) stated there was in fact more needles and that he had prescription medication in the car. As the Officers continued to search the vehicle, they found 10 hypodermic needles, alcohol swabs, steel wool and other items commonly used in the preparation and ingestion of I.V. narcotics. They also recovered four cell phones throughout different locations in the car.

The officers recognized that people who sell narcotics at the street level utilize multiple phones to facilitate drug sales. Officer Cassidy then brought his K-9 partner to the vehicle and after a brief search, four white pills identified as Klonopin along with one plastic corner bag of a brown substance believed to be heroin were found. When asked to produce a script for the Klonopin, suspect #2 could not do. The front seated passenger, suspect #3, was asked if there were any other needles or drugs in the car, she stated that she had needles hidden in her bra. Officer Glennon removed the cuffs from her and had her carefully remove the needles. As a result of the events, the driver, suspect #1 was charged with "Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Revoked License (subsequent offense) and Defective Equipment (headlight)." Suspect #2, the rear passenger, was charged with "Possession of Class A (subsequent offense) and Possession of Class C (subsequent offense)." He was previously convicted of "Possession of a Class A Substance" in Dorchester District Court in April 2006 as well as Possession of a Class A & B Substances in Salem District Court in January 2009. Suspect #3 was not arrested since she was only in possession of needles. All this because of a failure to put headlights on. Nice Work!

At Neponset River Bridge Project Site

Patrick Promotes Long-Term Economic Recovery

By JOE REARDON

With traffic creeping across the Neponset Bridge as the backdrop, Gov. Deval Patrick last Thursday spoke of his Massachusetts Works program to promote long-term economic recovery for the state.

The Neponset River Bridge project falls under Patrick's Accelerated Bridge Program (APB), which includes $3 billion for projects around the state. The repairs and improvements to the current Neponset Bridge, which connects North Quincy with Dorchester, have a cost of $35 million.

"The Neponset River Bridge is a lifeline for tens of thousands of commuters and another example of how we are committed to making up for the decades of neglect facing our roads and bridges," said Patrick. "We have more public work projects going on than ever before."

"I'm delighted to visit the Neponset Bridge project today."

The Neponset River Bridge Phase II project includes a complete deck replacement designed to last 75 years. Pedestrian and bicycle access will be included as part of the project.

The Massachusetts Department of Traffic will look at a plan to provide a third northbound lane across a large portion of the bridge for the weekday morning commute.

"The Neponset River Bridge is a vital artery to Boston, not only for Quincy, but for the entire South Shore," said Mayor Thomas

Koch. "We are delighted to see the progress being made on the project."

As a result of the Accelerated Bridge Program, structurally deficient bridges in the state have dropped from 543 to 494 since 2008. Thirteen bridges have already been completed with 62 slated to begin by the end of the year. In all, over 200 bridges will have active construction.

Senator Mike Morrissey said the Neponset Bridge project has been a long time coming. "It was posing a danger to the public and that was recognized by the administration," he said.

The projects have generated 20,000 jobs, 50 on the Neponset Bridge construction. "These aren't abstractions," said Patrick. "These are real jobs, real problems and real families."

DOT Secretary Jeff Mullen praised Patrick for his initiative and vision with the Accelerated Bridge Program. "Governor Patrick has done more for transportation policies in the last 3-1/2 years than any governor in my lifetime," he said. "We are not only repairing one of our most important and busiest bridges but are doing so while working very closely with state and city officials to manage traffic as efficiently as possible in order to reduce the impact on commuters and area residents during the construction period."

Investment in roads and bridges have grown from a combined total of $515 million in fiscal year 2007 to than 10,000 jobs on 285 projects across Massachusetts.

Sheets Launches Independent Bid For Congress

of Quincy since moving to the city in August 1953. In 1973, he was first elected to the Quincy City Council and represented Ward 4 for 16 years, including two years as council president. He was also elected to a two-term stint in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

In 1989, Sheets was elected mayor and served as the city's highest ranking public official for the next 12 years. He was re-elected five times and lost a bid for his seventh term to challenger William Phelan by 17 votes in 2001, the closest mayoral election in Quincy history.

In his announcement, Sheets lashed out at the Democratic leadership in Washington which, in his opinion, "has made it clear that they will continue to spend not only our money, but also money they don't have."

"This reckless spending has to stop," Sheets continued. "The national debt stands at $13 trillion and according to the Congressional Budget Office our debt will continue to increase at the rate of $1 trillion each year for the next 10 years."

"In this year's federal budget 42 cents of every dollar spent by the Democratic leadership will be borrowed. No family could manage their household budget by borrowing 42 cents on every dollar, and neither should Congress," Sheets said.

"Only the American people can stop this free spending madness, but it must be stopped at the ballot box."

Sheets also called the Democratic party leadership "free spenders who are planning to take advantage of the Gulf Disaster by passing Cap & Trade."

"Who will pay for this expensive renewable energy? American families. Obama's own Treasury Department estimates the cost will reach $3,000 per year for a family of four in just 10 years, an increase of $300 in new taxes and energy fees each year."

Sheets was also highly critical of President Obama's healthcare reform bill that was passed by Congress earlier this year. He called the bill "a hoax."

"Congressmen touted the health plan would be a 'boon to the country's economy.' They indicated that it would reduce the federal deficit by $1.3 trillion. But of course," Sheets said, "they didn't count the 'doc-fix' which will cost $267 billion; they left out the annual $115 billion cost to hire a bureaucracy to manage the 100 newly created commissions and committees, created to run healthcare and the 18,000 auditors who will have to be hired by the IRS to police those who do not buy healthcare."

"So much for truth." Sheets this election cycle is about "American people working to take their country back. We do not want an American brand of European socialism that creates 100 percent unemployment as an annual standard. This is our country, it does not belong to Congress, if we fail to take it back, shame on us."

Insurance STRATEGIES
by Jim Sullivan

ARE YOU PAYING TOO MUCH FOR AUTO INSURANCE?

A functioning smoke detector can save lives. Be sure to have a smoke detector on each floor of your home and replace the batteries annually. A fire extinguisher, particularly in the kitchen, is also important. If you have questions about home insurance, please call JAMES J. SULLIVAN INSURANCE AGENCY at 617-328-8600. We offer insurance policies for homes, condos, townhouse, and autos. Our agents and customer service representatives provide prompt claim processing in the event of a loss. We are located at 151 Hancock Street.

Because of the potential it holds to cause serious injury and take life, no peril is dreaded more by homeowners than a home fire. According to the most recent statistics available, more than 400,000 homes were involved in house fires in 2008, resulting in the injury of about 13,500 people and more than 2,700 deaths. Perhaps more alarming is the fact that many of these fires were preventable. The fact is that homeowners who live in dwellings without functioning smoke detectors are nearly nine times more likely to be injured than those who have detectors. Moreover, a study conducted in 2008 shows that 20 percent of smoke detectors had dead or disconnected batteries within nine months of their installation.

NOTE: Homeowners are strongly urged to check the batteries in their smoke detectors twice a year and to replace detectors after ten years.

Police Arrest 2, Seize $21,000 In Heroin

Quincy Police put a big dent in the availability of heroin on the city streets after two arrests on June 18 yielded a significant seizure of heroin and $21,000.

Arielle McKenna, 20, of 67 Brooks Road, Quincy, was arrested and charged with possession with intent to distribute class A Heroin, possession of class E pills and conspiracy to violate drug laws. Also arrested was Luis Pina-Suarez, 27, of New York, NY. He was charged with possession with intent to distribute class A Heroin and conspiracy to violate drug laws.

According to the police report, the drug control unit executed two search warrants on June 18 at 11:30 a.m. The investigation spread from a motor vehicle to the President City Motel in West Quincy. The warrants were the culmination of investigations focused on the illegal sales of heroin throughout the city. Detectives with the drug control unit were successful in disbanding the base of operations.

Also seized were the customer lists consisting of names, addresses and monies owed. The suspects' cell phones were continuously ringing with people looking to buy heroin. Additional arrests are anticipated, police said.

Residents are asked to call the Quincy Police Drug Control Unit Hotline at (617) 328-4527 to report any activity they believe to be narcotic related.

LYONS TURNING MILL offers a glimpse into the past when Quincy supplied granite columns for courts and state houses across the country. This year, the Community Preservation Committee designated a $100,000 grant for the mill's preservation. The Stone Cutters Museum and the city will oversee the grant.

Chairman Steve Perdios stated, "The CPC supports the use of $60,000 in salary for a staff member to administer projects under the jurisdiction of the various departments with the City of Quincy and to support the work of the CPC. The money should come from the CPC administrative accounts."

"It is essential to have a point person," said Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest who described the need for one salaried person to oversee CPC applications and projects.

Laforest recalled her work for historic projects and the difficulty of tracking plans and awards.

In addition, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro asked that the CPC prioritize the acquisition of Glendale Park in the Hospital Hill section, through future awards. Gutro noted that the public is restricted from using the park as its current owner, Quincy Medical Center, fears liability claims.

Gutro asked that the city open negotiations get an appraisal and pursue public access to the park that was given away to the hospital, "Let us begin now."

In the afternoon, the residents celebrated with a patriotic concert and a sing-a-long with each resident receiving an American flag and pin thanking them for their service to our country. THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Is It Time to Make Home Improvements

Q: I've been holding off on redoing the bathrooms in my house because of worries about the economy and whether my wife and I would be laid off. Now we're in a disagreement: She wants to redo the bathrooms, but I still don't want to risk spending money. What do you think? Is it worth it? — Worried in Washington state

A: Well, the home-improvement industry is anxious to have you believe that it's time to take the plunge and spend money on home renovations. DiggersList says that industry estimates point to homeowners in the U.S. spending twice as much money this year — $270 billion — on remodeling projects as they did in 2009.

That's all well and good, but the story is different for each homeowner. If you're not sure about your company's situation and whether you'll continue to be gainfully employed in the near future, yeah, you may want to hold off.

At the same time, some renovations just need to get done. If there is a functional problem with the bathrooms — the plumbing needs work, the bathtub or toilet is leaking — then spend some money. If it's more cosmetic, talk it over with the wife, and sit down together to figure out how much money you are both comfortable spending on the renovation.

You could compromise by redoing just one bathroom this year, and the other bathroom next year. Or you could both promise not to splurge on unnecessary items like gold-plated fixtures. But creating a renovation budget and working together to come in at or under the limit will help break the impasse.

HOME TIP: The cost of a bathroom renovation varies widely depending on several factors, but can be as low as $6,500. (Source: doityourself.com)

Bank of Canton also received a Special Achievement Award for being the Top Minority Lender for the fourth consecutive year. In 2009, Bank of Canton originated 492 MassHousing mortgages worth $110.5 million overall including 70 mortgages to minorities worth $14.1 million.

"Bank of Canton is honored to be recognized once again by MassHousing with these prestigious awards for our steadfast commitment to making affordable and sustainable home mortgages available to Massachusetts residents of diverse economic and social backgrounds,"

"We're proud to be associated with MassHousing; an outstanding organization that offers the innovative products and outstanding support the Bank needs to meet the home financing needs of so many of our customers. Congratulations to George DeMello, Senior Vice President of Residential Lending, and his team of dedicated mortgage bankers for their outstanding performance and commitment."

Make Your Home Your Summer Getaway

(ARA) - Summer is a time to take long weekends, enjoy the pleasant weather and make new memories with family and friends. It's also a time to take a moment for yourself and find ways to savor that relaxing vacation feeling.

With just a few quick and affordable changes to your decor, you can transform your home into a calming and restful place to spend the summer:

- Roll up the rugs and clean and store them for the summer
- Put light-colored canvas slipcovers on dark upholstered furniture

holstered furniture

- Change throw pillows to summery patterns/colors
- Put away knick-knacks for a lighter, more minimalist feeling

- Place Scentsy wickless candles in living areas to add a fresh, summer scent without the heat and open flame of traditional candles

"Summer scents allow us to draw upon wonderful memories and emotions, like the first time you dipped your toes in the ocean and felt the sand, or the smell of wonderful summer desserts like peach cobbler being served at a picnic," says Heidi Thompson, co-owner of Scentsy. "Your home should be your retreat, and with different summer scents, every day can feel like a summer vacation."

Some scents that evoke a summer feel according to Thompson are:

- A light floral fragrance is great way to keep your home smelling fresh and clean every day.
- A citrusy scent that features hints of oranges, lemons, limes and grapefruit helps bring a tropical feel to any living room, even in the most humid environments.
- The scent of a fruity tart treat fills your home with fragrance without the added calories or need to turn on the hot oven.

To fill your home with these summer scents, all you have to do is select one of Scentsy's decorative ceramic warmers, place some of the specially formulated scented wax into the dish, plug it in and turn it on. A low watt light bulb melts the wax at low temperatures to release the candle fragrance into the air.

In just a few minutes and for just a few dollars, you can create a summer retreat at home.

21 Local Businesses To Participate In Healthy Workplace Challenge

Twenty-one Quincy businesses, representing 39 teams and 190 employees, are lacing up their sneakers for the "Healthy Workplace Challenge", a six-week fitness and wellness program that focuses on developing a healthy lifestyle in the workplace.

The Challenge began Monday and will run through July 30. It is being sponsored by the Quincy Health, Beauty & Wellness League (HBW League), a subcommittee of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

Quincy Chamber members formed teams of up to five employees and created fun team names, like "Six Lbs. Under" from Keohane Funeral Home and "Thin It to Win It" from Massachusetts Financial Services.

Each team was assigned a personal trainer from the Fitness Factor, South Shore YMCA or SuperFitness that will coach them during the six-week program. In addition to the fitness component, participants also received blood pressure, glucose and cholesterol screenings from Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, Manet Community Health Center and Quincy Medical Center.

"The focus is not solely on weight loss. It is about increasing one's overall health and well-being," said Donna Mavromates, Director of Marketing for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. "We are excited to see this number of employers and employees wanting to de-

Impact Quincy To Present Results Of Successful Collaboration To Prevent Opioid Overdose

Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, will present the findings of a grant to address the growing public health crisis of opioid overdose Friday, June 25 from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy.

In Massachusetts, opioid overdose poisonings are rising at an alarming rate, with the city of Quincy ranking 7th among impacted communities. The most commonly abused opioids include Percocet®, Vicodin®, OxyContin®, and heroin. To address the problem, a city-wide coalition led by Mayor Tom Koch and Impact Quincy, has spent the last two years developing and implementing a clear and successful strategy to educate those directly involved in opioid addiction. These include first responders, medical providers, community organizations and families of active users.

The timely use of Narcan®, a non-narcotic drug which can reverse the effect of opioid overdose, is an integral part of the education and training.

"Apart from the obvious human loss and suffering that this issue causes," Koch said, "we know that this crisis not only drains lives from the community but also critical resources such as police and medical personnel who intervene in overdose emergencies and are therefore unavailable for non-drug related issues across the city."

In the Impact Quincy-led collaboration, which is funded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, there are an unprecedented number of members engaged in the seminal work of the effort. City departments such as police and fire, service providers such as Quincy Medical Center, Fallon Ambulance Company, Quincy District Court, social service agencies and community residents are all part of this initiative to identify and address instances of opioid overdose.

Confirmed speakers include Mayor Koch, Commissioner John Auerbach, Mass. Department of Public Health; Alexander Whalley, MD, medical director of the Boston Public Health Commission Narcotic Addiction Clinic, and Nancy and Steven Holler, Quincy parents.

THE PAIN EPIDEMIC

A national group of experts recently reported that the number of people suffering from chronic pain in the United States is more than 70 million. Chronic pain may be defined as persistent/recurring pain that lasts more than three to six months past the norm for an acute injury/illness. In fact, chronic pain may endure for months and years after the experience of an injury because it can alter the brain and the central nervous system's perception of pain. While some chronic pain patients may be helped by a medical model that focuses on disease diagnosis and treatment, others may be better helped by chiropractic treatment that addresses ambiguous causes and helps clear nerve pathways.

Doctors of Chiropractic are not only trained in problems dealing with chronic pain, but are formally educated in clinical examination and diagnosis of the entire human body. Through the use of conservative, non-surgical, drug-free care, the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC provides chiropractic treatment from acute symptomatic relief to wellness care. 3rd Base Dugout Now 'Ray Cattaneo Dugout'

Raymond Cattaneo Honored At Adams Field

By SEAN BRENNAN

Generations of future ballplayers in Quincy, from this day forward, will now sit in the confines of a third base dugout at Adams Field that recognizes the dedication and devotion of Quincy's "Mr. Baseball."

Family, friends, current and former players and local politicians came out to Adams Field last Friday evening to honor, once again, Raymond Cattaneo, the legendary manager of Morrisette Legion Post. Cattaneo, in a pregame ceremony before Morrisette played Quincy Legion, was bestowed an honor that was much overdue. The third base dugout that he patrolled for four decades was renamed the "Ray Cattaneo Dugout."

Cattaneo finished his distinguished coaching career, a career that began in 1970, with a 609-300 overall record. Included among his many highlights were four trips to the Northeast Regional Finals (1975, 1979, 1992 and 1998), a trip to the American League World Series (1975), two 30-win teams (1975 and 1992), and 32 straight winning seasons.

The ceremony, which included an American Legion color guard, several speakers, including heartfelt words from Mayor Thomas Koch, and Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294 Commander George Bouchard, was a precursor to the unveiling of a permanent signage on the façade of the third base dugout that will honor Cattaneo for decades to come.

With members of his family stationed alongside on the third base line, Cattaneo received his honor, humbly, and after throwing out a ceremonial first pitch, he walked off the field to cheers, giving way to the young ballplayers of Morrisette and Quincy Legion.

Friday night baseball under the lights at Adams Field meant more to him than any individual accolade.

Mayor Koch summed up Raymond Cattaneo's impact on the City of Quincy best when he said:

"It is certainly an honor and a pleasure for me to be with you here tonight to dedicate the third base dugout to a man that needs no introduction... I have known him for many years and had the privilege of working with him at the Park Department, he broke me in, and I succeeded him. I learned an awful lot about life from Ray, as I know a number of former players here tonight have as well.

"He is a wonderful husband, loyal and faithful father, grandfather, obviously "Mr. Baseball" and I think it is truly a great honor tonight for Ray and his family, but in many ways we are honoring the game of baseball and honoring the City of

"So Ray, we thank you for all your service to the city. The impact you had on so many young men, the impact you had on the city in general with all your charity work, association with Morrisette Legion, and so many other endeavors... so Ray we say thank you, we love you, and we honor you tonight."

After more kind words from George Bouchard, Commander of Morrisette Post #294, and a presentation of a certificate of appreciation from the Post, Cattaneo and his family, along with Koch and Bouchard, made their way to the third base dugout where the plaque was revealed from underneath a sheet. Following the playing of the National Anthem, Ray threw out the first pitch (a perfect strike) and it was time to play ball.

"It was a wonderful night and I am honored that this was done for me," said Cattaneo after leaving the field.

"Mr. Baseball" may no longer man the dugout now named in his honor, but his contributions to the sport of baseball in Quincy will be remembered forever.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH spoke of the impact Raymond Cattaneo has had on the City of Quincy over the years. Koch is joined on the field by (from the left) Kristen Powers, Executive Director Park, Cemetery, and Forestry Department, Ray Cattaneo, and George Bouchard, Commander Morrisette Post #294.

13th Annual Squirrel Run Drew Largest Field Ever

By JOE REARDON

The 13th Annual Squirrel/Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS on June 12 drew its largest field ever with 346 finishers and more than 200 walkers rolling out of Pageant Field for the scenic, 5-mile race.

The race has been a huge fundraiser for ALS with between $440,000-$500,00 collected in the event's 13 years.

Quincy's Patrick Day waged a back-and-forth duel at the front against Adam Little before pulling slightly ahead and crossing the finish line in 28 minutes, 13 seconds. Little was a scant six seconds back with his 28:19. Jack Sullivan was only steps back with his 28:25 for third.

Day's win marked the first victor from Quincy in 10 years.

Jimmy Kennedy succumbed to the disease at the age of 31. His father, Christopher Kennedy, the vice-president of Northeastern and a 25-year member of the Quincy School Committee also died from the disease in 1999.

Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother and Christopher's son, said the money raised has been phenomenal. "Things went tremendously well," Rich said. "It was a fantastic turnout. For a local road race, that's just mind-boggling. It's very near and dear to my heart."

"We've made enormous strides over the past five or six years. We know infinitely more about the disease than we did 10 years ago."

Dorothy Zirkle dominated the women's field with her 30:18. Mary Garrity was second in 30:31 and Holly Madden clinched the bronze medal with her 31:03.

Quincy's own Hassan Haydar owned the 60-and-over division, crossing the finish line in 31:05, more than three minutes in front of runner-up Edward Gardner and his 34:11. Robert Hanna of Quincy took third in 34:35.

John Saville left the 50-59 division behind from the start and pushed to a 29:29 finish. John McGrath was a distant second at 34:21 and Bill Lapsley clinched third at 34:32. Quincy's James McDonough captured third place in the 40-49 division in 30:50. Richard Bagge and Ted Coyle were took first and second in 29:34 and 30:27, respectively.

Quincy had another age group winner in Robert Perkins. With his 32:24, he was a comfortable 26 seconds ahead of Sanjay D'Souza's 32:50. Jonny Walsh grabbed this in 34:42. Quincy's Tyler Aiken was third in 31:42 in the 19-29 division. Grant Klene took first in 30:32 and Ryan O'Mara was just seven seconds back in 30:49, good for second.

Quincy runners captured two of the top three places in the 18-and-under category.

John Green's 30:41 gave him the first-place trophy and fellow City of Presidents competitor Matthew McGue was third in 35:48. Raymond Riggs took home the silver medal as he pushed across the finish line in 32:58.

The women's field was equally competitive. Hometown Joanne Morris finished in 41:11 to win the 60-and-over division and Eleta Klene ran a 41:46 for second. Monique Robitaille finished in 49:45 to crack into the top three. Kathy Finneran (39:31), Elaine Murphy (43:12) and Mari-An Fitzmaurice (48:20) led the way in the 50-59 division. Laurie Nahigian's 33:03 was good enough to earn the win in the 40-49 age group with Nora McCormack taking second at 33:21. Pam Kustas put up a 33:29 for third.

Laura Shubdr was in complete control of the 30-39 division. The Quincy resident's 32:29 put her well ahead of Kara Connerty's 33:14 and Lauren Frazier's 33:52. The Quincy duo of Kate Brennan and Eileen Flaherty went 1-2 in the 19-29 division in 35:15 and 36:18, respectively. Stephanie Buckler pushed hard for the bronze in 37:10. Emily and Julia Bryson took care of business in the 18-and-under category. The Quincy residents went 1-2, respectively, in 33:00 and 36:24. Meg Blatchford's 37:17 put her at third.

Morrisette Defeats Cohasset To Run Record to 3-3

By SEAN BRENNAN

Morrisette Legion dropped a 2-0 decision to Quincy Legion last Friday night at Adams Field, but the team responded with a thrilling, 7-6, come-from-behind extra inning victory over Cohasset Legion on Sunday night.

The win over Cohasset upped Morrisette's overall record to 3-3 with 12 games remaining in the American Legion regular season.

Against Cohasset, starting pitcher Tim Luizzo went 2 2/3 innings, allowing three runs on four hits. He was followed on the mound by Joe Edgerly (2 2/3, three runs) and Kevin Magoon (two innings, four strikeouts, win), and the offense, quiet for most of the game rallied from 6-1 down in the fifth to score five runs with two outs in the sixth inning to send the game into extras tied at 6-6.

Morrisette scored the game-winning run in the eighth when a pitch hit short-stop Colin Ryan.

In the five-run sixth, Matt Rodriguez got the two-out rally started with a single. John Ainsley walked and a double steal put runners on second and third. Lamont Toombs drove in Rodriguez with a single; Mike Stille plated a run with a double, and Joe Alibrandi reached on an error scoring Ainsley. Danny Russell tied the contest at 6-6 with a clutch two-run double.

With one out in the eighth, Stille walked, Alibrandi singled, and Russell reached on an error. Greg Nelson hit into a force at the plate, but Morrisette scored the winning run when a pitch hit Ryan.

Quincy Legion def. Morrisette, 2-0

Following a pregame ceremony honoring legendary Morrisette manager Raymond Cattaneo, Quincy Legion, behind the pitching of Kevin Keith, silenced the Morrisette offense and took advantage of nine walks from Ryan Louis (seven innings, four strikeouts, nine walks) to score two runs and win, 2-0.

Braintree Legion def. Morrisette, 4-2

Braintree scored a run in the fourth and another in the sixth to break a fourth inning

2-2 tie. Morrisette received solid pitching from Joe Alibrandi (3 1/3, three runs, nine strikeouts) and Joe Edgerly (2 2/3, run) in the loss.

After falling behind, 2-0, Morrisette rallied back to even the score in the fourth frame. Lamont Toombs drove in both runs with a double, but Braintree responded and earned the victory.

Morrisette def. Weymouth, 14-4

An offensive explosion backed steady pitching from four pitchers (Danny Russell, Luke Barkowski, Joe Edgerly, and Kevin Magoon) as Morrisette defeated Weymouth, 14-4.

Morrisette scored three runs in the first inning with Ryan Louis (RBI) and John Ainsley (RBI) having great at-bats, scored three runs in the second (Greg Nelson two RBI and Matt Goreham RBI), and four runs in the third. Nelson, Goreham and Louis had RBIs.

The team scored an additional run in the fifth (Ainsley RBI) and sixth (Goreham RBI) to complete the scoring.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
Making things more complicated than they need to be can be a problem for the typically orderly Aries. Try to look for a less intricate way to accomplish the same goals.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
Avoiding personal involvement in a troubling situation might be advisable at this time, especially since you probably don't have all the facts. The weekend brings a surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
A problem with a colleague you thought had been resolved could recur. However, this time you'll be able to rely on your recollections to get a quick resolution in your favor. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
Giving your self-esteem a boost could be a good idea for the Moon Child, who might feel a bit daunted by the week's occurrences. Just focus on all your positive accomplishments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
The "mane" attraction for the Lovable Lion this week is — what else? — love. New relationships move to new levels, while long-standing partnerships are strengthened.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
A recent workplace problem will prove to be one of miscommunication, and once the matter is settled, you should have a better chance of getting your proposals approved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
Good news! After dealing pretty much in the dark with a matter that seemed to be taking forever to resolve, you should soon be seeing the light at the end of the tunnel.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
A positive message should help lift that energy-draining sense of anxiety, and you should soon be able to deal with even the peskiest matter, whether at work or personal.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Try to control that heated Sagittarian temperament while dealing with what you believe to be an unfair matter. A cool approach is the best way to handle things.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
Nursing hurt feelings could keep you from learning what went wrong. Ask your partner, a family member or a trusted friend to help you reassess your actions in the matter.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Nature is dominant this week. Try to spend time outdoors with someone special. An act of kindness in the past might be recalled by a person you believed was out of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
An upcoming career decision could be based on how well you might be able to apply your artistic talents. Be sure to use the finest samples of your work to make a strong impression.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

An old Chinese Proverb states: Deal with the faults of others as gently as with your own . . .

Couldn't it be said that a truly tolerant person is one who does have firm convictions of his own and believes in the finality of these beliefs? Because of these beliefs being very precious to him, he readily recognizes the disposition of other men to do the same.

Yes, true tolerance is a vigorous matter, intellectually defensible and capable of bringing forth much good. Yes, true tolerance is a positive and cordial effort to understand the beliefs, practices and habits of others without sharing or accepting them. Just as no two stars or no two snowflakes are identical so did God make men and women individual personalities with specific temperaments.

"Half the secret of getting along with people is consideration of their views; the other half is tolerance in one's own views." - Daniel Frohman

City Councillors Balk At Backing Expanded Bottle Bill

Opponents: Could Damage The State's Economy; Proponents: Could Curb Waste, Save Money

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors recently rejected a resolution supporting the expansion of the state's bottle bill after acknowledging that plastic litter hurts taxpayers' pocketbooks as well as the environment.

The opponents worried that the current proposal on Beacon Hill covers too many unknowns and could damage the state's economy.

Supporters, such as President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, the resolution's sponsor, cited not only the damage inflicted by thousands of plastic bottles on land and sea, and the high cost of the added trash and litter on taxpayers, but, also, the dangers posed by plastic waste tossed to the roadside.

Coughlin described how two errant plastic water bottle cost the city $175,000 during the March floods.

A couple of plastic bottles in a storm drain clogged water passage in the city's system, caused local flooding and cost the city $175,000 to repair, according to Coughlin. "The pump station was sidelined by two plastic bottles."

Coughlin described the success of the state's current bottle bill, which requires a five-cent deposit on soda, and beer bottles and cans, noted that, to date, "30 billion containers have been redeemed."

While Councillor John Keenan described the piles of plastic water bottles, sports and energy drink bottles tossed under spectator stands after athletic meets or team practices, he opposed council action on the resolution.

Keenan also noted the rows of plastic bottles that lined the banks of Neponset River after the March floods receded.

In May, the Environmental Committee approved the resolution to the delight of more than a dozen Houghs Neck Boy Scouts from Troop 6 who attended that meeting.

Star Scout Ben Brownlaw and Assistant Scoutmaster Brian Laroche led the Scouts.

Laroche said the scouts conduct bottle drives for their projects and often find unredeemable items mixed in with their five-cent cans and bottle haul.

When that happens, the troop recycles the rejects, according to Laroche who recalled, that, at one bottle drive, a donor arrived with a giant pickup truck loaded with empty water bottles.

"People bring them to us and we recycle," said Laroche of the unredeemable bottles.

State legislation, currently being considered, would include juice and water bottles under the same five-cent redemption protocols as soda bottles. However there is major opposition to passage.

Governor Deval Patrick supports the expansion which he estimates could bring several million new dollars into state coffers while reducing waste and litter.

But local union leaders and manufacturers oppose the bill, predicting a costly impact on consumers, manufacturers, and food stores, contending that the environmental gains would be limited.

"We can only conclude that a further expansion of the Bottle Bill will result in further loss of business and that translates into a loss of jobs," concluded a press release from Beverage Workers Local 513.

However, that's not how the leadership of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) views an expanded bottle bill.

In its formal statement, MMA leaders said, "The addition of bottled water, sports drinks, teas, and other 'new age' beverages to the Bottle Bill would decrease the total volume of municipal solid waste that needs to be collected, saving disposal fees and landfill space."

On June 10, councillors sent the resolution back to committee.
